Sir C. WOOD said that with regard to the first question the site selected for the India-office was the best that could be got for temporary offices, if they could not find one in a more quiet locality. With regard to the second question he was afraid he could not say more than he had stated last week, viz., that the 14th Dragoons were on their way home; the 67th had gone to China, the 99th sailed at the beginning of last month; a battalion of the 60th would sail about the second week in February; the 31st and 44th Regiments were to go, and if another regiment went it would be the 87th.

PRESENTATION OF THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY TO THE EARL OF EGLIN.

The Court of Common Council having resolved, on the 10th of June last, that the freedom of the city, in a gold box, value 100 guineas, should be presented to the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., for the services rendered by him to commerce in Canada, China, and Japan, Wednesday, the 1st, was appointed for the ceremony, and a special Court was held for that purpose; the Council chamber being handsomely fitted up for the occasion, and a large number of fashionably attired ladies, besides numerous gentlemen of position in the city, being present, in addition to its usual occupants.

The gold box intended for presentation was placed on a table beneath a glass shade, and attracted universal notice from the beauty of its design and brilliancy of its execution. It is made of 18 carat gold, covered with bouquets of flowers and foliage, intermixed with elaborate piercings, and surmounted by three figures—viz., that of Britannia in the centre, with a Chinese upon her right and a Japanese upon her left hand, in the costumes of their respective countries.

The Common Councilmen, who occupied the body of the Council Chamber, wore their violet gowns, as is usual on State occasions, and the Aldermen their scarlet gowns. The great officers of the corporation also wore their state robes, and sat at a crimson-draped table in the centre of the chamber, while the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and their more illustrious visitors were seated on a crimson-covered dais at the upper end. The visitors included the Countess of Elgin, Lady E. Bruce, Lady Mary N. Hamilton, Miss N. Hamilton, Lady Lucy and Miss Grant, Lady Jane Dundas, Hon. Mrs. Grey, Lord Bruce, the Hon. Robert Bruce, and Major Cumming Bruce, M.P.

The Earl of Elgin, on his arrival, was introduced by Mr. Deputy Harrison as the seconder (Mr. Alderman Cubitt, its mover, being absent) of the following motion, which was read by the Town Clerk, viz.:—

"That the freedom of this city, in a gold box, of the value of 100 guineas, be presented to the Right Hon. the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., in testimony of the high sense entertained of the important services rendered by his lordship to this country and its commerce in Canada, China, and Japan."

Lord Elgin was then presented as a member of the Merchant Taylor's Company, and, having subscribed the usual declaration, was addressed by the City Chamberlain (Mr. B. Scott) in a very complimentary speech, to which his lordship replied with characteristic earnestness.

It was then ordered that the address of the Chamberlain and the reply of the noble earl should be entered upon the journals of the Court; and the earl, after shaking hands with the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and many of the commoners, withdrew, and the Court broke up.

BOOKS.

The Universal Review. No. XIII. W. H. Allen and Co.

The March number of the Universal contains not a single article on purely eastern topics, but several that must be interesting to the educated classes of all countries. The first article proves to demonstration that Cæsar never reached the Thames or came within sight of London; the river that he crossed being the Medway, the passage whereof he effected probably at Aylesford. Next follows a very able and critical review of the physiological phenomena of the "religious revivals" in the north of Ireland, by "L. J. T.," whose generous attempt to "rehabilitate" the character of Sheridan was so well received by the London press. Dr. Doran's contribution is, as usual with that popular writer, full of curious anecdote and quaint touches of social anti-quarianism. An excellent article on "National Music," by Mr. Sutherland Edwards, is fourth on the list; to which succeeds the third instalment of Mr. Jeaffreson's new tale. The political papers are naturally devoted to a consideration, from a conservative point of view, of the Commercial Treaty with France, the Budget, and Parliamentary Reform. On the whole, a better number has not yet appeared.

Macmillan's Magazine, No. V. Macmillan and Co.

We notice the fifth number of this clever and well-written periodical, not so much on account of the ability evinced in the greater portion of its contents, though of no mean and ordinary character, as for the sake of a particularly clear and succinct account of the Suez Canal question. After giving an accurate and impartial narrative of M. Lesseps' intrigues from the beginning down to the present time, the writer, the Rev. J. W. Blakesley, concludes with these sensible remarks:—

"The Suez Canal question is, in its essence, a simple squabble for the preponderance of English or French influence at Alexandria and Constantinople. The serving men 'bite their thumbs' at one another, each avowing loudly that 'he serves as good a man' as his rival; and the military preparations of our imperial neighbour have at last perhaps induced M. Lesseps to urge M. Thouvenel to say 'a better.' But English statesmen are surely too wise to enter upon a quarrel ostensibly to prevent foreign capitalists from wasting their money; and the Emperor must hesitate to identify himself with an operation which might not impossibly come to be designated by posterity as 'Napoleon's Folly.'"

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No. DXXXVII. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

At the green old age of eighty-seven (volumes) "Old Ebony" exhibits no symptoms of senility or decay. The current number is at least equal to any of its predecessors, and among other articles of general interest contains two which may be specially commended to the notice of our readers. The first is an admirable review of Mr. Oliphant's narrative of Lord Elgin's Mission to China, in the course of which the peculiar nature of our relations with the Chinese is thus spiritedly summarised:—

"Now, whether a nation has a right to seclude itself from the rest of the world, and interrupt, by its pride and isolation, the golden chain of commerce and humanity which ought to go round the globe, we need not stop to inquire. We can take our stand on the fact that this exclusiveness was broken through; they invited the visits of foreigners to their shores, and enriched themselves with our merchandise and money. The next question that arose was, 'How is a commercial people bound to treat its customers?' May they condemn the purchasers of their goods to ignominious services, call them insulting names, receive them with insolent disdain, and threaten them with pains and penalties if they depart from the course of behaviour prescribed? All these questions were answered in the affirmative by some of the baser sort of adventurers whom the sacred hunger of gold had carried to Canton; and by a great number of cotton-souled, slave-hearted tradesmen at home, who thought that coin was coin, even if accompanied by a kick for every dollar. They were indignant, therefore, when Lord Macartney, in 1793, declined the degrading ceremony of the ko-tow in presence of the Emperor, and felt no thrill of shame when the result of that embassy was summed up in the following remarkable words:—'We entered Pekin like beggars, we lived there like prisoners, and we were drummed out of it like thieves.' . . . Other embassies were little more successful than Lord Macartney's, except that they secured certain privileges and exemptions which delivered our people from some of the inconveniences of their position. They occupied a miserable strip of land on the bank of a muddy creek; but they built factories and houses, appointed their own police, and traded, to the great increase of their banker's account, and consoled themselves for the daily insults they were still exposed to by hearing the chink of their money-boxes at home. The smouldering enmity broke out occasionally, and on every occasion the improved national spirit was shown in the firmer demonstration of our self-respect. We stood not only on our treaty stipulations, but on the higher ground of our natural right to good treatment at the hands of people whose wares we took and paid for. We looked on China as a shop which we had a right to enter, and resented any insolence shown us in our dealings, as we should call a grocer's footman to order if he told us to pay for our sugar upon our knees, or only allowed us to stand upon one plank, and that a very dirty and unsafe one, in the outer passage," &c. &c.

The length of the foregoing extract precludes us from saying more of the second article to which we alluded than that it bears the title of "Volunteer Cavalry Movements," and that its object is to attack the time-honoured principle "When Right is in front, Left is the Pivot." The charge is a dashing one, even though its success may be problematical.

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,
BY J. R. YOUNG,
(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College).

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:
1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

SIXTY YEARS OF SUCCESS HAVE PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL possesses extraordinary properties for promoting the growth and improving and beautifying the human Hair. It prevents Hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak Hair, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of Whiskers, the Beard, and Mustachios, it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR, while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the numerous Testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION.—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," &c., in white letters, and their Signature, "A. ROWLAND AND SONS," in Red Ink. Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

By Lieutenant-colonel W. HOUGH,
Late Deputy Judge-advocate-general, Bengal Army, and Author of several Works on Courts-Martial.

In one thick 8vo. vol., price 25s.

"It would be impossible to over-estimate the utility of this work to members of the military profession as a comprehensive exposition of the law especially applicable to them, and to the practice of military tribunals; and it would be difficult to speak in terms of commendation too high of the manner in which it has been executed."—Morning Chronicle.

Stores ..... Lime-street.
Offices ..... 54, Duke-street.

The Proprietors beg most respectfully to call the attention of the Trade, Noblemen, Clergy, and the Public to their extensive stock of CHOICE WINES of rare vintages.

B. and Co. are not disposed to comment upon the purity of their Wines, which is daily most laudably acknowledged by the public and eminent medical men of all countries, as the increasing patronage of the highest families in the land is a sufficient guarantee.

They beg to call attention in particular to their Pure Tonic Wines as being so valuable to invalids and persons of weak stomachs.

A sample case, containing full-sized sample cases, will be forwarded to any address on receipt of 6s. 6d., or a dozen for 24s.

It is a well-known fact that impure and adulterated Wines are the greatest foes to health, producing acidity in the stomach, and debilitating the digestive organs, while pure Wines will accelerate the digestive powers, invigorate, strengthen, and bracing the nervous system.

Their Tonic Wine is admitted to be most essential to invalids, both old and young, and should never be absent from the homes of the weak and sickly. Its properties are duly acknowledged by the leading men of the Faculty both at home and abroad.

To prevent imposition each bottle is sealed with the name of the firm.

All orders to be made payable to HENRY BURROWS.

NOTICE.
TO INDUCE A TRIAL OF
SOUTH AFRICAN WINES,

At 20s. and 24s. per doz., bottles included, The consumption of which has now reached 420,000 doz. per annum (Vide Board of Trade Returns.)

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s.
A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d.

PLASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c. for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—DEBILITY, CONSUMPTION.—In no diseases are the results of the alterative and tonic influence of these invaluable remedies more apparent or more gratifying than in that feeble condition of the body which precedes consumption. A change for the better is observed ere this treatment has been followed for a week; and the improvement steadily progresses, the melancholy emaciation gives place to health, strength, and cheerfulness. The Ointment should be rubbed most effectually between the shoulders, on the chest, and left side. Two Pills should be taken nightly, the air should be sought, solids eaten, slops avoided. This treatment duly followed will soon arrest both cough and feverishness, while the perspirations and debility will daily decrease till strength returns.

NEWBERRY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.—"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newberry—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."—Medical Times, 12th Feb., 1859. Eight Cakes, 1s. 9d.; Sixteen (about 1lb.), 3s.—F. NEWBERRY and SONS, 46, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established A.D. 1746.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 13d. and 2s. 9d. per box.
This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.
Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BACCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 13d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD RICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.
At Home from Eleven till Five.

TO SUFFERERS with CORNS and BUNIONS.—Ask for a Box of YOUNG'S CORN and BUNION PLAINERS, which will eradicate corns or bunions in a very short time. Be careful that you have YOUNG'S—the name is printed on the label; all others are imitations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box, or by post for thirteen postage stamps. Address H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Aldersgate-street, E.C. May be had at most chemists throughout the world. Agents wanted abroad. N.B.—A Liberal Allowance to Wholesale Dealers.

THE FAMILY BOOT-MAKER.
BURCHETT, 71 Oxford-street, nearly opposite the Pantheon, London, and Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The best assortment of LADIES', GENTLEMEN'S, and CHILDREN'S BOOTS and SHOES in the Kingdom.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

ALTHOUGH a telegram recently received is considerably in advance of the news brought by the Calcutta mail of the 8th of February, its details are so meagre and obscure, that we shall consult the convenience of our readers by confining ourselves to the clearer and more ample intelligence contained in the Indian journals, or conveyed in private letters.

At the date of the departure of the mail the Indian public was looking forward with some anxiety to the financial statement which Mr. Wilson had undertaken to make on the 18th of last month. The deficit is roughly calculated at nine millions sterling, which, it was supposed, would be made good in two ways—by increased taxation, and by diminished expenditure. The latter mode, it must be admitted, appears entirely free from objection, while the former may be defended on the ground of necessity. Notwithstanding all that has been said about the reduction of the native army, it is now stated that in the Bengal Presidency alone there are 90,000 native soldiers, exclusive of the military police, numbering 57,000 men—thus making a grand total of 147,000 secret enemies in arms, and in the pay of the Government they hope one day to subvert. The armies and police of Madras and Bombay raise this already formidable force to quite 300,000 men, not one of whom is really to be depended upon, except as a drain on the resources of the country. If rumour be correct, it is proposed to substitute for this costly array of hostile ciphers a European army of 80,000 soldiers, supported by a native contingent of half that number, recruited from all ranks, castes, and classes of the community—Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics. A police force on a very limited extent will be raised in each Presidency, on the model of the Irish constabulary, and armed with a light carbine. Some discretion and tact will necessarily be required in effecting this arrangement, especially in the Punjab; and we trust, therefore, that the European regiments in India will not, for the present, be withdrawn.

Another change is announced with regard to the expedition for China. Instead of volunteers being called for from the entire native army, regiments are invited to volunteer bodily, and in consequence much dissatisfaction has been expressed. On the motion of Mr. Harrington, a Bill has been introduced in the Legislative Council to confer on commandants of native regiments in China the powers usually invested in district courts-martial. The articles of war for the native army, it is stated, will be carefully revised as soon as the wider question of the reorganisation of the Indian army has been finally settled.

A Bill of a very different and highly unpopular nature was brought forward by Mr. Sconce, but fortunately defeated. It was, in fact, a revival of the attempt to enforce the Black Acts, so long a subject of bitter contention between "high-caste" civilians and the unofficial English residents. As we shall have occasion to discuss this matter at some length in our next issue, we forbear to do more than allude to it at present.

The Viceroy is still "in progress," attended by a following of 17,725 men, inclusive of the military escort. This, at least, is not a very brilliant example of retrenchment. His Excellency expected to be at Jullundur on the 1st, at Umritsir on the 7th, and at Lahore on the 12th of February.

The steamer Carthage has been chartered for the service of Government, at a monthly rate of Rs. 18,000 for four months, and Rs. 15,000 for a further similar period. It is believed she will convey Sir Hope Grant and his staff to China. The Walmer Castle left Calcutta on the 3rd of February, with the headquarters of H.M.'s 99th Regiment.

Telegraphic communication is now complete between Kurrachee and Alexandria, and consequently news from India may reach this country in six days. In fact, a message was received in London yesterday which had been despatched from Calcutta on the 10th instant.

The news from China is still devoid of general interest. From Japan we learn that incendiaries have been at work, and that several foreign houses at Nagasaki and Yokuhama have been destroyed by fire. Civilisation is a plant of slow growth, and appears to demand in its infancy the stimulants of blood and fire.

We take the liberty to inform our readers that in a few days Messrs. Allen will publish a "Manual of Artillery Exercises," uniform with the pocket editions of the "Field Exercise" and the "Queen's Regulations," which have been so favourably received in military circles. We may also point to two advertisements, given elsewhere, the one announcing that a competitive examination of candidates for admission to the Royal Military College at Addiscombe, will take place at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, on the 16th May next—there being sixty vacancies; the other, that a similar examination of candidates for the appointment of assistant-surgeon in H.M.'s Indian military forces, will be held at the India-office on the 9th of July in the present year, and that the probable number of vacancies to be filled up will be twenty-five.

THE NATIVE TROOPS FOR CHINA.

The order of the 20th December is already rescinded. In that order the Governor-general declared that four Sikh regiments and one Hindoostanee corps would be required for China. These regiments were to be filled with volunteers from different regiments throughout the service. Each man was to volunteer for himself, and even the appearance of compulsion was to be avoided. The order was scarcely out when it was abandoned. Regiments were permitted to volunteer entire, and their offers were accepted. It is reported that the change is due to Military Headquarters; but whatever the cause, the fact is patent. An order so important as to be almost a manifesto laying down a new policy is abandoned before the ink with which it is written has time to dry. The new expedient adopted is for many reasons one of the very worst. To despatch regiments on foreign service by an ordinary command, as at Bombay, is always unobjectionable. To invite volunteers is a practice at harmony with all our customs, and with the traditions of the British army. In the one case we have a working machine, in the other men of whose willingness we are certified. But to allow a regiment to volunteer en masse is to combine all the evils of both systems. The regiment retains its option, yet there is no proof of individual willingness. Doubtless the majority are willing. In many cases the European officers believe that all are willing. But the hearty, cheerful consent of each man is impossible from the structure of native society, and every man who desires to stay is a source of grumbling insubordination. He may be wholly without fear of his officers. He may yield simply to the public feeling of his regiment, but the nature of the influence exercised does not reconcile him to its effect.

There was another reason for not requesting regiments to volunteer. The Sikhs had never been asked to go anywhere, and it was most expedient not to commence a practice so derogatory to discipline. Individuals might be asked to go to China, as they are asked to perform any other special or disgraceable service; but a regiment of volunteers and a volunteering regiment are totally distinct.

As if to render the absence of fixed policy still more evident, this moment is selected for a change in the articles of war. On Saturday Mr. Harington introduced one of the most remarkable military bills we remember to have seen. His proposal, in brief, is to invest the commanding officer with the power of a district court-martial. The offender is tried and sentenced, but by his commanding officer alone. The appeal permitted to the general of division is a relic of the old policy of distrust, but until commanding officers are selected without reference to seniority, there must be some check of the kind. The additional power conceded to the colonel has been demanded by all experienced officers for years. It is a symptom of a return to healthier ideas, and will be warmly approved throughout the army. But instead of applying the new principle to the entire native force, it is to be operative only in regiments named by the Viceroy. This rule must in any case produce confusion. No army could endure two systems of discipline, operative on the same men brigaded in the same cantonment. Nor would they readily endure to see the military police under a discipline infinitely stricter than their own. Yet Mr. Sconce's bill for those police really gives the advantage of regular power to the officers of the irregular corps. To say that one colonel is fit to wield such power and another not fit, is simply to say that Government keeps incompetent officers at the head of regiments.

It may be that the new articles will be extended only to regiments serving in China.

That is hinted by the mover of the bill. The regiments, then, allowed to volunteer en masse, and containing, therefore, some scores of half-contented men, are to arrive in China to find themselves under a new and more strict discipline, not imposed upon their comrades in India.

It is this style of action, this want of policy rather than of brain, which impairs confidence in the administration. It is inclined to go right enough in military matters. Nothing could be more sensible than the volunteering order. Nothing can be more desired than the reform conceded in principle by Mr. Harington's bill. But the sensible order is a dead letter, the sound principle applied to a mere fragment of the army, under the only circumstances which could imperil its effective working. The pilot knows his course, but is steering wild.—Friend of India.

MR. WILSON'S PLANS.

It is no matter for surprise that India should amuse itself with guessing at Mr. Wilson's plans. There is for the moment a dearth of incident, and finance has this year for the first time interested everybody. Everybody is paying new taxes, anticipating new demands, and trembling for his salary. Not one in ten, perhaps, knows the figures which represent the deficit, or could understand their proportion to revenue if he heard them; but all know that until that deficit is choked, their personal security is seriously endangered. There is, moreover, in spite of some sneers, a very wide spread confidence in Mr. Wilson's capacity, a confidence he may soon find unpleasant, for financial skill, however large, can only distribute, not create.

We are unwilling to join in the game of guessing, but one or two statements reach us from so many quarters, that we are compelled to believe they at least foreshadow the truth. The belief throughout the North West is that Mr. Wilson's tour has resulted in decisions of this kind. That the budget of revenue expenditure should be presented to the Legislative Council before the close of the financial year. That the octroi on cities, or Punjab plan, is, as a general scheme, far too dangerous to trade. That resources should be sought first in a broad scheme of military reduction, so broad perhaps as to leave only a European army and a native police. That the deficiency of the revenue should be made up by a trade tax, levied as a house tax on traders with less than Rs. 100 a month, and as a graduated licence tax on all above that rank. That the great difficulty of Indian administration connected with pure finance, viz. the slow circulation of blood to the heart, should be corrected by the issue of a State paper currency, through or not through, the State banks.

On four of these six propositions there will, we imagine, be little difference of opinion. The reduction of the army has been demanded for three years, each year with angrier emphasis. Commercial men from the first saw that the Punjab plan, however clever, and however popular with the natives, could only be applied to a district which was commercially a cul de sac. To apply it to cities on the great routes of trade would be simply to reimpose the transit duties, and throw back our growing commercial prosperity half a century. The advocates of the scheme are talking of bonded warehouses, but their notions seem slightly vague. Imagine a substance like borax bonded at Lucknow, Cawnpore, Allahabad, Benares, and Calcutta. The mere cost of stowage, care, and time lost, would swallow up profit, and annihilate a trade which may be our best lever in Tibet. Or take the staple export of the future, tea. Is Deyra tea to be bonded at Meerut, Delhi, Agra, Cawnpore, Allahabad, and Benares? Or is the tea to be conveyed in bonded warehouse trains, and boats with a preventive officer on board? If not, who is to stop the ruin of the cities by the deflection of trade from taxed routes? As a local scheme it may work. As an imperial scheme the octroi would ruin us all.

The annual Budget, again, will be acceptable, if only to clear away the mist of secrecy, which, by destroying public confidence, and by leading capitalists to believe that "dodges" are possible, produces the violent fluctuations which disgrace our Exchange. Nor will there be much difference of judgment about a State paper currency. There is a lurking desire for gold; but convenience of transport—the only true motive of opinion on the matter—is decidedly in favour of the paper. Any plan for inconvertible currency would die instantly of inanition; and if convertible at once, Europeans and natives alike will accept State paper as a new facility given to commercial transactions. The nonsense talked at Bombay about the enormous increase of prices which must follow the introduction of such a currency is not worth reply. The circulation of hoodees, received everywhere by natives, is greater than any amount of convertible paper Government can by possibility put into the market.

The real discussion will be confined to two propositions, the tobacco tax, and the Licence Bill. On the former point we stand, we fear, alone among the European community. A few may doubt the pecuniary result of a tax which failed in Madras, but all would probably vote for the experiment. We abide, nevertheless, by an opinion we shall be most happy to see falsified. The tax is politically dangerous. Tobacco, as a mere animal luxury, is an excellent subject for taxation anywhere. It is especially so in India, where the number of articles not necessary, but universally used, is so small. But "a grievance is not always felt in proportion to its dignity," and a heavy tax upon the one luxury of the poor would rouse an inextinguishable discontent. We have heard, but utterly disbelieve, that the suggested tax is sixpence a pound. That is five hundred per cent. on retail price, and any approach to that figure would be met by a dogged, passive, resistance most menacing to authority.

The Licence Bill has been discussed ad nauseam, and until the scheme is once more before the council we content ourselves with pointing out the rocks on which all such measures split. A statesman is not very likely to propose exemptions, but he may be deluded into two equally grave errors. The one is publicity as a protection against fraud. We warn Mr. Wilson that any form of publicity will render any Bill inoperative. The natives will resist to the last, if not by sitting in dhurna, as the Umritsur merchants proposed, at least by keeping false books as part of their regular trade. The other blunder is the substitution of inquiries about income for a few clearly defined but arbitrary grades. The native income, strive as we may, will never be known. The only mode of getting at him is to assess him in a sum. If he pays it, he ought to be at once exempted from every kind of official annoyance. If he resists, he must prove his case, but in nine cases out of ten any endurable assessment would be paid rather than expose his books to the collector. It was on these two points the last Bill broke down, and we believe any Bill which comprises them must break down also, even when guaranteed by Mr. Wilson's name.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A NEW ROUTE.—The Delhi Gazette informs us that passengers can now go all the way from Agra to Bombay by bullock train. The journey occupies usually ten days. This train offers also the easiest method of sending goods from the North-west to the coast, and vice-versa.

KOER SINGH'S ESTATES.—The Phoenix states that Government have agreed to pay five lakhs of rupees to the mortgagees of Koer Singh's estates. The estates were confiscated, and the mortgagees commenced an action against Government for the amount of their bonds. The Government has accordingly offered this sum as full compensation.

THE REV. LALL BEHARY DEY, a Bengalee convert, attached to the Free Church of Scotland, has married the daughter of the Rev. Hormusjee Pestonjee, a Christian Parsee.

RE-ORGANISATION OF THE MILITARY POLICE.—According to the Mofussilite the military police is to be reorganised. The superintendent is to be placed under the orders of the magistrate, and, in fact, made to act as superintendent of police. The Oude police is to be extinguished, and the police all over the country, though armed and drilled, organised on principles more civil than at present. In fact, India is to be held by a European army, assisted by an armed constabulary corps.

CAVALRY DEPOT IN AUSTRALIA.—The Sydney Morning Herald states that the Government of India is about to establish a permanent cavalry depot near Sydney. Col. Atkinson will be the superintendent. The colonial journal believes that Sydney can supply a large proportion of the horses required in India, and instances the export of 5,376 horses to Victoria during 1858. During 1857, 1858, and the first three quarters of 1859 no less than 2,218 horses were shipped for India. They were officially valued at £52,540 or about £25 a horse, but that figure of course does not represent the expense to Government.

PUNJAB TEA PLANTATIONS.—The Englishman reports that Government have determined to sell the tea plantations in the Punjab in small lots. They are afraid of a great company which might establish a monopoly. The fear is ill founded, but the small lot system is fair enough, provided no one is prohibited from buying as many lots as he likes. The small speculators and the great company then get an equal chance. It is still a question whether a company which does not die, and can afford risk, will not grow more tea than disunited and powerless settlers.

NORTH-WEST BANK.—The Calcutta papers mention that the North-West Bank is selling its policies by auction. Policies covering Rs. 66,000 on five lives were sold for Rs. 5,100. The price seems excessively low, but the rates of premium in India are high, and the business one that Calcutta speculators scarcely understand.

THE BANK OF BENGA has increased its rates again 1 per cent., and its margin on Company's five per cent. paper to 16 per cent., a very curious move.

PLEADERSHIP EXAMINATIONS.—The committee appointed by Government to revise the present system of admission to pleaderships have presented their report. They recommend that candidates should be examined in each station, their written papers being sent up to a central examination committee. The pleader to be examined, either in English or the vernacular, in the laws of property, inheritance, succession, contracts, evidence, procedure, and in criminal law; the candidate who obtains three-fifths of the number of marks fixed for the Sudder pleader to obtain a junior pleader's certificate. One little addition we would suggest, that any pleader convicted of forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury, bribery or bribe-taking should be at once struck off the roll.

GOWHATTEE, ASSAM, Jan. 14.—This year Assam has had the largest rice crop that has been gathered in the province for the last twenty years. This is an event of as great importance to the people of this country as a good harvest is to the people at home, for it is the only cereal they have as an article of food, and they depend upon it so entirely that if the harvest fails Government is obliged to import it from Bengal to save the people from starving. They are, therefore, in a state of great rejoicing, and have celebrated the harvest home with more spirit and glee than usual. The harvest home of Assam, which I have just witnessed, is as worthy of record as any in Europe, and so unique in its character that it is unlike any thing I have ever seen or read of. On the sands of the Berhampooter, on both sides of the river, at certain distances, are erected very neat thatched huts of a goodly size. The dark grass-thatched roofs of the huts are covered with broad strips of the bark or skin of the plantain tree, placed with the white side outwards at right angles, forming large squares, which give to the roofs the appearance of gigantic chess boards. Each hut is surrounded with a number of fresh plantain trees stuck in the sand, which make them look like family habitations. These are all destined to be burned at the very dawn of the day of Harvest Home. But the Assamese, like all other people, civilized and uncivilized, do not consider bonfires complete unless they are accompanied by noisy explosions of some kind, and here they exhibit a knowledge and ingenuity which may shame the engineers of the Great Eastern. They cut pieces of the largest bamboos they can find outside the knots, or joints, or divisions, or whatever they may be termed. Nature has hermetically sealed these at top and bottom, and the Assamese pierce a hole into the top, fill the bamboo with water, and then shut it up with a plug or stopcock. A great number of bamboos thus prepared are tied on the huts, and when the huts are fired the water in the bamboos becomes converted into steam, and as the Assamese purposely do not remove the stopcock, the bamboos burst with a very respectable and pleasing explosion. Why the Assamese select the early morning for these bonfires will be understood when it is known that in the cold weather the fogs are almost as thick and murky as a moonless night, and seldom disappear before nine o'clock. The effect of a number of straw houses on fire throwing the lurid glare of their lofty flames through the thick fog on the water of the Burhampooter was novel, curious, and pleasing. These bonfires were seen to much greater advantage under the circumstances described than during the darkest night, at least I thought so. To add to the joy of the people, cholera, which had been committing such ravages, has entirely disappeared.—Englishman.

CIVIL SERVICE PROMOTION.—Mr Seton Carr to be secretary to the Government of Bengal, Mr. Grote to be confirmed as a member of the Board of Revenue in place of Mr. Stainforth, who retires from the service. Mr. E. Trevor, secretary to the Board, to be commissioner of the Rajshahi division. Mr. E. H. Lushington, officiating secretary to the Government of Bengal, to be secretary of the Board of Revenue until a commissionership becomes vacant. Mr. Buckland, who is now third on the list for a commissionership, is to officiate as judge of Burdwan in lieu of Mr. Read, who is to succeed Mr. Grote as commissioner of Nuddea.

VOLUNTEER ARTILLERY.—The Oude Gazette notices that a Volunteer Troop of E. Horse Artillery is to be formed at Meerut, of volunteers from different European regiments. Major Mackinnon, C.B., Bengal Artillery, will organise the corps.

SLEEPERS FOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The Hobart Town Chronicle says samples of convex sleepers have been sent to Calcutta for the railway. The colony is most anxious to supply timber to the Indian Governments, and believes it can ship the article very cheaply. The sleepers sent are blue gum sleepers, 10 by 5 by 10 feet long.

PORT BLAIR.—The Englishman reports that there are now 1,832 convicts at Port Blair, of whom 990 are sentenced for life. Men of steady behaviour are to be employed as guards, with pay, and after five years will receive a free pardon. The mortality has amounted to 37 per cent. of the total number landed. Government has forwarded a large supply of cattle and goats to the island. They should send some pigs. Andamanese have no prejudices, and pigs multiply faster than any eatable beast.

ARRAH, Jan. 26.—Yesterday witnessed the violent close of the life of a man who, for two years, was the prime leader of violence and rebellion in this district. The man who instigated the defection both of Kooer Sing and Ummer Sing, and who in their name executed numerous deeds of rapine and blood, paid the penalty of his crimes at the principal scene of his exploits. The rebel Harkishen Sing was hung at noon yesterday, in the chowk of Jugdespore; the gallows was appropriately erected in front of the ruins of Kooer Sing's house, and close to the spot where the culprit hewed down the unfortunate zemindar who had taken on lease some of the Jugdespore estates. The criminal was taken from Arrah at an early hour, and was conveyed in an ekka, surrounded by cavalry. He said nothing on the road, and at the foot of the gallows simply assented to the warrant when read to him, and then assisted the executioners, pulling the cap over his face himself; assisted by them he ascended the steps, and at twelve o'clock exactly the drop fell. A large crowd witnessed the execution, and maintained throughout a perfect silence; after hanging for an hour and a half the body was lowered, and given to the attendant relative. Thus Kooer Sing, Ummer Sing, and Harkishen Sing, the principal rebels in this district, have all died violent deaths, as became their misdeeds.—Englishman.

JYNTEEA HILLS, ASSAM, Jan. 19.—I write from one of the wildest parts of Central Assam, about three days' march from the capital Gowhattee, having passed through a country of the most varied and novel beauty. The road winds through a succession of plains, as flat as billiard tables, interspersed with hills that rise out of the plains without any gradual ascent, but exactly like monuments in a square, or pyramids in the desert. Many of these hills form circles and semicircles around the flat plains, others are entirely isolated, standing like islands in the sea-like rice crops. These hills and hill-islands are covered with the densest forest vegetation from the base to the top, which contrasts agreeably with the highly-cultivated fields on which they stand. The scenery has not the boldness of the Andes and Himalayas, or the savage wildness of the Australian Alps and Pyrenees. I would describe it as of placid beauty. The blending of nature and art, of the wild and the cultivated, gives a peculiarity and a beauty to the scenery which, much as I have travelled, I have never seen before. On the rice fields are gigantic muchans or hutted scaffolds, on which the Assamese perch themselves to frighten away—not the birds, as in the North-west Provinces, for here the birds do no harm,—but the wild beasts, for here wild buffaloes, pigs, &c.

"Elephants, rhinoceros, and such small deer Attack the rice crops every year."

The wild animals are so numerous that a great portion of the revenue of the districts is paid away in wild beast head-money. At Goalpara I have been assured that more than the revenue of the district has been paid in this way. On the day of my arrival here, the villagers informed me that a tiger had just killed a bullock, about 100 yards from the road, and that he must have been feeding upon it at the time I passed. Black partridge, jungle fowl, wild peacock, and deer are numerous, and the woods swarm with monkeys of various kinds,—among them is that wonderful monkey, the black oolook, or flying gibbon, which swings itself with such lightning speed from branch to branch, and from tree to tree that the motions of his long arms are almost invisible. The road through this beautiful country, although it is the high road to Nowgong, is in the most disgraceful state of disrepair, and I believe the executive officer has rarely visited it. It is intersected by numerous little nullahs, over which a few planks would form a bridge sufficient for horses and cattle to pass over. At present over most of them there is but one plank, and the swampy passage has been so deepened by the tread of elephants, that it is most difficult for horses to struggle through them. On two occasions I nearly lost my pony in these nullahs. All could be repaired at the cost of a few hundred rupees; but the executive officer does nothing. Indeed why should he? An appointment too often in this country is looked upon as a property, obtained through interest, of which the appointee has the usufruct; but as to the duties attached to the appointment, these are matters of secondary consideration or no consideration at all. If the appointee attends to them he obtains the name of a zealous officer; if not, he is allowed to remain at his post, unless the case is very bad indeed. These things, however, are being reformed, and the present Lieutenant-governor of Bengal will not, I believe, permit negligence of duty when it is brought to his notice. It is a great pity he does not pay a visit to this magnificent country. Indeed, no Lieutenant-governor ever has come to Assam, and yet it is a most interesting country, and hereafter will be the very garden of Bengal. He must, however, leave the towns on the banks of the Burhampooter, and strike into the interior, before he can see the capabilities and the beauties of the country, and ferret out the delinquencies of his appointees. Unfortunately, when a Lieutenant-governor travels, he travels in such state, and his route is so well known for weeks before, that delinquents have time to put their houses, their offices, and their roads in some sort of order. But as I travel

"Remote, unfriended, solitary, slow,"

I see the land in all its neglected nakedness, and my report may be relied upon as true, untinged by prejudice or favour. In a previous letter I mentioned that the rice harvest was the finest that had been housed for twenty years, and I am sorry to say that the promise of the poppy crops is equally fine. Every village and every hut that I passed had their fields of poppy most carefully tended and irrigated. The men were squatted in their villages with that drowsy, indolent look, and glassy eye which mark the habitual opium-eater. I have commented before on the injurious consequences of the free growth of the poppy, and it is to be hoped the Lieutenant-governor will address himself to the question with vigour and decision. There is another point which I wish to touch upon—the sale of waste lands for tea cultivation, in fee simple; but this I must reserve for another opportunity.—Englishman.

AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual report of the Agri-horticultural Society is favourable. The number of members has increased by one hundred and eighteen, the total number of paying subscribers being now six hundred and twelve. The expenses of the year amounted to Rs. 31,446, and the receipts to Rs. 1,267 more. The Society has been compelled to raise its minimum rate of wages from Rs. 4 a month to Rs. 4-8, though it is still unintelligibly low. The Society has been officially informed that Cinchona plants will be forwarded from South America to Calcutta by a "confidential" officer of Government. He will be compelled, we presume, to obtain them as the Dutch Government did. They offered an immense sum for a few plants, and were refused. They then paid half the money in bribes, and procured as many plants as they required.

THE PUNJAB.—A correspondent in the far North-West informs us (Englishman) that the 24th Punjab Infantry now stationed at Shumabad, near Attock, has volunteered to serve in China. It is a regiment of Muzabee Sikhs, who did good service in the war of retribution, and do not stick at caste prejudices. We also learn from the same quarter that the camp of the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab left Lahore on the 26th Jan. It was Sir Robert Montgomery's intention to halt four days at Umritsur, and proceed thence to the banks of the Beas to meet the Governor-general. The Bishop of Calcutta was stealing a march on the Viceroy, having passed him at Umballa, and gone up to Ferozepore, where his lordship would pass the last Sunday in January. From Ferozepore he was to proceed to Lahore on the 30th, and hoped to get over his work before the great cortège made its appearance. We learn that the Government of the Punjab are gradually withdrawing from the office of bankers to the public, and exercising an undue influence on the money market. They have materially reduced the rate of premium on bills drawn on Fort William and other down country treasuries, and limited the amount to be drawn for to five lakhs rupees per mensem, of which one and a half are required at Delhi. It is confidently believed in the Punjab that all private bill transactions by means of Government drafts will be entirely stopped, and that the extensive privilege hitherto enjoyed by the services will be entirely withdrawn. This is the first instalment in the way of financial reform, and it is calculated that a considerable saving in the one item of establishment will be effected. The octroi duty, about which so much has been said, will, it is generally believed, prove a failure, as it is said that, instead of yielding some twenty-five lakhs, the utmost that will be screwed out of the country will be sixteen or seventeen lakhs, while its effects on trade have been most injurious.

AN UNFORTUNATE MAN.—Some men are singularly unfortunate. Do what they will, they invariably find themselves in a false position. Acting with the best of motives, they find themselves objects of hatred, ridicule, and perhaps contempt. And this seems to be Lord Canning's position. He is unfortunate—singularly so. No man has had such brilliant opportunities; no man has failed so completely and so hopelessly in everything he has undertaken. Acting with the best of motives, Lord Canning plunged us into a rebellion fearful to contemplate; insulted the European community of Calcutta; disbanded the Volunteer Guards very unceremoniously; drove the European army into mutiny, and, after exasperating and defying the men, yielded to their demands; and now the Covenanted Civil Service are indebted to his Excellency for as nice a libel as has ever been published. According to a recent notification, the members of this service are under pecuniary obligations to the native bankers and others. No exceptions are made; no particular instance is cited; but the service en masse are told to be careful not to do so in future. To put down the objectionable conduct of a few solitary young scamps who perhaps verify the truth of the couplet—

"When money is wanting, and cash fails the till, There's nothing so easy as giving a bill,"

Lord Canning proceeds to make a sweeping charge against the whole service—a service which will compete, in point of honour, and respectability, and talent, with any service in the world. And so, by this single act, Lord Canning strengthens the ranks of those who head the opposition. We all know that it is quite the fashion in India to be in debt; and doubtless there are men in the civil service who have no scruples in this respect. But they must be marked men. No one in difficulties can conceal it; and Lord Canning ought to have addressed the warning to such only. It is unjust and unworthy of a nobleman in his position to insult a whole service because of the failings of a few; and the order to which we refer is calculated to lower the service in the estimation of the natives of the country. But it has, apparently, always been Lord Canning's policy to bring his countrymen into contempt; and unless the civilians enter their protest against this act of his, they will have to put up with a great many more insults.—Calcutta Weekly Press.

AN EPISODE OF THE INDIAN REBELLION.—When the mutiny broke out in Bareilly, Bazar-segiant Hardy, with his wife and five children, cut across the country in their gharee; but being unable to proceed any distance, owing to the large number of rebels who were prowling about, thirsting for European blood, the sergeant and his family sought shelter in a sugar-cane plantation. After a time, they went from village to village, concealing themselves whenever any blood-thirsty natives appeared in the neighbourhood. For five long months they endured this anxiety, privation, and hardship, and, but for the number of friendly natives in the neighbourhood, must have shared the fate of the hundreds of our countrymen who fell during the insurrection. Conspicuous among those who sheltered Sergeant Hardy and his family, was a Hindoo shopkeeper, named Kishen. He fed and clothed them; he ministered to their wants, he sheltered them, and to his friendly attentions and exertions this family owe their preservation. And what is more astonishing, the man is satisfied with having done a good act, and neither makes a parade of it, nor seeks any compensation or reward. "He was my friend, and I assisted him, nothing more." A rare instance this of disinterestedness in a native.—Hurkaru.

MOOLTAN, Jan. 10.—This station bids fair to be one of the most important places in the province. Already it has a considerable export trade. Situated on the direct line of communication with the sea, and accessible to all parts of the Punjab, it is destined at no distant period to obtain the distinction of the emporium of the land of the five rivers. In times prior to British ascendancy there was a little traffic on the Indus; but now a brisk commerce is carried on by means of that river with Europe. Saltpetre, flax, and wool are largely exported. The want of steam tonnage, however, is a drawback to the full development of the export trade, the number of steamers employed between this and Kurrachee being limited, while the uncertainty of the navigation by native boats renders the employment of that description of craft most undesirable for the transport of merchandise. But I understand that the steamers of the Oriental Steam Navigation Company will be soon plying on the Indus, and then we may reasonably expect the amount of exports to increase to a considerable extent. The agent of this company here is Mr. Henry Spencer, who, in addition to that office, is the general and transit agent, and who deserves every support and encouragement for his industry and attention to the interests of his constituents. The saltpetre trade is flourishing here. It was created and established by Mr. A. Gardner, who was formerly, for many years, in the Sikh service, in which he rose to the rank of colonel. But his military life ceasing with the extinction of that dynasty, Mr. Gardner was not long in finding a new field for the employment of his abilities and energies. It was he who first commenced the manufacture of the article some eight years ago, and thus showed the Government how a large revenue might be raised from lands seemingly worthless, and a source that had been neglected. The business was established under the name and title of Messrs. Gardner and Co., and has hitherto been carried on most successfully, the returns yielding a clear profit of 75 per cent. The Punjab Government, ever remarkable for liberal and enlightened views, have afforded to Mr. Gardner every encouragement in this speculation compatible with the just demands of the state. Mr. Gardner holds the leases of all saltpetre lands, the property of Government, in this and the neighbouring districts, and is the chief partner in the firm of Gardner and Co. The demand for saltpetre during the Crimean war was so great that the price of the article rose enormously, one hundred per cent. above its ordinary value.—Bombay Times.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.—A correspondent of the New Times says that prayer meetings take place daily at Peshawur, and adds the following with reference to a collection that had been made to aid in sending a missionary to Cabul:—"I mentioned the collection which took place last Sunday, and now I have to relate something funny in connection with it. A rather absent minded 'Sub', more intent upon the good things of this world than upon those of another, instead of putting his 'chit' in the plate carried about by our gallant Brigadier, for the matter of rupees 20 or so, for the purpose of saving Affghan souls, very innocently threw in a 'dom bit o' paper' (as a quondam Laird of Mac Nab used to say), which ran this wise:—'Messrs. J—Z— send a fellow a dozen of ale, two bottles of Exshaw's brandy, and 500 of your best cigars. A—L— P. S.—I'll square off last month's I. O. U.'s next pay day.' How far this precious document will go towards Christianising the Illl heathens 'deponent saith not.'"

SUMBHULPORE.—The Hurkaru states that the rebels in Sumbhulpore have been dispersed by Lieutenant Vallance, and Captain Bird with the Sebundee Levy. Some forty sepoys employed by a leader of the enemy, disgusted at his want of means, quitted him, and supplies which had been for some time scarce were coming in. A reward of Rs. 1,000 has been offered for the leader, Serundee Sahce.

MR. A. MATTHEWS, manager of the Agra Bank, died at Agra on the 23rd of January.

MECENAS OUT-AT-ELBOWS.—We (Lucknow Herald) understand the ex-King of Oude has written to his agents here, to discharge the large establishment of pensioned poets and mohurrers, as the court parasites, at Garden Reach, have given his Majesty quite enough to do in meeting demands upon the royal exchequer. Some idea may be formed of the number of news-writers and others employed during the rebellion, when we state that no less than four hundred received notice of dismissal on Saturday last. Some of these were state pensioners, but the greater part were mohurrers.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £2. 5s. to £2. 10s.
To Liverpool, £2. 5s. to £3.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 8).—Our markets have been almost in the same position as last reported. Produce continues to be held at previous extreme rates, in consequence of the very moderate stocks and arrivals from the districts. This, coupled with the unsettled state of freights, has caused a limited business in almost all staples for the home markets. Indigo had maintained full former prices both by private and public sales till very lately, when the rise in Exchange led to a depression of Rs. 2-8 to 5 per md. Raw Silk and Corahs maintain the advance last quoted, and are not selling freely. Sugar has been in limited operation for Great Britain; the Bombay and Gulf shippers have been the principal buyers. Saltpetre has caused some inquiry since the receipt of the late favourable news of an advance at home. Rice has remained without animation for either Great Britain or the colonies. Linseed has been operated in very moderately. Jute had almost ceased being taken, but since freights have been a little lower, has again engaged a little inquiry. Hides command full former prices, stocks and supplies continuing moderate. Lac Dye and Shellac little of known marks offering.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 8).—Mule Twist.—In the early part of last month a better business was doing in this, but sales have gradually fallen off, owing to the absence of buyers. Business since last mail has been very limited, and confined to the local dealers, at about ½ pie per morah lower. Turkey Red and other Coloured Yarns have been in steady demand, but sales are restricted by monetary pressure. Prices may be considered about 6 pie lower. Turkey Red Twills, Cambrics, &c., are in limited inquiry, but without any change in price. Grey Shirtings, 39 and 40 inches.—A little has been done in light qualities, but without any fall in price. Heavy sorts are dull of sale, and have fallen 1 to 2 annas per piece since last mail. Grey Madapolans, 24 yds by 32 inches, 2½ to 3½, are saleable at unaltered prices, but to a limited extent. Stocks are moderate, and reported sales are at Rs. 2-4 to 2-6 per pieces. Book Muslins.—Medium qualities are saleable to a limited extent. A few sales have taken place at Rs. 1-9 to 2-8. Finer at Rs. 3-1 to 3-2. Lappets, Spots, &c., are selling to a limited extent at unaltered prices. Copper.—A little demand has lately sprung up for Bombay and local requirements for Sheet and Brazier. Steel remains inactive, and prices have a slight downward tendency. Spelter.—Dull of sale, and has slightly fallen in price, say 2 to 3 annas per md. Tin Plates in moderate request. Quicksilver.—The late exports to China have caused a slight rise in price, to ct. Rs. 2-7 per F. scer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISAFFECTION IN THE NATIVE ARMY.—The Madras Athenæum denies the stories of insubordination in some Madras regiments ordered to march. He states, however, that considerable discontent does exist. Sir Charles Trevelyan has abolished the impressment of carriage, and the sepoys are unable to get carts, except at most exorbitant rates. The Athenæum recommends that every regiment should have its own carriage.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The Madras Daily Times gives an account of one Chellapen, prosecutor in a case in the Supreme Court. This man left Madras for Demerara with his wife ten years ago. Their whole wealth consisted of a single silver rupee. They returned a short time since with 2,380 rupees, a gold watch, a number of ornaments, and the silver rupee unbroken.

COFFEE PLANTING.—The Government of Madras has authorised experiments in coffee planting on the Gali Parvatam hills in Orissa. The attempt is made on the recommendation of Dr. Cleghorn. Coffee is succeeding admirably in Chota Nagpore, and the only doubt in Orissa refers to the fall of rain. No register has ever been kept.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.—An unfortunate collision has taken place at Tanjore between the police and Lieutenant Chrystie, of the engineers, the particulars of which will create little astonishment among those who know anything of the character of the former body generally. On the morning of the 1st February a report reached Lieutenant Chrystie that a tiger had killed a man and a woman on the road by the Jemboor Caveri bridge. He started at once for the spot, accompanied by Lieutenant Cunningham, of the same corps. About 2,000 people were found collected on the bridge (close to the Penair bridge), and 200 more on the north bank of the stream. Three or four of the latter who had guns were firing into a clump of bamboos on the south bank, distant about 80 yards. Three shots were fired. The tiger had taken shelter in the clump, and as he gave no sign, the people put him down as dead, and advanced into the stream. It was a rash step, no doubt, but advance they did. Lieutenant Chrystie's only chance of getting a shot was to move forward with the mob, and so he got to within four yards of the clump of bamboos and stood there in the river peering into the bushes with his rifle ready. Seeing this, a man next to him said, "Don't fire—he's dead." The words were hardly out of his mouth, when with a roar which amazingly unsettled the brave shikarees, out sprang a magnificent leopard, and struck him down. Lieut. C. was alongside, but was afraid to fire, as the beast was tearing the man's chest. He was not allowed, however, to remain long in suspense. Suddenly quitting the prostrate native, the leopard sprang upon him, but he was caught by the conical exactly between the eyes, and knocked backward, apparently stunned by what he got. To make sure, Lieut. C. sent a bullet through his head, but this did not finish the beast, although the gallant lieutenant thought so at the moment, and did not care to re-load his rifle. In a very short time the wounded animal began to move, but Lieutenant Cunningham who had gone to a different part of the bank, and had been carried away by the rush of the people, was at hand, and fired, breaking his spine. The second bullet was lodged in his head; still the tiger, although unable to spring, continued moving about on his fore paws, until Lieutenant Chrystie gave him the coup de grace with his pistol. To whom did the body belong? Lieutenant Chrystie very naturally thought that no one could question his right to it, and directed that it should be sent to his house. A police official who took charge of the body promised to do so, after showing it to the Ameen. Lieutenant Chrystie returned home, but the leopard did not come, and a messenger whom he sent to inquire about it brought back word that the Ameen refused to give it up. Mr. C. went himself to the Cutcherry, and found the animal in a bandy before the door, waiting to be despatched to some quarter to the lieutenant unknown. The Ameen speedily presented himself, and told the astonished officer, in very insolent language, that he (Lieutenant C.) had had nothing to do with shooting the beast! How many of our readers would not have done as Lieutenant C. did in this instance? He promptly repelled the insolence of the fellow by giving him two blows with his riding-stick. The peons in the Cutcherry then rushed upon him and seized him. He shook them off, making a couple of the more active bite the dust; but the worst of the affair had yet to happen. He was allowed to proceed on his way, the bandy with the dead leopard going in advance for about a mile, when a body of peons, armed with spears and lattes, and sent by the Tahsildar, rushed upon him and made him prisoner, and whilst one man pinioned him behind, another fellow in front hammered him on the head with the butt end of a long spear wielded with both hands. Lieutenant C. at length succeeded in getting away, though how he reached home is a mystery to himself. He was for the time stunned by the blows he got, but the leopard was secured, though at the expense of much personal damage. It is said that half an inch either way of the blows would have killed him; it was intended for the head, but luckily glanced on to the shoulder. The case is now in the hands of Mr. Cadell. Mr. Chrystie is charged with assaulting a policeman, and has entered a counter charge against the peons for a murderous assault at the instigation of the Tahsildar.—Daily Times, Feb. 9.

THE INAM COMMISSION appears to be carried on with considerable vigour, for from the last report, dated the 10th January, which Mr. Taylor has forwarded to Government, we learn that "the total number of titles confirmed up to the 31st December was 15,377; of which 1,104 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 9,863 were personal grants, enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 4,226 were personal grants, enfranchised compulsory, and 184 personal grants not franchised and confirmed on present tenures. The number of title deeds issued up to the end of the year was 11,914. The total amount of quit rent stipulated to be paid, in addition to former quit rent, is Rs. 22,999. Rs. 3,809 have been paid in redemption of quit rent, and the proportion of persons who have declined the commutation continues to be about 2 per cent." These results were considered by Government (27th January) to be "satisfactory," and it was resolved to forward the report to the Secretary of State.

A DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR.—A few weeks ago, the sergeant-major of the Royal Artillery was accidentally drowned at Palaveram. He was a Roman Catholic, and his remains were carried in the usual way to the R. C. burial-ground for interment. The priest refused to bury the corpse or to allow it burial in the cemetery, on the ground that the deceased was by his absence from confession and "the sacrament" during the past year, ipso facto, an excommunicated person. Upon this, the commanding officer buried the corpse, using a portion of the burial service of the Church of England. This occasioned much annoyance to the priest and some Romanists, who, of course, considered the Church and cemetery desecrated. On the other hand, the Protestant soldiers of the battery (about seven-eighths of the whole number) were most indignant at this treatment of the deceased, for he was a favourite with them, as he discharged the duties of his office justly and impartially, though it was very well known that his conduct as a private individual was anything but blameless. However, the matter was reported to Government, and they were of opinion, that in a case of the kind they had no power to compel the R. C. chaplain to bury the corpse; and they gave instructions that no commanding officer was in future to read the burial service in a R. C. burial-ground; but that, as they could compel the Protestant chaplain to bury anyone who had been baptised, he was to be called upon to perform the office in the Protestant cemetery!—Daily Times, Jan. 30.

THE LATE CAPTAIN ROBERTSON.—It will be recollected that this officer, who was master attendant at Tuticorin, sailed from that place in the Pounah, and that he lost his life in consequence of this vessel going down. The Secretary of State, we learn from the Government Records, has granted a pension of £100 per annum to his widow, to commence from the date of Captain Robertson's departure from Tuticorin. Government, however, has altered this to the date on which Captain Robertson's successor assumed charge of the office, as Mrs. Robertson had received her late husband's full salary up to that period.—Advertiser.

THE VOLUNTEER GUARDS.—We learn from the Madras Times and Spectator that the offer of the Volunteer Guards to do duty gratuitously in Fort St. George on the departure of H.M. 44th regiment for China, was submitted by the Commander-in-Chief to Government. It was received with much satisfaction, and in thanking the regiment for the spontaneous and considerate offer, the Governor in Council assures them that he fully appreciates the loyalty and public spirit which prompted it. But the Commander-in-Chief having intimated to Government that he can conveniently arrange for the duties of the garrison being taken by details of regular troops, there did not appear at present any occasion for accepting the offer of the guards. The considerate conduct of the regiment in this matter will, however, be brought to the notice of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State.

TREATISE ON THE CULTIVATION OF INDIGO.—The following is an order of Government, dated January 12, on this subject:—"The committee appointed under date the 9th July last now submit their opinion on the two treatises sent in 'On the Culture of the Indigo Plant in the Districts subordinate to this Presidency, and the Manufacture of the Dye according to the European Method.' They consider that the essay bearing the motto, 'Every art is improved by emulation,' is the better of the two, but that in neither are the requirements of Government fully met. As, however, the one to which preference is given contains, it is said, much valuable information of which the publication would be useful, and the treatise submitted by Mr. E. K. Johnson is not wanting in merit, the Government, as recommended, are pleased to award a prize of Rs. 800 to the more successful author, and Rs. 200 to the other. In communicating this decision to the parties concerned, the committee will intimate to the gentleman receiving the higher prize that the Government will avail themselves of his offer to afford a translation of his treatise in the three languages noted in the margin (Tamil, Telooquo, and Hindoostani), they defraying the expense for moonshees and printing."

A CIVILIAN IN TROUBLE.—We regret to learn that the troubles of the present unhappy local administration are increasing, instead of diminishing. They have become now involved with Mr. Turquand, who has assumed a position, with regard to the powers that be, which evinces a degree of spirit and resolution such as we scarcely expected to behold in these degenerate days. Mr. Turquand, it appears, opposed the introduction of the Revenue Survey into Rutnagherry, for reasons best known to himself. His conduct was reported, and minuted upon, after the most approved system; and without being called upon for any explanations, he was straightway removed from Rutnagherry to Broach. Upon learning what had been done, he accused the Government of incompetency; threatening, at the same time, to publish the correspondence, and arraign their acts before the bar of public opinion, so that their true character might be made apparent. The announcement fell like a shell amongst the minute writers; and for a time all was consternation and confusion. They, however, gradually recovered their scattered senses, and intimated to Mr. Turquand, that, if he dared to carry his threat into execution, he would run the risk of dismissal from the public service. In the meantime, Mr. Turquand has been summarily shelved, and placed upon his subsistence allowance of three hundred rupees a month.—Bombay Telegraph.

THE AUXILIARY BIBLE SOCIETY of Bombay complain that their receipts are falling off. Dr. Mitchell attributes the fact partly to ordinary causes such as deaths and removals, and partly to the decline in the interest felt for India. The latter cause, though undoubtedly existing, and endangering many societies on this side of India, must also be temporary. The sales of vernacular bibles have also fallen off.

GOA.—The exhibition of the body of St. Xavier attracts thousands of pilgrims to Goa. Twenty-six steamers laden with them arrived in a week. The Hindoos throng the temple in numbers, and prostrate themselves before the corpse. Miracles have been worked in the shrine. A boy named Touttu was cured of a sprain. A paralysed woman walked freely. The daughter of Signor Francisco de Costa Campos, lame of one foot, recovered the use of the limb. These stories are all published in the O'Ultramar, and that of the boy Touttu is to be published by the Governor-general of Goa. After all, what is the use of civilization?

DESTRUCTION OF "THE BUND."—We (Indian Statesman) lately announced the destruction of the well-known "Bund," of Canara notoriety, by Lieuts. Gierthen and Drever, of the Belgam and Canara police. We have now much pleasure in learning that the Governor of Bombay has presented Lieut. Gierthen with a valuable horse, as a mark of his appreciation of the services rendered by that officer against these rebels on several occasions. We have not yet heard that Lieut. Drever's services have in any way been recognised by the Madras Government, but doubtless Sir Charles Trevelyan will not allow that officer to go unrequited, considering that the conduct of the whole campaign has devolved on him, and that it is entirely owing to his energy and activity that the frontiers have now been cleared of these bandits. We learn that the Governor was expected at Sedasheghur about the 24th Jan., on a visit to the far-famed harbour of Bekul, and that high and low, rich and poor, were anticipating nothing but great advantage to the district from his Excellency's sojourn therein.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Jan. 30.—The London mail of the 10th December has not arrived up to the hour of our going to press, though it is several days overdue.

The intelligence from Japan is of a rather disastrous nature. On the 26th December a destructive fire took place at Nagasaki, destroying the premises occupied by Messrs. Walsh & Co., Messrs. David Sassoon & Co., and Ta-foong (a large Chinese merchant), whose losses amount to nearly 40,000 dolrs., 100,000 dolrs., and 25,000 dolrs. respectively. The fire originated in an empty Japanese dwelling, and is supposed to be the work of an incendiary—the punishment for which is, according to Japanese law, to be burnt alive. The foreigners at that port were organising themselves into a fire brigade.

A fire also broke out at Yokuhama on the 3rd January, destroying nearly all the foreign houses. It only lasted a few minutes, and the cause was unknown.

The North China Herald also contains reports of the loss of the Nymph on the 17th December, Cornelia L. Bevan, and Lady Inglis, in the neighbourhood of Simoda. Captain Price arrived at Kanagawa in a Japanese junk, on the 31st December. A passenger named Carl and three men were drowned, and the mate had died since. The treasure had been saved. The crew of the Lady Inglis had also been saved, but the crew of the Cornelia L. Bevan had not been heard of when the Moncka (which brought the news to Shanghai) left.

In Shanghai everything has been very dull. We noticed in our last paper the evil effects produced in that port by the rude conduct of young foreigners towards the Chinese, and regret to have this time to record an act of frightful and inexcusable violence exercised upon a Chinese coolie by four Englishmen holding the nominal position of gentlemen. They were heavily fined for it in the Consular Court, and threatened with deportation; but such actions sink into the Chinese mind, and warrant the epithet "barbarian," which they have applied to the foreigners in China.

From Canton there have been rumours of danger, but none have been substantiated, and there is every prospect of continued quiet in that quarter.

In connection with Hongkong the only matter of importance is a trial which is going on before the Magistrate's Court, and which forcibly illustrates the present unsettled state of our relations with the Chinese empire. We have frequently called the attention of our readers to the system of clan fights which exists on the mainland. Something of this kind had been going on for long in some villages to the west of Macao, between the Hakkas and Puntis Tam Achoy; one of the latter is a noted resident of Hongkong, and he lately took it into his head to charter a steamer flying the British flag, and to engage a number of European sailors, Manilamen and Portuguese, in order to attack the Hakkas, under the allegation that they were pirates. His party were repulsed, and three of the Europeans, with a number of the others, were killed. He intended to organise a larger expedition, but fortunately the Hongkong Government got intelligence of it, and Tam Achoy, with the captain of the steamer and the men who had engaged in fighting, were arrested and brought to trial for violation of the foreign enlistment act. They all appear to have acted in ignorance, and are not to be harshly judged; but it is evident that this buccaneering interference with the affairs of China cannot be allowed, even though the example has been set by some of her Majesty's gunboats under the direction of the so-called protector of Chinese.—Overland and China Mail.

JAVA.

Authentic accounts have been given by a man named Haji Mahomed Taib, the only person belonging to the ship Oonrust, who escaped the massacre. Haji Mahomed Taib was in the service of Lieutenant Bangert, who was sent in the Oonrust to communicate with the chiefs along the river Barito, and to try to get one of the rebel leaders, Pangeran Antasari, delivered up to him. On the 27th December, Lieutenant Bangert received one of these chiefs, the Tumunggong Surapati, and his sons on board the Oonrust, while Haji Mahomed Taib was sent on shore with a message to the other chiefs that Lieutenant Bangert would receive them at another time. The Tumunggong Surapati, it appears, was accompanied by about 500 men in nearly 100 small prahus, who remained at a short distance from the Oonrust. Soon after noon the Haji heard a number of shots fired on board the steamer, and observed an empty boat alongside and a fierce struggle taking place on the deck of the Oonrust. All the other prahus immediately collected round the steamer, and the Pangeran Surapati, who had previously left the steamer, remained at a short distance from her, looking on. The uproar on board lasted until about five o'clock, when the steamer sank and the Dyaks left, having previously removed the ammunition and weapons and landed them. When the Oonrust sank five sailors armed with cutlasses and pistols tried to swim ashore, firing right and left upon the enemy, but they were almost immediately killed. The Haji then made his escape, and succeeded in reaching Banjer-massing.

On the night of the 4th January the Government steam-tug Captain Van Os, W. Glazer commander, stationed on the Kapuas, was attacked by a great many prahus, and for about six hours a sharp contest was kept up. There were eighteen soldiers on board, with whose assistance the enemy were repelled, and the vessel in the morning proceeded to Pulo Petak. A great many of the enemy were killed and wounded. The steamer Montrado was immediately directed to proceed to the place with one hundred soldiers and some artillery, to try, if possible, to fall in with these Dyaks, who were conjectured to be the same who had captured the Oonrust.

A report very generally prevailed in Batavia that Banjer-massing itself had been attacked by upwards of two thousand men, who had been repulsed after a severe contest, in which they suffered great loss. Before this attack all the ladies and children were sent away from Banjer-massing, and most of them had already reached Java.—Singapore Free Press.

SIAM.

The following characteristic announcement of a happy "domestic occurrence" in the family of his Majesty the first King of Siam has been kindly placed at our disposal for publication:—

"HAPPY CIRCULAR."

"To all foreign friends of Siamese royalty and Governments at British Strait settlement, Singapore, Malacca, and Pulo Pinang, &c.

"We beg to inform you the happy birth of our royal son delivered by her Royal Highness Queen Rambery Bhamara Chiramy on 11th January, 1860, which is the 10th year of our reign and 26th year of her Highness' age. The royal birth of this royal scion, who is the fourth child or third son of her Highness the Queen R. B., took place at 7h. 16m. A.M., at grand palace, Bangkok, under the chiming of welcoming musician company.

"The Royal Queen, with her four royal children, including the new son, are happy and healthy.

"We beg to remain a good friend to all who ever have been acquainted with us and our most affectionate Royal Queen Consort, hoping your congratulation. "S. P. MONGKUT.

"The first King of Siam, Sovereign of Laos, &c. On 3172nd day of our reign, being the 19th January, 1860."—Singapore Free Press.

Return to the Presidency of Native Regts.

The C. in C. learns with much satisfaction that the regiments and detachments of this army, as shown in the margin,* lately serving in Central India, are on their return to cantonments within presidency limits, after a career of honour and faithful service to the State, which has been cordially acknowledged by his lordship the C. in C. in India in a G.O. issued to the army under date the 28th Nov. last.

The thanks of the right hon. Lord Clyde, g.c.s., thus publicly conveyed, are herewith republished for the information of the Bombay army; and will be heartily appreciated by their comrades, as well as by those whose conduct in the field has called forth such praise from the highest military authority in India.

The behaviour in action of the 3rd regt. L.C. has on all occasions elicited the admiration of the superior officers under whose orders they have served.

* 3rd regt. L.C., head quarters and right wing; 2nd and 5th comps. sappers and miners; 9th regt. N.I.; 10th N.I.; 24th N.I.

After the brilliant campaign in Persia, where at Reshire and Koshab the regiment gained much glory, it has hardly returned to India when the head quarters and right wing were called upon to share in the danger, the privations and the honour, of the Central India campaign.

The records of this campaign bear testimony to the devoted gallantry of the officers and soldiers of this distinguished regiment.

The left wing served also with great and acknowledged credit in the latter campaign in Rajpootana and Malwa.

The 2nd and 5th companies of the Sappers and Miners have worthily maintained the reputation of their corps, the gallantry of officers and men is told in the history of those who have died in action against the mutineers and rebels.

The 9th regt. N.I. commenced the service from which it is now returning by the share it took in the brilliant attack upon the insurgents in the Sat-poor Hills, and the subsequent operations in which it has been engaged, including the capture of the chief rebel Tantia Toppe, have been as useful to the State as they are honourable to the officers and soldiers.

The 10th regt. N.I. has had more extended and actual employment, which has been fully detailed in the several despatches of the commanders under whom it has served.

The conduct of a few evil-disposed men of this regiment, while forming part of the garrison of Bombay in the year 1857, has been nobly atoned for by the distinguished behaviour of the officers and soldiers in their frequent encounters with the revolted sepoys and rebels in Guzerat, Rajpootana, Central India, and more especially at Gwalior.

The 24th regt. N.I. formed part of the original Central India field force, and the very long and faithful service of this regiment must be conjoined with that of the 25th regt. N.I. already publicly noticed in orders.

The C. in C. has thus prominently alluded to the services of these native corps, because throughout the period in which they have been performed, no single instance has been submitted to head-quarters of misconduct, disloyalty, or complaint; while, on the other hand, it has afforded H.E. the highest satisfaction to peruse the frequent accounts of their long and well-earned fidelity and courage.

The Trans-Gogra Brigade.

Head-quarters, Camp Umballah, Jan. 16.

The Trans-Gogra Brigade, under Brigadier Holdich, C.B., and the Saugor Field Brigade, under Brigadier Wheler, having respectively performed the duties allotted to them under the orders of government, and having in consequence been broken up, the C. in C. desires to return his thanks to the brigadiers commanding, and to the corps which have been engaged in the operations under their orders.

2. To the Trans-Gogra Brigade was confided the task of shutting up the Nepaul passes, while the Goorka forces, under the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, captured or dispersed the last remnant of the rebels who fled into Nepaul in Jan. of 1859. This duty has been most effectually done; and Brigadier Holdich has had the satisfaction of transferring to the civil authorities a very considerable number of rebel chiefs, who were captured by, or surrendered to, the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, the precautions taken by the brigadier to prevent their escape as they were pursued by the Goorkas having been eminently successful.

3. The operations conducted in Bundelcund and the Saugor and Nerbudda territories have displayed a like energy and perseverance, and have also been followed by very successful results.

4. The large range of country over which Brigadier Wheler was desired to operate has been traversed and retraversed by the troops, until it has been determined by the Governor-general's agent that the time for military action has passed, and that the final pacification of the turbulent districts comprised in it is the legitimate task of police.

5. The C. in C. has been actuated by the same wish in both sets of operations—viz., to save bloodshed, and to hasten the termination of the petty campaigns, by putting a large force in movement, and guarding all points at the same time.

6. The object of government has been attained, and the brigadiers in command have done full justice to the means placed at their disposal, in the short period of six weeks which elapsed from the commencement of the operations till the return of the troops towards their quarters.

Disbandment of the 3rd Regt. Hodson's Horse.

Camp Ullipore, Jan. 5.

H.E. the Governor-general is pleased to direct the disbandment of the 3rd regt. of Hodson's Horse, under such arrangements as the Right Hon. the C. in C. may think expedient.

Allowances of Officers proceeding to China.

Camp Raie, Jan. 6.

H.E. the Governor-general is pleased to direct that the officers commanding the native volunteer regts. proceeding on service to China shall draw the usual command allowance, rupees (400) four hundred per mensem, drawn by officers commanding regts. of the line; that officers commanding companies in the volunteer regts. shall draw the usual allowance, rupees (50) fifty per mensem, for the command of a company; and that compilers of pay abstracts shall be appointed in each of the volunteer regts. by the commanding officer.

Case of Major Bouverie.

No. 250.—Notification.—The following resolution, passed by the Hon. the President in Council, in the Financial Department, under date the 6th inst., is published for general information:—

Resolution.—The officiating civil auditor, Fort William, inquires, with advertece to the case of Maj. Bouverie, political agent at Bhurtpore, whether, in the case of a military officer entering upon civil employ, his score for privilege leave under the civil rules must commence from the date of joining his civil appointment, or whether it must be calculated by the usual reckoning of 11, 22, or 33 months of uninterrupted service, irrespective of the department (civil or military) in which such service may have been rendered.

2. Referring to this question the President in Council observes that, when it was laid down that two or three months' accumulated privilege leave could be granted, under the civil rules, to military officers in civil employ, it was intended that such leave should be earned by continuous service of the required number of months in the civil department alone.

The Maharajah of Bara.

No. 223.—Foreign Department, Gov. Gen.'s Camp Bara, Jan. 25, 1860.—

On the 24th inst. the Viceroy and Gov. Gen. on approaching Bara in the territory of Patiala was met and escorted to his camp by the Maharajah and his son.

On the following day H. E. held a durbar for the reception of the Maharajah, his relations and feudatories, and the principal officers of the Patiala State.

On arrival and departure the Maharajah received a salute of 17 guns.

The same day, in the afternoon, the Viceroy and the gov. gen., accompanied by all the officers of the general and personal staff, returned the Maharajah's visit.

H. E. was met by the heir apparent of Patiala, and afterwards by the Maharajah, in accordance with established usage, and received at his Highness' camp, both on arrival and departure, a royal salute.

After the customary change of presents, and other observances, H. E. retired.

Reduction of the 1st and 2nd Native Veteran Battalions.

Fort St. George, Feb. 10, 1860.—No. 64 of 1860.—The Gov. in Council has been pleased to resolve on the reduction of 1st and 2nd native veteran batts. being gradually carried into effect at the discretion of H.E. the C. in C.

2. The native commissioned, non-commissioned officers, naigues, drummers, and privates will be transferred to the pension estab. upon the following regulated allowance of their grades, together with a donation of two mo. batta, their pay and clothing claims being adjusted up to the date of transfer.

I. Havildars, naigues, and privates, invalided prior to the 1st May, 1837, as follows:—

If of 35 years' service, on two-thirds pay.

If of 36 years' service, on three-fourths pay.

If of 40 years' service, on full pay.

[Here follows a scale of pay for native officers and privates.]

European officers serving with battalions will be posted to the European veterans, and are permitted to reside at their present stations until their services are required elsewhere, or till further orders.

Detachments under European officers are not to be re-called to battalion head quarters for the adjustment of their accounts, but the requisite arrangements are to be made by the respective officers in charge, in communication with commanding officers of corps. Arms, accoutrements, and all public stores are to be lodged in the nearest arsenals, and the records are to be forwarded to the Adjutant general's office, Fort St. George.

The C. in C. is requested to issue any further detailed instructions that may be necessary.

ADVERTISEMENT.

NOTICE.—INDIA-OFFICE, E.C., March 14, 1860.—THE NEXT COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR ADMISSION INTO THE ROYAL INDIAN MILITARY COLLEGE AT ADDISCOMBE, under the 34th Clause of the Act 21 and 22 Vict., cap. 106, will be held at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, on the 16th of May, 1860, and following days.

The number of appointments to be competed for is sixty.

REGULATIONS for the ADMISSION of GENTLEMEN CADETS to the ROYAL INDIAN MILITARY COLLEGE at ADDISCOMBE.

N.B.—All candidates for commissions in her Majesty's Indian Artillery and Engineers are required to go through a course of instruction at the Royal Indian Military College at Addiscombe.

I. Competitive examinations for admission will be held twice a year, in May and November. They are conducted by examiners appointed for the purpose, in the presence and under the superintendence of the Council of Military Education.

II. The candidates must be between 17 and 19 years of age.

III. The admissions will be determined by the result of a competitive examination, the subjects of which will be as follows, viz.:

	Marks.
1. Mathematics { Pure..... 2,000 Mixed—i. e., Statics, Dynamics, and Hydrostatics .. 1,500	3,500
2. English { Language, Literature, and Composition ..... 1,000 History and Geography of England and its dependencies ..... 1,000	2,000
3. Classics { Latin { Language and Literature ..... 1,000 Geography and History of Ancient Rome ..... 500 Language and Literature ..... 1,000 Geography and History of Ancient Greece ..... 500	3,000
4. French Language and Literature..... 1,000	1,000
5. { Hindustani Language ..... 1,000 { History of India ..... 1,000	2,000
6. Experimental Sciences—i. e., Chemistry, Heat, Electricity (including Magnetism) ..... 1,000	1,000
7. Natural Sciences—i. e., Mineralogy and Geology ..... 1,000	1,000
8. Drawing { Elementary Geometrical Drawing (including the use of drawing instruments) ..... 500 Machinery, Architectural, Topographical, Landscape, or Figure Drawing ..... 500	1,000
9. The use of Astronomical and Surveying Instruments..... 750	750

IV. No candidate will be allowed to be examined in more than five subjects, of which one must be mathematics, and no one who does not obtain at least 1,000 marks in mathematics, of which 700 at least must be in pure mathematics, will be eligible for an appointment.*

From the other subjects of examination each candidate may select any, not exceeding four in number, in which he desires to be examined; but no one will be allowed to count the marks gained in any such subject, unless those marks shall at least amount to one-sixth of the total number of marks allotted to that subject, or section of a subject.

In English and Hindustani it will be understood that by gaining one-sixth of the marks allotted to language, literature, and composition, a candidate will be entitled to count in the first section of the subject; and in like manner by obtaining one-sixth of the marks allotted to history and geography he will be entitled to count in the second; but no amount of marks gained in one section will entitle him to count those gained in the other if below the prescribed minimum.

In Classics, the same rule applies as regards counting on one or other of its two sections (Latin and Greek) as has been explained in reference to the two sections of English; but, in addition, it must be further stated, that, unless one-sixth of the 1,000 marks allotted to the Latin language and literature has been gained, a candidate will not be allowed to count the marks gained in Latin history and geography, even though above the required minimum of one-sixth of the 500 marks allotted to them; and similarly as regards the Greek language and literature, and the Greek history and geography.

In drawing also the same rule applies as regards counting as has been already explained in reference to the two sections of English.

In either French or Hindustani, every candidate will be required to obtain at least 100 marks for qualification in the language section, the marks to be gained on translation only, and in geometrical drawing at least 50 marks, whether he takes them up as subjects in which he desires to compete or not.

V. No candidate will be considered qualified unless he attains an aggregate of 2,500 marks at least.

The following papers will be required to be transmitted by each candidate to the Under Secretary of State for India, one month previous to the date fixed for each examination:—

1. An application for permission to compete.
2. An extract from the register of his baptism, or, in default of that, a certificate of age verified by affidavit.
3. A certificate of good moral character, signed by the clergyman of the parish to which he belongs, and by the tutor or head of the school or college at which he has received his education, for at least two years, or such other proof of good moral character as will be satisfactory to the Secretary of State for India.
4. A statement of subjects of examination, in which (in addition to mathematics) he may desire to be examined.

* N.B.—The examination in arithmetic, algebra, plane geometry, logarithms, and plane trigonometry will be close and searching.

VI. No person who has been dismissed, or obliged to retire from the army or navy, the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, or from any other public institution, will be appointed to the college.

VII. Gentlemen who may be attending the junior division of the College at Addiscombe will be required to submit only the first and fourth of the papers above specified.

The candidates will be inspected by military surgeons on the first day of the examination, that it may be ascertained that they are free from any bodily defects or ailments calculated to interfere with the performance of military duties.

Extreme short sight, or any serious defect of vision, is regarded as a disqualification.

VIII. The period of study at the college will be one year and a half, at the expiration of which the cadets will be publicly examined and posted to the Engineers or Artillery, in the order of their merit, as declared by the public examiners, and according to the wants of the service.

IX. The parents or guardians of the gentleman cadet are required to pay £50 per term in advance, towards defraying the expense of his board, lodging, and education; also an entrance subscription of £2 2s. to the public library.

They are also required to pay the cost of his uniform clothing, averaging £15.5s. 6d. per annum, and of the books required for his use; also pocket money at the authorized rates, viz., 2s. 6d. a week, with 1s. additional to censors, and 1s. 6d. additional to sub-officers.

X. Every candidate must deliver the names and addresses of two persons residing in London, or its vicinity, who engage to receive him on application to that effect by the Lieutenant-Governor of the College.

XI. A cadet is chargeable with the full payment for a half-year, however short a portion of it he may be in actual residence.

A cadet resigning or being dismissed during a term cannot lay claim to a return of a portion of the payment.

Cadets are chargeable for loss, damage, and destruction of books and other property.

No portion of their pocket-money may be paid in advance to the cadets.

No person belonging to the College may take charge of money for the private use of the cadets.

XII. Previous to the cadet's admission into the College, his parent or friends are required to furnish him with the following articles, viz.:

Twelve shirts, including three nightshirts.

Twelve pairs of stockings.

Six towels.

Eight pocket handkerchiefs.

Two pairs of strong half-boots.

Two combs and a brush.

A tooth-brush.

A bible and prayer-book.

One pair of white trousers.

A flannel jacket and pair of flannel trousers to be worn when playing at football or cricket.

Case of mathematical instruments and box of scales on an approved pattern. To be seen at Messrs. Troughton & Simms, 138, Fleet-street; and at Mr. Elliot's, 56, Strand.

[To be repaired, or, if necessary, renewed by the parents or friends in the vacation.]

Each article of dress must be marked with the owner's name in full.

XIII. Engineer cadets will go through a further course of training at Chatham for one year as commissioned officers on full pay. Artillery cadets will undergo a professional training at Woolwich for six months as commissioned officers on full pay.

XIV. A cadet of the Senior Department, who, after a residence of one year and a half at the College, shall be reported by the Public Examiners to be not qualified for a commission in the Engineers or Artillery, in mathematics, fortification, civil and military drawing, surveying, and Hindustani, will forfeit his appointment. Also in case of misconduct a cadet will be liable to dismissal on the judgment of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

XV. Cadets of the Senior Department will be allowed to count as service for full-pay pension the time which they may have spent under official instruction at Chatham or Woolwich, but will not be allowed to count as service any part of the time spent in the College at Addiscombe. Their commissions as lieutenants will bear the date of their last public examination.

XVI. Young officers appointed to the Artillery or Engineers will be required to proceed en route to India within three months of the completion, by them, of the prescribed course of professional instruction at Chatham or Woolwich.

Note.—The Secretary of State for India in Council has determined to allow the sum of £100 to each cadet who may obtain a commission in the Engineers or Artillery after a residence of three terms at the Addiscombe College, in aid of the expenses of his education and residence at that institution.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, March 17, 1860.

NAVIGATION OF THE RIVER GODAVERY.

AN order of the House of Commons has placed in the hands of the public a very important letter on the navigation of the Godavery, addressed by Captain Haig, Madras Engineers, to the Secretary of State for India. The valley of the Godavery, we are told, embraces an area of 130,000 square miles, comprehending the greater part of the Nagpore territory, and a large portion of the Nizam's dominions. The line of navigation when the proposed works are completed will extend 500 miles in length, commencing at Natchaugam, a cotton mart sixty miles S.W. of the city of Nagpore, and terminating at Coringa, on the eastern coast of the Peninsula. The river in its course runs for 100 miles through the finest cotton fields of India, leaving Omrowtee, the principal commercial town of Berar, only thirty miles to the west, and passing within fifteen miles of Hinginghat, the great emporium for cotton going northwards to Calcutta, via Mirzapore. For the last 440 miles the slope does not generally exceed fifteen inches per mile, giving a current of one and a-half mile per hour. The uniformity of its descent, however, is interrupted at three points by rapids, caused by rocky barriers. "The first of these, 10 miles in length, occurs at a point 150 miles from the sea; the second, 14 miles long, at 220 miles; and the third, 36 miles long, at 310 miles from the sea." Excepting at these points there is water enough during nine months of the year for vessels drawing from two to four feet of water, and during five months for a draught of upwards of six feet. Though the natural current of the river does not exceed one and a-half mile per hour, when quickened by floods it attains to double that rapidity. The removal of the obstructions to the navigation of this splendid river may be effected, according to the estimate sanctioned by the Madras Government, for the sum of £292,000, by means of lateral canals with locks above and below the impediments. This project likewise received the ratification of the late Court of Directors, but owing to the stoppage of all public works in consequence of the sepoy revolt no measures have yet been taken to carry it out into execution. The advantages, however, certain to result from the completion of this great design are manifold and enormous. Not only will the cotton of Berar be brought down to the coast at far less expense than at present, or than it will be even when the railroad is open to Bombay, but the cultivation of cereals will also be greatly increased. The revenue will benefit, as will likewise the natives in the interior, by the increased consumption of salt, which will then be delivered at a trifling cost, and free from impurities, hundreds of miles from the coast. The Government will further be enabled to send both troops and military stores without risk and at a greater saving of expenditure into the Nagpore territories, which have now to pass through Hyderabad, the least reliable city in India. Assuming that the proposed works will demand a greater outlay than the sanguine calculations of engineers authorise one to expect, still it is incontestable that an inestimable boon will be conferred upon the community by opening up this line of navigation, and therefore indirectly upon the Government itself. No unnecessary delay should be permitted to interfere with the prosecution of a scheme so certain of success, and if funds cannot otherwise be obtained the Government would find no difficulty in raising the amount by a special loan. As Sir Charles Trevelyan has expressed himself to the same effect, we trust that a commencement will be made without further loss of time.

MADRAS AND CUDDALORE IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

To judge correctly of our present position in India it is necessary from time to time to cast a retrospective glance at those early days when a precarious and slippery footing represented the foundation of the mighty superstructure that was about to be erected. A favourable opportunity for a review of this kind is now afforded by the recent publication of the journals and letters of the first missionaries sent out to India by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.* The most interesting portion of this little volume is that which contains the Diaries of Benjamin Schultze and John Antony Sartorius, though some readers may possibly prefer the desultory notes by Johann Philipp Fabricius relative to the bombardment and capture of Madras in 1764 by the French squadron commanded by La Bourdonnais. Many of the entries are naturally of a minute and transitory character, being intended simply and exclusively to keep the Society acquainted with the labours and movements of their Missionaries. To the same cause must be attributed the frequent repetitions which impart a certain tediousness to the narrative, though at the same time they give it a quaint, peculiar tone, and an unmistakable air of veracity. With the most perfect modesty, and without the slightest indication of an idea that they have done anything at all extraordinary, these worthy men record with commendable brevity the hardships they voluntarily underwent in order to preach the Gospel to the "Moors" and the "heathen," and also to the "Romish-Catholics." Barefooted and poorly clad, they wandered from village to village, teaching in the native schools, or preaching beneath the hospitable branches of a shady tree to attentive and wondering auditors. Assailed by hunger, thirst, and fatigue, they still struggled on in discharge of their duty, reposing at night in the common way-side resting places, and only too often stricken down by fever or removed by death from the scene of their trials and sufferings. They might well have been pardoned had they applied to themselves the boastings of St. Paul to the Corinthians, "In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen (even this was applicable), in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils on the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness." But not only did they abstain from self-glorification on the subject of their afflictions, they had even the honesty to acknowledge the almost total failure of their exhortations and preachings. The common people, indeed, heard them gladly, but never concerned themselves to adopt their views. They listened to gratify an indolent curiosity, but took no pains to ascertain the truth of the doctrines now for the first time propounded to them.

The early missionaries appear to have been kindly received at the native schools, and to have been allowed to teach the children the maxims of a pure morality. Schultze more than once mentions that he "taught them to repeat a text, and left it with them written on an oles, or palmyra leaf." At one place he "visited four heathen schools. The heathen children danced in the streets with pleasure, singing aloud the texts they had learned." At another place he "Went to a heathen school and explained the Scriptures. A great number of people assembled; and when I catechised them to ascertain if they understood what I preached, their delight was great. They smacked with their mouths and rolled their heads from side to side—their way of expressing pleasure. I gave the schoolmaster a tract. But this was not enough; one of my people must read it through to them in a clear and audible voice. When he had finished, the inhabitants said to the master, 'Teach this book to our children!'"

The singing, by the way, which seems to have delighted Mr. Schultze as a spontaneous expression of pleasure, was anything but agreeable when "married to immortal verse" for the purposes of instruction. Sartorius complains, with comic earnestness, of the difficulty experienced by the missionaries in teaching the children to modulate their voices, instead of screaming at a monotonous high pitch.

"Our fellow-helper," he says, "had taught them almost a year, and Mr. Schultze had himself attempted it; but all their care seemed to be in vain, for the children continued their monotony, and when they had to sing high only screamed a little louder. Recently, we made a new attempt; wrote the notes on a sheet of paper, and made them sing with us. But they went on just the same. We then wrote the notes in a different way, disposing them like steps, to get them to understand what is meant by high. At last we got a ladder, and when we sung a note higher went up a step and then down again. And other like wonderful methods have been obliged to try only to help them to distinguish high from low. Afterwards I sung a tune and made them sing it after me ten, twenty, nay, a hundred times. Then I did so with each separately, and so on."

However much we may be disposed to admire the patience and perseverance of these reverend music-masters, we cannot but regret that they should have wasted their time in such a very unprofitable manner. If the children had neither ear nor voice it was a pity to tease them with an artificial gamut arranged for evidently a different physical organisation. Besides, it is quite possible to be a good citizen and a sincere Christian without being able to sing either the Old Hundredth, or the Morning and Evening Hymns—at least, we have our own reasons for hoping that such may be the case.

The native teachers of the Brahmin caste are represented as being at heart pure Deists, and regarding idols as symbols and memorials. Thus at Tiruppadiripullicar, "a very large village on the Company's ground," the three Brahmins who tended the pagoda, after hearing Mr. Schultze assert the unity of the Deity, said one to another: "What he says is true: the one great God created all things; and as to our stone gods and pagodas, they are not intended for the wise, but for the simple, to instil a blind fear into them and retain them in civil obedience." At another time, while the same missionary was teaching a "Malabar school" in Black Town, "that God is a spirit, a boy said: That is true: our stone gods are nothing; but the wooden gods in the Portuguese churches are also nothing." At Padupackam he "expostulated with a Brahmin for worshipping a stone god. He replied: We are poor people; you Europeans can make your gods of gold and silver, because you are rich." This was the third time, remarks the good missionary, that he had received a similar answer. The retort, indeed, was obvious, as applied to the Roman Catholics, and there is no doubt that one of the worst obstacles Protestantism has had to encounter in the East is the bad seed sown by the Jesuit missionaries, who accommodated themselves to every existing superstition, and were satisfied with adding one more to the already sufficiently large number of those prevailing among the natives. What, for instance, could be more thoroughly heathenish than the annual feast celebrated by the Roman Catholics on Thomas' Mount on the 19th December?

"They carried," writes Mr. Sartorius, "wooden images of Simeon, Christ, and Mary round the Mount, accompanied by heathen music and parish girls, attired like the heathen dancing girls (a harsher word, unfit for ears polite, is used by the outspoken missionary) belonging to the pagodas. The Portuguese call it the Feast of our dear Lady of the Mount; the Malabar Christians call it the Mother Feast; and the heathens call it the Feast of the Hill-god. The Pariahs carry the banner of their caste; white, with an elephant depicted on it. Other castes wanted to carry flags; upon which a quarrel ensued, which the bishop has in vain endeavoured to allay. The Pariahs actually armed themselves with weapons to murder the Padres (Padres) and Christians of other castes, rather than surrender their right and usage. Upon this, the Moorish Head interfered and supported the Pariahs in their claim. Decent people among the Romish begin to be ashamed of such disorder and abomination, and would have the Feast done away with; but the Romish Christians say they would sooner cease to be Christians than be deprived of their Feast."

It would probably have given the "Romish" natives no more trouble to throw off their Christianity than it did to assume it. The Jesuits appear, indeed, to have been singularly lax in their notions as to the significance of baptism. They seldom took any pains to explain the doctrines of the Christian religion preparatory to the administration of the sacred rite. They were quite satisfied if "the poor Indians heard Latin mass." Even their doctors and catechists, in visiting "the sick, be they Moors or heathen, watched for an opportunity to baptise them clandestinely."

"Some years ago," wrote Mr. Schultze, in 1727, "a doctor of medicine died at Madras. He was a Catholic; and on his sick and dying bed he related, in the presence of some good friends of mine, how many people he had baptised. He was attached to the Mogul's (Nabob's) Court, and resided a long time at Arcot. What he said was this—that he always contrived, without attracting notice, to bring water with him when he attended his patients, and, when no one else was by, he first explained to them that what he was going to do was part of his treatment, and then he thrice sprinkled water on the head of the sick person, secretly pronounced over the patient the name of God, and thus baptised him unnoticed; that it sometimes happened, while he was doing it, Moors or heathens entered, and, when it became known, he found himself in such danger that he was obliged to leave the place. He further said that he could not always manage to sprinkle the water on the patient's head, and that then he dropped it thrice on his feet, and pronounced the words of consecration but only mentally, so that no one could observe it; that, even so, he incurred risk, for the patient felt it, and others inquired the reason. He further said that the missionaries persuaded him to do it, representing what a Christian work it would be if he, in their stead, when they could not get access to the people, should help to further the work of regeneration and entrance into the Church of God. From this it may be inferred how the missionaries may baptise so many thousands in one year. It is certain that they reckon and report to Europe all those whom the doctor thus baptised."

It is also stated that in order to avoid the expensive ceremonies of cremation, the poorest Hindoos frequently allowed their relatives to be baptised on their death-beds.

"If they can but articulate the words Jesus, Maria, Joseph, the Romish baptise them; put a rosary round their necks and a crucifix in their hands, and pronounce them saved. The number of Christians they annually make in this way is considerable."

The priests dwelling in the interior were in the habit of adopting Malabar names, as being more easily pronounced by the natives. One called himself the Pater Nittia-podager, or Eternity-teacher; another, Pater Veda-podager, or Law-teacher, and so on. In many respects they conformed to Hindoo customs and practices. They bored their ears, eat nothing but rice, milk, sugar, vegetables, and fruit, wore the pandaram's dress, bathed frequently in cold water, and streaked their foreheads with sandal-wood. On Sunday, August 16, 1733,

"The Romish-Christians of the Pariah caste performed a play in front of their church in a neighbouring village (to Madras). One of the Padres mounted a theatre built of sand, and briefly recounted the history to be represented, namely, that of St. Catherine, whom the Emperor Maximian put to death in the fourth century. The Pater then withdrew into the church, gave his blessing to the performers, and distributed flowers. He then returned home, leaving the catechist to take the management. Many scandalous and blasphemous speeches were uttered; as when two devils blasphemed the God of the Christians in order to turn St. Catherine from the faith. Others, in the most disgusting terms, endeavoured to persuade her to yield to the emperor's desires. All this was publicly spoken in the hearing of heathens, Mahometans, and Christians."

The Europeans are justly condemned for attending the festivals of the Hindoos, "by which it is made to appear to the heathens that their idol worship has in it something far better than Christians have in their worship of God, seeing that these flock to such spectacles and take delight in them." They are likewise reprimanded for engaging the pagoda girls "with their musicians to come and play and dance before them for their amusement, which is a very heathenish abomination." There are many other passages we had marked for notice or extract, but our waning space bids us to forbear. We shall, therefore, conclude with an account of the doings of the French during their brief period of triumph, as furnishing a striking contrast with the moderation and forbearance invariably exercised by our own countrymen.

"The French scrupled at nothing. In 1755 they took possession of the pagoda at Chillumbrum, one of the noblest and most sacred of Hindoo temples. In one court the officers were quartered; in another the soldiers, both white and black. Here was the kitchen for the whole force, in which pariahs slaughtered cows and cooked their flesh, day and night; a desecration which, had they dared, the Tamils would have avenged with blood. . . . The Masabei, a hall twenty feet high, containing a thousand columns, each of a single block—an astonishing structure—was like a swine-stall, so filthy and stinking, that no one could stay in it. In the most Holy Place, and in the Fore Court, the most sacred of places, the French officers had their banquets; and if the Brahmins made the slightest objection, the commandant let loose the Pariahs into the chapel to wreak their will, than which no prostitution of this so-called Holy Place would be felt so much. By the Hindoo law it is death to strike a Brahmin; but the French officers kicked and culled them, without scruple, for the slightest offence, real or imagined. All the day long the Brahmins were employed in getting water for the white soldiers, and if they failed in punctuality they were brought before the commandant, who kicked them; and three of them, one of whom was the chief priest, he ordered to be beaten with bamboos in the sight of all the people. One of the Cuddalore missionaries who visited Chillumbrum at the time, and who gives this account from his own knowledge, was shown round the pagoda by the French commandant. 'When we came to the most Holy Place the door was shut; whereupon he got into a great rage, and ordered the Brahmins to be called to open it. Not coming on the instant, he seized one of them, kicked him, while he kept crying out that he was a Papau or Brahmin, and gave him a cuff on the ear.'

Voltaire did well to describe a Frenchman as a being half-monkey half-tiger; but had the Sepoy revolt happened under French sway we suspect that the monkey would have been absorbed in the tiger.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 6.

INDIAN RETURNS.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved for copies of the statement, founded on detailed reports from the several presidencies and districts in India, and exhibiting the moral and material progress of India, directed to be annually prepared and laid before Parliament under 21st and 22nd Vict., cap. 106, sect. 53; also, all correspondence between the Government of India and the home Government relating thereto; and also, copies of any correspondence between the Secretary of State for India and the Government of India on the subject of the introduction of a Government bank and paper currency in India. The noble lord complained that the old East India Company constantly neglected to perform their undertakings and to comply with the orders of the legislature. Thus, in 1853, a very important set of regulations were made with regard to the admission of persons to the civil service, but it was some years afterwards discovered that the code had become a dead letter. Again, a provision was made by Parliament that the company should apply a certain sum every year to the purpose of education, but it was afterwards accidentally discovered by Mr. Cameron that the money had never been forthcoming; and the company, after a great deal of remonstrance, at last agreed to obey for the future the commands of the legislature, though it would not pay up any of the arrears. In 1853, he (Lord MONTEAGLE) proposed that the company should be compelled by law to produce an annual Blue-book, showing the moral and material progress of the country; but his noble friend (Earl Granville) having promised that such a book should be regularly compiled he did not press the motion. The undertaking was never carried out, and therefore in 1858 he (Lord Monteagle) had a clause introduced into the India Bill. Still the report had never been laid on the table; but appended to the last accounts was the following memorandum:—"The statement respecting the moral and material progress of the country has not yet been received from the Government in India." The attention of the home Government had been drawn to the fact since July last, and he supposed that there must have been some communications with the Government in India on the subject. The necessity for such a report was greater than ever, in consequence of the enormous importance of the measures that were under discussion in India. For instance, it was stated that the Government proposed to establish themselves as bankers, issuing promissory notes payable on demand. He (the noble lord) could hardly imagine a more important or critical measure in any country; but when he considered the temptation which it would put in the way of a despotic government to issue a little more paper in order to relieve itself from any pecuniary pressure, he could not contemplate its adoption without apprehension and alarm.

The Duke of ANGLA did not intend now that the East India Company was dead and buried to defend its shortcomings or its sins of commission. He had warned his noble friend when the India Bill was under discussion that the Government must, under any circumstances, be a double one, and that the faults with which the old system was charged must of necessity be more or less perpetuated under the new one. The statistical return to which his noble friend referred had not yet been received; but when it was, no time should be lost in communicating it to Parliament. This noble lord's clause was most vaguely worded; he certainly could not see what light any return furnished under it could throw upon the question of the currency. What had taken place was this: He had received a private note, not from the Government but from the Governor-general of India, communicating to him a certain minute which had been written by Mr. Wilson. He believed that the construction which had been put upon that minute was in some respects a mistaken one; and the Secretary of State for India wished it not to be publicly produced until it could be accompanied with the despatch he had sent in reply. He (the noble duke) hoped, therefore, that his noble friend would not press that part of his motion.

After a few remarks by the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH and the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, the latter portion of the resolutions was withdrawn and the former agreed to.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 9.

THE FRENCH COLONIES AND EMIGRATION FROM BRITISH INDIA.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH moved an address for copies of the correspondence between the Governments of England and France, with reference to the emigration of labourers from British India to French colonies. The noble earl said, from the fact that the Government were willing to grant these papers he concluded that they intended to postpone the conclusion of the treaty till Parliament had had an opportunity of pronouncing an opinion upon the subject.

Lord WODEHOUSE said that although the Government were willing to produce the correspondence, he must remind the noble lord that it had never been customary for the Crown in negotiating treaties to consult Parliament as to whether a treaty should be concluded or not. He could not, therefore, give any pledge like that which the noble lord seemed desirous of obtaining.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH did not see of what use the papers would be if they were not produced before the conclusion of the treaty.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 9.

SINGAPORE.

Mr. GREGSON asked the Secretary of State for India if her Majesty's Government had arranged with the Viceroy of India to transfer the control of the government of Singapore and the Straits from Bengal to the Colonial-office; and if so, when it was proposed to complete the transfer?

Sir C. WOOD had been always of opinion that it would be desirable to transfer Singapore and the Straits to the Colonial-office. The noble lord who had preceded him in the office of Secretary of State for India wrote a despatch to the Governor-general of India, asking him for his opinion, and whether he saw any objection to the transfer. About a month ago an answer had been received from the Governor-general, which stated that his excellency thought it would be advisable to make the transfer. He (Sir C. Wood) had written to the noble duke at the head of the Colonial-office, but had not yet received an answer.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY'S TROOPS.

General PEELE asked the Secretary of State for India whether there was any truth in the statement that had appeared in the papers copied from the Onde Gazette, "That tidings have been received at head-quarters of a feeling of discontent still lingering in the minds of the remnants of the late Company's European troops, especially the Artillery; it has transpired that several of them, in different parts, have been in correspondence, urging each other to agitate for the bounty. To put down this spirit of insubordination the Government has resolved upon some most stringent measures, which the ringleaders will be shortly made to feel."

Sir C. Wood said he had seen in the newspapers the statement to which the right hon. and gallant general referred, but the Government had received no confirmation of it.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.

Mr. WAY rose to ask the Secretary of State for India whether the batta granted to the troops who were present at the siege and capture of Delhi was to be deducted from the prize money? He had no intention of detaining the House with details of that memorable siege and capture, which had given the great blow to the Indian mutiny, but he might remind the House of the importance which was attached to the event during the four months in which it was in suspense. During the siege six months' batta was issued to the troops, and six months subsequently, but it was always understood to be a gratuity; whereas, according to a recent statement in the Times, it appeared that now the amount was to be deducted from the prize money.

Sir C. Wood stated in reply that there was not the slightest intention on the part of the Government to deduct the batta from the prize money.

THE STATE OF DHAR.

Lord STANLEY asked the Secretary of State for India what steps had been taken by Lord Canning for the restoration of the State of Dhar to its native rulers. The House, he said, would perhaps recollect that one of the last acts of the Court of Directors was to send to India a despatch disallowing the annexation of the State of Dhar, and directing that it should be restored to the native rulers. No reply to that despatch had been received, and in April, 1855, instructions had again been sent out to the same effect. That communication also had, however, remained unanswered during his stay in office, but he understood a reply to it had since then been received.

Sir C. Wood said the noble lord was quite right in stating that during the period of his continuance in office no answer had been received to the communication to which he referred. Late in the autumn, however, a despatch had reached the India-office from Lord Canning in which he justified the course in the matter which he had pursued, and pointed out the future steps which he recommended to be taken. Having considered the subject fully, her Majesty's Government had determined to adhere in the main to the advice which was contained in the despatch which the noble lord had mentioned, and Lord Canning had accordingly been directed to retain possession of the State of Dhar until the heir to it should come of age, when he was to be restored to the territory which belonged to him. The only exception which had been made in the case was that of an outlying district which we had administered for many years, and which had paid to the native ruler a much larger sum than that to which he was entitled. It had been deemed to be only right that when we were taxing our own loyal subjects in India for the expenses of the war some contribution should be made by those whose misconduct had entailed that expense. Her Majesty's Government had, therefore, directed that a payment on account of the outlying district to which he referred should be made to the extent of a couple of thousand per annum to the Imperial Treasury.

INDIAN BANKS.

A full detail of the existing banking system of India is furnished in a Parliamentary return recently moved for by Mr. R. W. Crawford. The rules for the respective banks of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras were framed exactly twenty-one years ago, when the trade of India with this country was about £4,000,000 or £5,000,000, and they remain in force to this day, when our interchanges have swollen to an aggregate of nearly £50,000,000. The original charter of the Bank of Bengal, granted in 1823, was superseded by a new one on the 18th of March, 1839, which served subsequently as the model for the charters of the banks in the other presidencies. By this the capital of the Bank of Bengal was fixed at £1,125,000 in shares of £400 each, or quarter-shares of £100 each, and the extraordinary restriction was imposed that no one should be allowed to hold a larger amount than £16,000. The Government, however, are to hold £165,000. The number of directors is to be nine, of whom three are appointed by the Governor-general. Of the six ordinary directors two are to go out of office every year, and are not on that occasion to be re-eligible. On absence from Calcutta for three months they are likewise to vacate their seats. The qualification of each director is £1,200, and the business of the establishment is defined as follows:—

1. The discounting of negotiable securities.
2. The keeping of cash accounts.
3. Buying and selling of bills of exchange payable in India.
4. The lending of money on short loans.
5. The buying and selling of bullion.
6. The receiving of deposits.
7. The issuing and circulating of cash notes and bank post bills.
8. The selling of property or securities deposited in the bank as security for loans and not redeemed, or of property or securities recovered by the bank in satisfaction of debts and claims.

A reserve of cash is at all times to be held, equal to one-fourth of the liabilities. No money is to be lent for a longer period than three months, or on securities having more than three months to run; and no discounts or advances to any individual or firm are to exceed £30,000, unless upon Government securities, or on deposit of goods not perishable, and of an "estimated" value exceeding the amount of the loan by at least one-fourth. The direct advances of the bank to the Government are limited to £75,000. The paper issues of the bank may consist of notes payable either on demand or at a date not exceeding thirty days' sight, such notes not to be of less amount than £1. The total circulation is not to exceed £2,000,000. The profits are to be divided half yearly, and an annual meeting is required to be held in August. Branch banks may be established with the consent of the Government, and the charter, which was originally to run to the 1st of May, 1840, may now be determined at any time upon twelve months' notice. A suspension of cash payments would involve its forfeiture. The charter of the Bank of Bombay was granted on the 17th of February, 1840, on nearly identical terms, with the exception that the capital was fixed at £560,000, and the holding of the Government at £30,000. The shares are of £100 each, and the circulation allowed is the same as for the Bank of Bengal—£2,000,000. The charter of the Bank of Madras was dated June 14, 1843, and is also of similar character, except that the capital is limited to £300,000, that no proprietor is allowed to hold more than £5,000 stock, and that the circulation is not to exceed £1,000,000. The only modifications ever effected in the above rules were in the years 1854 and 1855, and consisted in giving power to make advances on Indian Guaranteed Railway Shares to the extent of three-fourths of their paid-up value, in allowing the secretaries and certain other officers to sign documents which had previously required the signature of three directors, and in authorising each establishment to "take charge of any Government securities or shares," to receive the dividends thereon, to effect purchases and sales, and to transmit or retain the proceeds, according to the instructions of their constituents.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College).

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

SOUND and WHITE TEETH are indispensable to PERSONAL ATTRACTION and to health and longevity, by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a White Powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tortuous adhesions to the Teeth, and insures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and anti-scorbutic properties exerce a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of decay of the Teeth, induce a healthy action of the gums, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath, also, from the salubrious and disinfecting qualities of the ODONTO, attains a purity and fragrance truly grateful to its possessor.

PRICE 2s. 9d. PER BOX.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' ODONTO, &c.," are on the Label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp.

Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

BURROWS and Co., WHOLESALE WINE MERCHANTS, LIVERPOOL.

Stores ... .. Lime-street.
Offices ... .. 51, Duke-street.

The Proprietors beg most respectfully to call the attention of the Trade, Noblemen, Clergy, and the Public to their extensive stock of CHOICE WINES of rare vintages.

B. and Co. are not disposed to comment upon the purity of their Wines, which is daily most laudably acknowledged by the public and eminent medical men of all countries, as the increasing patronage of the highest families in the land is a sufficient guarantee.

They beg to call attention in particular to their Pure Tonic Wines as being so valuable to invalids and persons of weak stomachs.

A sample case, containing full-sized sample cases, will be forwarded to any address on receipt of 6s. 6d., or a dozen for 21s.

It is a well-known fact that impure and adulterated Wines are the greatest foes to health, producing acidity in the stomach, and debilitating the digestive organs, while pure Wines will accelerate the digestive powers, invigorating, strengthening, and bracing the nervous system.

Their Tonic Wine is admitted to be most essential to invalids, both old and young, and should never be absent from the homes of the weak and sickly. Its properties are duly acknowledged by the leading men of the Faculty both at home and abroad.

To prevent imposition each bottle is sealed with the name of the firm.

All orders to be made payable to HENRY BURROWS.

NOTICE.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 10s. each. Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—WINTER AILMENTS.

At this season these Pills will be found most efficacious in strengthening debilitated constitutions, and removing all taints from the system. A fair trial should be given to these admirable Pills by persons of a nervous habit, who usually suffer much from a disordered digestion, and by all afflicted with bilious complaints, squeamish stomach, or torpid kidneys. Holloway's Pills are also wonderfully efficacious in coughs, colds, asthma, shortness of breath, and palpitation of the heart, all of which they immediately relieve, and, when properly taken, generally cure. The remedial power of these Pills is not superficial or temporary, but complete and permanent. They possess the inestimable merit of never doing harm to the feeblest frame.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBERRY

sold Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of Fever, Rheumatism, Violent Colds, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name, F. NEWBERRY, No. 45, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTIRHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.

Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorieux, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BAWCAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 6d.

Prepared only by EDWARD FRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and to who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE new financial budget, expounded by Mr. Wilson on the 18th of February, forms the burden of the intelligence received from Bombay by the mail of the 25th of that month. The Indian journals are unanimous in eulogising the measures proposed by the right honourable gentleman, nor do the natives appear to regard them with an unfavourable eye. The chief feature is an income-tax of two per cent. on all incomes varying from Rs. 200 to Rs. 500, and of four per cent. on all incomes above that sum. One per cent. of the tax on first-class incomes will be devoted to local improvements, public works, &c., &c. A licence tax will also be imposed, at the rate of one rupee per annum on artisans, of four rupees on retail, and of ten rupees on wholesale dealers. At the same time the Customs tariff is again to be remodelled. The duties which Mr. Harrington raised to twenty per cent. are to be reduced one half, except in the case of tobacco, the duty on which will be eight annas a seer on the unmanufactured leaf, and one rupee a seer in its manufactured state. The import duties on cotton-thread, twist, and yarn, are to be raised to ten per cent.—goods at sea, however, to be admitted at five per cent. Saltpetre, a Bengal monopoly, is to be taxed at the rate of two rupees a maund of 82 lbs. On the other hand, wool, flax, hemp, jute, maps, prints, works of art, and hides are to be exempted from import duty; and the same articles, with the addition of tea and sugar, may be exported without any sort of restriction.

The five-and-a-half per cent. loan, which was closed on the 11th of February, is now quoted at 3 premium. The notification that only eighty lakhs could be accorded to Bombay reached that Presidency at two P.M. of the 11th, and before four o'clock the whole amount was eagerly taken up. A similar alacrity in subscribing was displayed at Calcutta and Madras.

The Bombay papers give long and glowing accounts of the ceremonies and speeches that attended the opening of the first section (thirty-six miles) of the railway to Baroda and Ahmedabad, which took place on the 7th of last month. It is stated, by the way, that a telegraphic message from Calcutta was received in the Western Presidency on the 21st ult., three quarters of an hour before its transmission. In like manner, if the line were clear, a message sent from Bombay at noon would reach London at eight A.M.; that is, it would anticipate the motion of the earth by four hours.

An alarming report had been circulated in Bombay to the effect that the Maharajah of Indore had gained over the 23rd Native Infantry, and instigated them to revolt. It is almost needless to say that the rumour was a base fabrication, the real facts of the case being that Holkar's durbar had discovered an insignificant plot formed by some Pandits, who were instantly arrested by the maligned regiment.

A serious disturbance, however, had taken place in the east of Bengal. The Kookoes, a barbarous aboriginal race, inhabiting the Tipperah hills, suddenly descended into the British territories and barbarously murdered a thousand individuals of all ages and both sexes. A wing of the Nuraipore battalion, from Deesa, and a body of police and retainers of native landowners, have marched against the marauders, who will no doubt receive a befitting chastisement. As the Rajah has shown himself unable to restrain his subjects, the wisest step would probably be to remove him from a position he is unworthy to occupy, and to incorporate his territories with the adjacent provinces.

The Governor-general had held a grand durbar at Lahore, and expected to reach Wuzerabad on the 22nd ultimo, where the Maharajah Bumber Singh, of Cashmere, would be admitted to an interview. At Peshawur his excellency would probably receive a visit from Dost Mahomed, the aged ruler of Afghanistan.

The preparations for the China expedition appear to be in a forward state, and native regiments are offering themselves for foreign service with considerable eagerness.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 6th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The subjoined notification regarding the five-and-a-half per cent. loan was published on the 11th February, in a Government Gazette Extraordinary :—

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.
NOTIFICATION.

The following telegram, dated Calcutta, Feb. 10, from the Financial Secretary to the Government of India, is published for general information :—

"Referring to the result of an account of subscriptions to the five-and-a-half per cent. loan, published in a Calcutta Gazette extraordinary of this date, and to the desire of the Government not to exceed the stipulated limit of five crores of rupees, the hon. the President in Council has decided to close the five-and-a-half per cent loan immediately at all district treasuries, and to limit the subscriptions at Madras and Bombay, respectively, to a total of eighty (twice forty) lakhs of rupees in cash, leaving the balance to be subscribed at Calcutta. These proportions have been decided upon according to the rate at which the loan has been taken up at the three presidency towns up to this date, as far as has been ascertained. You will please to publish the above in your official gazette, and to report to this department, by telegraph, as soon as the amount allotted to your presidency has been subscribed.

"By order of the right hon. the Gov. in Council,
"B. H. ELLIS,
"Acting Sec. to Govt.

"Bombay Castle, Feb. 11, 1860."

The Legislative Council met on the 18th of February to hear the Hon. Mr. Wilson's financial statement; and the following is the result as announced in a Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary, dated the 20th Feb. :—

NOTIFICATION.
TERRITORIAL DEPARTMENT.
REVENUE.

The following telegram from the Home Secretary to the Government of India, despatched from Calcutta on the 18th instant, is published for general information :—

TELEGRAM.

"A new Custom Duty Bill was brought in to-day. The alterations are as follows :—

"Imports.—All twenty per cent. duties reduced to ten per cent., except duty on tobacco.

"Cotton thread, twist, and yarn, raised to ten per cent., but proved contracts of goods actually at sea to be admitted at five per cent.

"Tobacco duty to be eight annas a seer on unmanufactured tobacco; one rupee a seer on manufactured tobacco.

"Exports.—The duty on saltpetre to be two rupees a maund.

"The following articles to be added to the free list :—Imports.—Wool, flax, hemp, jute, maps, prints, works of art, and hides. Exports.—Wool, flax, hemp, jute, hides, tea, and coffee.

"Direct levy of customs duties on Monday next, the twentieth instant, at all ports, according to the above alterations.

"By order of the Right Hon. the Gov. in Council,
"B. H. ELLIS,

"Bombay Castle, Feb. 20, 1860."

The Bombay Gazette has received from Calcutta a special telegram from which we gather the subjoined additional items of intelligence :
Calcutta, Feb. 18.

The Legislative Council met this day to hear Mr. Wilson's financial statement.

The following is a hasty summary of the result :—

The Government propose a general reduction of customs duties to 10 per cent., with the exception of tobacco, and the remission of transit duties upon cotton, wool, &c.

Duties are to be levied on saltpetre, tobacco, mule twist, and opium.

A tax will be imposed upon trades, in classes of one, four, and ten rupees per annum.

There will also be an income-tax of two and four per cent.

The zemindars of Bengal will not be exempted.

The finance minister strongly deprecated the principle of a guarantee on the part of England for the liabilities of India.

THE NEW FINANCIAL SCHEME.

The substance of the long-expected budget is at last before the public, and the general nature of Mr. Wilson's scheme is sufficiently clear to allow the expression of an opinion thereon. The relief afforded by the budget on the one hand, and the imposts it announces on the other, are characterised by sound judgment and policy, and the expectations formed upon Mr. Wilson's appointment are in a fair way, we think, of being realised. The new tariff is based upon a recognition of the importance of removing every fiscal hindrance to the development of our export trade; while the duties on imports, raised spasmodically twelve months ago to three or four times their previous rates, are considerably lowered from twenty per cent. to ten per cent. all round. Most of the great staples of Indian produce are now made free of duty, by the addition of wool, flax, hemp, jute, hides, tea, and coffee, to the former list, comprising cotton, sugar, raw silk, spirits, and tobacco. The exceptions are indigo, grain and seeds, lac-dye, shellac, and saltpetre, the duty upon which last is raised by the new budget from 3 per cent., ad valorem, to two rupees per Indian maund. The principle that rules the exclusion of these articles, with one exception, is the fact that India possesses a virtual monopoly of their supply; and we must express our surprise that Mr. Wilson has sanctioned the continued appearance of grain and seeds (in which the fields of India have to sustain a sharp competition) in the schedule of dutiable exports.

An intention of developing the industrial resources of the country seems again to have suggested the alteration in the import duty upon cotton thread, twist, and yarn, which is henceforth to be ten per cent. instead of five. It is clear that the manufacture of yarn can be carried on in India to almost any extent; but whether an Indian mill could, in the infancy of the speculation, compete successfully with the capital and skill of Lancashire may be doubted. We look, then, upon this approach to a protective system, sinning as it does against principle, with more favour than we might otherwise be disposed to show it. English competition has been fatal to almost every branch of indigenous manufacture, and we cannot but look with interest upon the attempt in this presidency to create a new manufacturing era based upon European ideas. The measure will naturally be distasteful to the cotton-spinners of Lancashire, but we doubt whether Mr. Wilson does not act wisely in the attempt to foster a movement just springing into being in this country. We suppose that we shall now have half-a-dozen new spinning mills started amongst us almost immediately.

In view of the large importations of bullion into India, we have some regret that the duty upon piece goods has not been lowered to the former rate of 5 per cent. It is not at all clear, indeed, that it would not be wise upon this consideration alone to remove the duty upon some of our staple imports wholly. A measure that should arrest the flow of silver to this country would be cheaply purchased, we believe, at the sacrifice of a large revenue. Before dismissing the consideration of the new tariff we must refer at some length to the change in the duty upon tobacco, which is raised from 20 per cent. upon value to eight annas a seer on unmanufactured weed. In addition to the former duty of 20 per cent., however, there was a local impost levied in Bombay of Rs. 7½ per Indian maund. The reader is perhaps aware that the Straits and the United States divide the import trade in tobacco, on this side of India, between them. The value of the unmanufactured weed is in general about half a rupee per lb., and the value of manufactured tobacco about a rupee and a half. Under the former rates, consequently, the duties levied upon an Indian maund in Bombay were as follows :—

MANUFACTURED TOBACCO.
Per Maund of 82 lbs., value, Rs. 120.
20 per cent.	..	..	..	Rs. 24
Local duty	..	..	..	7½

Rs. 31½

UNMANUFACTURED.

Per Maund of 82 lbs., value Rs. 40.
20 per cent.	..	..	..	Rs. 8
Local duty	..	..	..	7½
				Rs. 15½

But it will have been observed, from our telegram of yesterday, that all town and transit duties and frontier tolls are abolished by the new Act, although, strange to say, the local Government seems to have been left in ignorance of the fact. If our information be correct—and we have strong reason to believe it is so—the local duty of Rs. 7½ per maund will no longer be levied, the new and enhanced duty being a communication of imperial and local claims alike. Should this prove to be the case, the Indian maund consisting of 40 seers, the duties leviable in Bombay upon tobacco will be henceforward as follows :—

Manufactured tobacco	..	Rs. 40 per maund
Unmanufactured do.	..	20

The reader must not run away with the notion that this change in the duties upon tobacco is what the advocates of a tobacco tax (ourselves amongst them) have so long been recommending. The import of tobacco into India is next to nothing; it is an excise duty upon the home manufacture and sale that we have recommended as a source of revenue. The whole quantity of tobacco imported into Bombay in the last two years was but a little over 6,000 cwt., and the increase of revenue from the new duty will hardly be worth naming. We are in some uncertainty, however, from the wording of the telegrams which have reached our office, whether Mr. Wilson has not decided upon an excise duty simultaneously with this change in the Customs; should this be the case, a very important source of income, indeed, will be opened.

We come next to the proposed licence tax, and while indisposed to carp at any part of the budget, we are conscious of some regret that the notion of this impost was not wholly abandoned, when it was thought necessary to reduce the rates to an almost nominal amount. The inexperience of levying a one rupee capitation tax upon artificers, in a country where, from the character of the machinery that must be employed to enforce it, so much rascality may be expected, seems manifest. We think it would have been better to have excepted the labouring classes wholly, and to have raised the tax upon wholesale dealers, bankers, and professions, from Rs. 10 to 50 or 100.

We have already noticed incidentally that the budget sweeps away all town and transit duties, and abolishes all the frontier tolls of the country. For this decision we owe Mr. Wilson our hearty thanks. The opprobrium of this barbarism will no longer attach itself to our administration, while few persons but those who have given attention to the subject can form any idea of what these transit duties were, as levied in certain parts of our territories, Nagpore for instance. We shall not trouble the reader with a dissertation upon these mischievous imposts, idly allowed to remain as ten thousand ligatures upon the communications of the country, throughout the administration of the East India Company, in the teeth of assurances at home that they had all been abolished. For Mr. Wilson was reserved the work of cutting through the whole by a single sharp stroke. The fact that the local government seems to have been kept in ignorance of this important measure, is most unaccountable.

It is our own telegram again that conveys the intelligence that a state paper currency is to be introduced. We confess to considerable curiosity upon the nature of Mr. Wilson's proposals on this head. That the fears we have expressed in this journal on the subject of this experiment are justified by the teachings of a sound political economy we entertain no doubt; and we have a confident expectation that Mr. Wilson's scheme will be found to be cautiously framed in view of considerations which must present themselves to the mind of every man who understands the nature of the experiment proposed.

The last and most interesting (if not most important) item of the budget, is the income-tax.

We congratulate the Indian public heartily at the triumph it has gained over the paltry and selfish criticism of the home press upon our opposition to the former bill. The injustice of the principle of that bill is now formally recognised, and the Zemindars and the fund-holders are no longer to be held a privileged class. We believe we may fairly claim some share in the formation of an opinion which at last recognises the hollowness of the pretences upon which the exemption of the property classes of the country was made to rest. The former bill was an insult to the common sense of the community, whose approval it challenged; and the attempt of the home press to bolster the council in the effort to impose it was a contemptible exhibition of selfishness. The tax is to be graduated as follows:—

1. Two per cent. on all incomes from Rs. 200 to Rs. 500 per annum.
2. Four per cent. on all incomes above Rs. 500.

In the levy of the higher rate, three per cent. only is to be used for imperial purposes; the remaining one per cent. is to be devoted to local (we suppose municipal) improvements. We are no great admirers of an income-tax anywhere, although in principle it is, perhaps, the fairest of all taxes. The objections against it are so hackneyed that we forbear to inflame them upon our readers. If we are to have an income-tax at all, however, it were monstrous to exempt the very classes who are its most legitimate subjects. The telegrams are silent as to the machinery by which the tax is to be realised. It is by the detail of the measure, of course, that it will now stand or fall; but we have little doubt that the same sound judgment which has rectified its principle will be found to pervade its detail. Some excitement prevailed in the opium market yesterday, from an intimation, in a telegram received by a contemporary, to the effect that the duty upon the drug was about to be increased. We believe the fact to be, that a determination exists to raise the excise, at no very distant period, from five to six hundred rupees per chest; but the budget certainly comprises no such step.—Times and Standard.

THE HISTORY OF THE MILITARY POLICE.

The Military Police of the North-West Provinces, which in May, 1857, had no existence, now numbers 27,000 men. That force would in England be considered a formidable addition to the army. It would even on the continent be a strong division. In Ireland it would more than double the constabulary. Yet it has grown in India without any action of the legislature, without any formal permission, without any consultation with the military authorities. In all India there are probably not ten men, officials included, who could state accurately the disposition, work, and history of the force.

The idea originated with Mr. Colvin in June, 1857, and the Agra police battalion, commanded by Major G. W. Williams, was the first of the new police corps; the second was formed at Mozuffnugger, and the third at Meerut, where Goorkhas and other hill men were for the first time enlisted. In July the idea was expanded by the introduction of 2,000 Sikhs as mounted police, organised not in regiments but in single troops never exceeding 100 men. It was not, however, till October that the new organisation was adopted as part of the regular machinery of the executive. By that time it had been found that the old police was everywhere either hostile or powerless, and a new scheme based on the necessity of maintaining or restoring order by actual force was finally adopted. It was resolved that a body of police—numbers not fixed—should be attached to each division as it was regained by the army, and keep down the outrages which broke out as soon as the army had passed on. The Meerut, Bolundshuhur, Allyghur, Muttra, and Mynpoorie districts were brought into order; then the entire divisions of Benares and Allahabad were covered by the battalions, and finally Rohilkund, Jubbulpore, and Jhansi were included in the Inspector's jurisdiction. The total force then amounted to 39 district battalions, each consisting of one troop of mounted police (100 men), and four companies of foot police, the whole supported by a depot of double those numbers at the head-quarters of the division. The regiments were organised on the old irregular plan, with a commandant, second in command, adjutant, and a few sergeants, and great care was exercised to prevent the preponderance of any single caste or race in the battalions. Large numbers of low-caste men were at first admitted, but it was found that they were as insubordinate as their superiors, and not half so "soldierly." The footmen were armed with muskets, the troopers with sword and lance, and every effort was made to render them not only effective but well "set-up" soldiers. Indeed it appears from the first to have been the desire of the officers, though not of Government, to render them equal to crack irregular corps. They were of course under no law, but the laws had almost ceased to exist, and every commandant did in his own regiment what was right in his own eyes. The consequence was a very satisfactory strictness of discipline, and an almost total absence of complaint. Every man was free to go if he chose, and any approach to tyranny on the part of the commanding officer was liable to that single but most effectual check. Almost all writers who deprecate severe discipline in the native army find it convenient to ignore this fact. The Indian soldier is the only soldier on earth who is really free. He enters the service at his own discretion, neither coerced by a conscription, nor enticed when half intoxicated. He is free to demand his discharge, except under very exceptional circumstances, and he avails himself of his privilege. Only the other day 100 Sikhs in one regiment claimed and received their discharge at once, because they objected either to oppose their comrades or to volunteer for China.

Throughout 1858 the Military Police Corps did good service as irregulars. The men of the Agra division, for example, captured a field work in Bah Panabut, helped to clear Etawah, dispersed formidable bodies of rebels on the Chumbul, defeated Feroze Shah in his mad rush out of Oude, and aided in one of the most brilliant skirmishes in the pursuit of Tantia Topee. The Allahabad Police Corps took the forts of Madho Singh and Chutturpat Singh, and prevented the flight of the Oude rebels into Allahabad. Whether they have been equally efficient for civil purposes, whether, in fact, the police is not a little too strong for the population, is a question which remains to be decided. It is, however, certain that they have performed all the work formerly demanded of the native army, have furnished guards and supplied treasure escorts, have acted as garrisons in all minor places, and, above all, have enabled the civil officers everywhere to resume and maintain their authority. As a rule, they have been quiet and amenable to orders, and if oppressive have at least contrived to avoid formal complaints of their excesses.

For a time of transition the force was, perhaps, as efficient as could have been devised. Whether it should be maintained is a different question, and one which will probably be settled by a compromise. The corps must do more of the ordinary police work, as the Irish constabulary do, if they are to be kept up. We cannot have one set of armed burkundazes doing police duty, and another set of armed military police protecting the burkundazes. They must do all work save the purely detective, if they are to be maintained at all. It is probable that with their numbers considerably reduced—not by battalions, but the quota of each battalion—and their duties extended, they may be found a most valuable force. The present idea of their officers, however, to make them purely and solely protective, that is, in fact, soldiers without pensions, ought to be peremptorily discouraged. As soldiers with esprit de corps, severe drill, and no daily work, they are just as dangerous as a native army.

For ourselves, in spite of the prejudice now existing, we persist in the belief that firearms are unnecessary to these corps. The sabre for the trooper, the bayonet for the footman, are amply sufficient weapons against disarmed rioters. With the advantage of good horses, discipline, and consequent reliance on each other, they must, without firearms, be more than a match for any bodies of dacoits.

On the few occasions on which greater obstacles are expected, the aid of half a company of European riflemen would supply all deficiencies. We cannot perhaps absolutely disarm Hindostan, but we can extinguish the manufacture, sale, keeping, and use of firearms. We can reduce the peasant in Etah to the condition of the peasant in Suffolk, a man who knows a musket only by sight. It is, however, of little use to forbid the sale of firearms, while we train a hundred thousand natives to their habitual use.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CASHMERE.—The following is from a friend at Jummoo, dated 6th February:—The Maharajah Rumber Singh's camp of escort is lying about two miles in the plains from Jummoo, consisting of two regiments. The meeting between our Viceroy and the Maharajah takes place at Wuzerabad on the 22nd instant, and his highness is making grand preparations for the occasion. His highness was informed that the rich presents which he sent to our gracious Queen, through Mr. Prinsep, under the sanction of the Punjab and Supreme Government, had been very graciously received and accepted by her Majesty, at which his highness seemed much gratified. The Maharajah is fast ameliorating the condition of the cultivators of the soil by reducing the land-tax or revenue in all his territories, at Sambah, Jusrota, Ram Nuggur, &c. His highness has given up large sums, of one third at some places, and proportionately at other places. Unlike his predecessor, he is liberal; his heart is not set entirely on riches. He attends durbar daily, and appears very strict in dealing out justice; of course, in the Oriental fashion, but still there is the will. Nuzzurs and presents his highness never receives, and hates them. He is thinking of establishing a telegraphic line between Jummoo and Cashmere; these and many other benefits he is about to confer on the country he rules. I am able, upon good authority, to state the sums his highness has already reduced from his revenues in the different pergunnahs, viz.—

Pergunnah, Jusrota	.....	1 lakh Rupees.
Sumbah	.....	10,000 "
Busaowlee	.....	10,000 "
Buddho	.....	10,000 "
Ram Nuggur	.....	80,000 "
In the Tahseel of Tow	.....	25,000 "
Pergunnah Ramgur	.....	10,000 "
In Tahseel Khyrah	.....	10,000 "

The above is only a commencement—the other pergunnahs are to benefit in proportion. The late Maharajah had fixed money payments for land-tax, in lieu of the old system of dividing the produce of the lands. The present ruler having for the express purpose made a tour towards Sambah, Jusrota, Ram Nuggur, &c., discovered large portions of hill tracts left uncultivated, and hence he was determined to remedy the evil. Dewan Kirpa Ram having been appointed to the task, has proposed the following, which is now being entertained by the Maharajah:—In places where the zemindars felt the pressure of taxation, in money payments large reductions are being made, and in places where the division of the produce of the soil does not seem to suit the cultivator, who desires to make money payments, and some reductions, his highness, at the dewan's request and suggestions, has granted them freely. In a country where the sovereign is above the law any improvement of the condition of the subject must proceed from the ruler first. I cannot say much regarding the valley of Cashmere, of Greenuggur itself, but it appears that his highness at his next visit will take the subject of its improvement into consideration. But the character of the Cashmeeres for dishonesty and lying is so well-known to all travellers, that it appears, unless a tight hand were held over them, the security and peace of the valley would be endangered.—Lahore Chronicle.

CONFESSION OF CAPTAIN MECHAM'S MURDERER.

—On the 22nd of January Mohabbut Khan was brought into Bunnoo, bound hand and foot, by the members of his own tribe. He had been seized by a body of Wuzerees, headed by the whole of the Mulliks connected with Bunnoo, some fifty miles within the hills. He was forthwith tried by Major Taylor, Commissioner of Leia, and made a clear confession of his guilt, corresponding in a remarkable manner with the accounts brought in by the spies and the general tenor of the evidence of the dhooly-bearers. He stated as follows:—"CONFESSION.—We had started in the evening, 30 in number, from Cherkhunnah—this was nine days before the murder; we were employed in various thefts and robberies; on one occasion had taken a number of cows that belonged to Dreesh Khail (a baheer i. e. kafilah), but the Chigbeh turned out and released them. After this five of us separated, viz., Deen, my half brother, and Mumrez, son of Lohans, Shuddukkee, Yar Good, son of Delassa, Khoja, son of Umzadeen, and myself. We passed a night and a day, and a night and another day in the Chung haze, and the third night we came out on the Thul at about seven at night, and sat down near the road. We at first sat down at a place near a banda where men were looking after their fields. We sat at a distance from them, and under some kereel trees. When evening came on, we went and sat by the road side, some distance on the Bunnoo side of the place where the Sahib was killed. The dhooly came along, and we got up and followed it, and when it arrived at the place where the murder occurred, we fired one matchlock (I fired it) and called out; on this the kuhars ran away. There was a sowar behind the dhooly, but we kept behind him; he fired his carbine, and started his horse off; he came back, however, and hung round us, and fired once again. The other sowar went straight off, and we never saw him. When the kuhars dropped the dhooly, the Sahib began getting out of it, and I ran up and struck him as he was getting out. The Sahib fired his pistol twice, but did not hit any of us; we then closed again, and wounded him again; I struck him four or five blows; the others then came up and struck him." (In answer to further questions the prisoner stated that when he first went up and struck the Sahib several blows he fell down, and then the other four men came up, then the Sahib got up again, and it was then that he twice fired his pistol, and it was about the same time that the sowar came round and fired again, and one of our party ran after him, and he started away on his horse. They then cut the Sahib down.) "The Sahib was first coming out on our side of the dhooly, but we threw stones, and he tried to get out on the other side; I ran round the dhooly and gave him a wound on the shoulder as he was getting out; he ran a little way, I following and striking him till he fell for the first time. We threw a stone each as we attacked, and used them afterwards also at the dhooly. We had five matchlocks, and I had a carabean (shere butcha), and the others had pistols, besides the guns; when the Sahib fired his pistols, and we were still engaged, my brother Deen called out, he has a pistol, take care of yourselves, or words to that effect. I then being behind the Sahib struck him a blow across the back which brought him to the ground. I then went back to the dhooly, and the others remained by the Sahib's body. The deep wound on the neck must have been given when he was down on the ground. I found clothes and some three two-anna pieces, and a vessel like a brass cup and a watch. (From his description it appears to have been an eye glass, or something of the sort.) I got the pistol, it is at my house at Zeendshoro, near the Puserlahpal hill; I was taken at Ahoweegurh. When we saw the dhooly we consulted about killing the Sahib, and some were against it, as they said they might not be able to do it, but I said we should be able to do it." Mohabbut Khan was a known character, and had been once in jail; he was the natural chief of four out of the five murderers, and has been known throughout as the leader of the attack, who himself struck the first and final blow. Ere this he has expiated his crime upon the exact spot where it was perpetrated. Thus swiftly has justice overtaken the principal murderer. According to the graphic narrative of one of the spies, hardly had the deed been done, when Mohabbut Khan and his fellows heard the drum beating in Lutummur, and hurried up the Chung-haze pass; from that hour he has wandered from place to place, from clan to clan, till at length dragged from his hiding-place by his own tribe he has met the fate he so richly deserved, without exciting the sympathy even of his own clansmen.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE MINT.—Two copper counting machines have been constructed by the mint authorities—one for the use of the general treasury, the other for the Calcutta mint. These machines, however, not working quite as well as could be expected, are now to be replaced by some others recently constructed with more improved mechanism. The mint-master has written to the sub-treasurer of Fort William to send two of his officials to the mint office to practice themselves in the modus operandi of these new machines.

MR. D. MACKINLAY.—It is in contemplation by the members of the Chamber of Commerce to give a farewell dinner to their departing chairman, Mr. D. Mackinlay. Such a mark of respect will be as honourable to the givers as it must be gratifying to the recipient, for however members of the mercantile body may differ from his views, all must appreciate the straightforward honesty and activity of his public course.

ETAWAH.—Another find of arms has been made at Etawah—bayonets this time, 53 in number. They might, however, be classed under antiquities, as we verily believe they are some of those first manufactured at Bayonne, and as such, might prove an acquisition to museums, and enable our Government to meet the wishes of the Melbourne authorities for specimens of the arms used by the rebels. Among the arms sent in are several toys. The zealous police conceiving that these are included in the denomination of ordnance, it sometimes happens that they get classed with cannon in the nakshas or returns. The result is a letter from the commissioner, calling for a report as to the punishment inflicted on the possessor of such or such a piece of ordnance; when after a deal of research a reply is sent up stating that the cannon surrendered by Budmash Khan is a toy gun 4 inches long, and that he delivered it up of his own accord, &c.

INDEPENDENT TIPPERAH.—The following is from Kundul, dated Feb. 2:—The Kookees have descended from the Tipperah hills, and have burnt a number of villages in the British territory bordering the hills, have massacred men, women, and children, without discrimination, and have marched off again to the hills with immense plunder. Their atrocities lasted for two days only, and in this short interval they have killed no less than 1,000 individuals. The cause of this outbreak is not yet ascertained, but it will be soon brought to light in the course of investigation already set on foot by the magistrate and the commissioner, both of whom have proceeded to the spot with 500 or 600 armed men. A detachment from the Dacca Battalion is also shortly expected here. The Kookees ought to be hunted out from the hearts of the jungles, captured, and hanged in the presence of the living sufferers. It is said that many of the Tipperahs who used to deal with the men of the Queen's territory at the foot of the hill have been recognised as being among the invaders. This will, no doubt, afford an excellent clue to the tracking out ultimately of the other culprits, whose number is very much exaggerated. Some say their numerical strength is very great (no less than 4,000 ruffians have sworn to throw up the rajah's allegiance), others say only 200 or 300. The latter is more probable. It is certain, however, that the men, whatever their number might be, are acting under the influence of some hill chiefs, of whom there are many in independent Tipperah. We are not acquainted with the actual habits and manners of the Kookees, but it is certain that they are one of those savage tribes whose object is to live on plunder. We hold the Rajah of Tipperah blameless in the matter, but weak and imbecile as he is, he ought to be reminded that when possessing an independent territory no less in extent than Oude or Gwalior, better things are expected of him. We await the result of the investigation. Nothing will escape from the searching eye of a commissioner like Mr. Steer, who, we are sure, will leave no stone unturned in the matter. The annexation of Independent Tipperah will now be, perhaps, brought on the political tapis, but such a measure ought not to be prematurely undertaken until the Rajah's complicity in the matter be fully established.—Englishman.

THE TRIAL OF KHAN BAHADUR KHAN.—The following is from a correspondent at Bareilly:—"The trial of Khan Bahadur Khan closed on Saturday. The prosecutor appeared quite content with the evidence of his witnesses, but all through the trial the judges showed uneasiness. The men placed in the witness-box were generally of an inferior status in society, and there was the remarkable feature that they would mention no witness to the murders, which were openly perpetrated in broad day-light, and in front of the Kotwalees were thousands were assembled, other than those present in court, several of whom had already given evidence in four or five cases. There was a general expectation that the defence might impair the prosecution, and that the prisoner would summon witnesses of respectability to prove that the murders were committed by the rabble, and the revolt by the Pathans of Rampore. But the prisoner filed a written statement, in which were great admissions. He, having had his dinner, by chance went down to the city about twelve o'clock on the day of the revolt, and by chance was joined on the road by one of the leading Mahomedans. After a time he was implored by the citizens to protect the city from plunder by the mutineers, and he as the grandson of his grandfather acted on the prayer. It is quite true that he did hear the Aspinall family had been seized by the rabble, and they were put to death close to the mosque which is near the Kotwalee, but before he (Khan Bahadur Khan) was consulted; they died by the hands of men who held their moneys, and were personally interested in their death. As for fighting the English, who every one said would never return, was absurd, for the Khan Bahadur Khan, it was notorious, went out of Bareilly as their troops marched in, and he never fought at all. The prisoner filed no documentary evidence whatsoever, and gave in the name of four Mahomedan witnesses, who on inquiry were paper men, never having existed in the city of Bareilly. While the judges were shaking their heads and patiently summoning half-a-dozen Hyder Allies and Azeem Oolahs, and confronting them with the prisoner, prisoner himself chewed his opium, and sat at ease with his feet doubled up on the bench, exclaiming 'All these are my witnesses!' He had juggled the court and thrown discredit on the proceedings, and appeared to pride himself on the same, and had succeeded in putting on record no names but those of two Hindoos, one of whom we have delighted to honour. One feature only has been developed during this sham. Respectable men, able to give good evidence to prove the plots before the outbreak, and the deeds of violence on the two first days of the revolt, dread the power of the Mahomedan faction, and studiously keep away from the court. The Mahomedans, by absenting themselves, either as witnesses or spectators, make a sullen demonstration of their feelings. The real plot of the revolt will, so far as this trial is concerned, be in no way ascertained, and all that is remarkable is some rather hard sparring as between the prosecutor and the president, and the reading aloud of several passages in 'Blackstone,' which the President doubted would be found in the later edition of that remarkable work." Previous to the receipt of the above, we learnt by a telegram from Bareilly that the culprit was found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged.—Mofussilite, Feb. 17.

LAHORE, Feb. 16.—The Governor-general, with his monster camp, arrived at Lahore on the 11th, since which time the place has been in a great ferment. The place is full of chiefs of the surrounding districts, and though they were only allowed to bring with them a limited number of retainers, the crowd of followers, in every variety of gaudy costume, and mounted on all sorts of quadrupeds, is something immense. The Governor-general, attended by the Commander-in-Chief, the staff, and local authorities, rode through the civil station early in the morning of the 11th, escorted by a small army, and followed by a multitude of natives of all ranks. The cavalcade was about two miles in length, and seen from a moderate distance had a very pretty effect. On Saturday evening the fort, city, Runjeet Sing's tomb, Husoree Bagh, the bazars and principal buildings of note, were brilliantly illuminated. The Governor-general and staff, accompanied by Lady Canning, attended the display on elephants. Several of these unwieldy beasts got frightened at a burst of fireworks, and thirty or forty of them galloped about in an excited state. Fortunately, however, order was restored pretty soon, but at subsequent pyrotechnic displays the use of elephants has been abandoned. On Tuesday, the 14th, the Governor-general received the principal sirdars and chiefs in grand durbar. Yesterday (Wednesday) the Shalamar Gardens were brilliantly lighted up, and the display was really a splendid one. Great preparations had been going on in the gardens for some time previously. Water had been let into its beautiful tanks and water-courses from the new canal; the fountains were all in order, and played beautifully. Tasteful transparencies were arranged. The trees and flower walks were decorated with coloured lanterns. Three bands of music lent enchantment to the scene, and altogether the affair must be pronounced to have been a great success, quite out-cremorning Cremorne. This evening Lord Clyde reviews the troops at Mean Meer. From the number of soldiers there just now (including the Governor-general's escort) the sight promises to be a good one. Lord Canning will leave this on Saturday, the 18th, for Peshawur by camel carriage-dawk, to meet the Ameer of Cabul and the border chiefs. His Excellency will reach Peshawur in five days, and stay there about as many more, after which he will return to Sealkote (where his camp will await him), and have an interview with the Maharajah of Cashmere. This will probably be the last durbar of the season, as it is said the party will, after leaving Sealkote, proceed to Puthankote, and skirt along the foot of the hills until arrival at Kalka, and thence up the hills to Simla. The Governor-general's visit has caused a rise in some articles of consumption of 30 per cent., so it is fortunate for those of limited means that his lordship's stay is not to be a long one. The consumption of eatables, &c., in the camp is something enormous, and affords our greasy Buniahs a capital excuse for enhancing to famine rates the prices of their commodities. Two poor men were killed the other day at the illumination of the celebrated Sikh temple and tank at Umritsur, by the accidental blowing up of a boat in which were stored quantities of fireworks. I have heard of no serious accident having occurred here.—Bombay Gazette.

OUDE, Feb. 14.—I passed through Mohumdi a few days ago; the few buildings there are of course now in a state of ruin; it was before the mutiny the head-quarters of the district, but now they are at Luckimpoor. I saw the well-known Fiddah Hossain, who has regained his estate, although he joined Mummoo Khan in Lucknow, and fought against us; in fact he only came in last January twelve-month. The history of this man's family, like others in the late Oude Government, shows how by robbing their masters dependants have risen to become large proprietors of landed property. Mohamed Hossain, Fiddah Hossain's father, was a Moonshiee on a low salary to a Resaldar in the King Nusseer-oo-deen Hyder's service, by name Meeroo Khan; this Meeroo Khan was made Chukledar of Gondah and Baraitch districts, and here the Moonshiee got into his master's good graces, for shortly afterwards we find him having the sole control of the district, and appointing his eldest son a tehseeldar under him, and his son, the subject of our memoir, was made an officer in one of the King's regiments. On the Resaldar's death his son succeeded to the Chukledarship, but soon spent his money in debauchery; and then had to resort to the Moonshiee, who refused to advance the son any money. The estate of course fell into arrears in payment to the King, and eventually it was given or sold to some one else. Meanwhile the moonshiee, who had lined his pockets well, bought the chukledarship of Khyrabad and Mohumdi, and Fiddah Hossain went to Lucknow, and received the command of a regiment, with a younger brother as his adjutant. On the annexation a pension of Rs. 200 per mensem was given to him, and when the mutiny broke out at Seetapore, he went to Mr. Ommaney at Lucknow, telling Mr. Ommaney that he would go to Seetapore, where he had great influence, and quiet the district, as well as bury the bodies of the Europeans killed, and erect tombs over them. Fiddah Hossain accordingly went to Seetapore, but instead of quelling the disturbances he joined the rebels, took them to Lucknow, where he formed a regiment, and fought against us. I am told he made very large sums by taking jewellery, money, &c., at this time, under pretence of pay for the men, but which he kept himself. On the fall of Lucknow he went with the Begum to Bowree, but afterwards appointed himself Chukledar of this district. On our forces advancing he fled, and hid himself, and did not come in till January, 1859. He then asked at once that his estate might be returned to him; this was refused, unless he turned informer. He accordingly went to Major Barrow, to Seetapore, and made himself very useful in giving information, finding arms, &c.; for this his estate was restored to him. Another man is Ushraf Ali Khan, also a large landholder close to Mohumdi, who assisted Khan Ali Khan and the Moulvee with money, supplies, and men, and plundered villages all round his place; he went to Shajehanpoor when our troops arrived there, and joined them; but still I look upon both these men as only wanting the opportunity to have been as bad as Jeyloll Singh and others, who killed Europeans. I think you will agree with me in thinking that instead of such men as these being rewarded, it would have looked better if Government had given these estates to the uncovenanted who behaved so well in the Baillie Guard; on reading their petition one cannot but be struck with the injustice done to the "handful of heroes." There are several shooting parties out in the district, of officers from Shajehanpoor, Seetapore, and Lucknow. There are great complaints at Luckimpoor, that there is no surgeon or clergyman; at present there is a sub-assistant surgeon, clever in his way, and service is performed at the deputy-commissioner's. Surely the missionaries in Lucknow could spare one of their number to be stationed there. In a letter received from Fyzabad this morning, dated 11th inst., my correspondent states that on the 28th January, the wife, son, and daughter, and sister-in-law, with several attendants of Rana Bane Madho, arrived there from the Goruckpoor district, and on the 30th, Khan Bahadoor Khan's wife, with a number of other women and eunuchs, who have been with the Begum, sent in from Bootwal; all of these state that Bane Madho was killed in one of the engagements, and Rajah Davie Buksh, of Gondah, died from fever; that the Begum has gone to Nepal, with only eight or ten attendants. On the 9th there had been a serious disturbance, in a quarrel between some burkundazes in the Civil and Military stations. It appears a carpenter in the Barrackmaster's employ was assisted by a burkundaze of the civil lines, but the burkundaze in the barrackmaster's yard would not let the carpenter go. The first man then returned and reported it to the magistrate, who with the Kotwal and some chaprassies went to the godown, and after a skirmish with the burkundazes and workmen, seized the head carpenter, Mehree

Lall, and took him to his house in the civil lines; the whole of the workmen then employed in cantonments resolved to rescue him, and armed themselves with whatever they could lay hands on. They proceeded to the magistrate's house, but he had too many chuprassies armed, and drove them back to their godown, having captured four of the workmen; the magistrate then took his prisoners to the kutchery, where he fined the head mistry Rs. 100, and the others from Rs. 50 to Rs. 25 each. A court of inquiry is sitting to inquire into the case, as the magistrate is said to have exceeded his duty. The Chief Commissioner stayed here a week, and empowered with magisterial rights Rajah Maun Singh to fine as far as Rs. 200, to punish with the cane to twelve dozen lashes, and to have all petitions, &c., presented on stamped paper. Mr. Wingfield left on the 9th for Gondah and Baraitch. I am told, amongst changes to take place, Mr. Lincoln succeeds Captain Clark as Assistant Commissioner of Mohumdi.—Delhi Gazette.

CANPORE, Feb. 15.—The 15th Punjab Infantry Pioneers arrived here yesterday en route to China; they go by rail from this. The Jezailchee Corps, under Captain Tonnochy, passed through some days ago on their way to the Punjab. This morning Sir John and Lady Inglis left Canpoore for Calcutta on their way to Bangalore. A guard of honour, consisting of one company of her Majesty's 54th regiment, with the regimental colour and band, attended at the railway station. All officers off duty were invited to attend yesterday by the brigadier, and Captain Courtenay's battery was sent to the railway station to fire a salute as the train started. The gathering of officers was large, and no one could fail to see how painful it was to Sir John Inglis to say good bye to them. The following Division Order has been issued by the gallant General:—"Head-quarters, Canpoore, 15th Feb., 1860.—Major-General Sir John Inglis, in relinquishing the command of the Canpoore Division, tenders his warmest thanks to all the officers of the Divisional and Brigade Staff for the cordial assistance they have afforded him, and for the readiness they have one and all evinced to meet his wishes on every point connected with their several departments. To Major G. S. Young in particular, as acting-deputy-assistant-adjutant-general, the major-general feels greatly indebted for the very valuable aid he has constantly afforded him, and for his friendly co-operation in carrying out his orders—and he must also express his great satisfaction with the zeal and activity displayed by Captain Maxwell, the acting deputy quartermaster-general in the performance of the duties of his office, which for the last six months at this station have been very arduous. Although Major MacDonald, of the same department, is not now in the division, the major-general cannot refrain from expressing his acknowledgments to that officer for the very able assistance he rendered in superintending the movement of troops at Allahabad the last hot season. To all under his command the major-general bids a hearty farewell, and assures them he shall always rejoice to hear of their welfare and prosperity."

BARRACKPORE, Feb. 6.—Her Majesty's 53rd Regiment received orders this morning to hold itself in readiness to embark for England. The regiment will probably leave about a month hence.

MONUMENT AT HISSAR.—The Honourable the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab has sanctioned the erection of a monument at Hissar, to the memory of the Europeans who were murdered at that station in 1857. The inscription will be headed "Sacred to the Memory of"

(here will follow the names and status of each individual), and at the end simply the words

"Victims of 1857."

The Commissioner of Delhi has been called upon to state whether he can supply marble and stone for the monument from that belonging to the Government, and if so the Lieut.-Governor has sanctioned its being given free of charge.—Delhi Gazette.

AGRA.—The Government are contemplating making some extensive alterations in the fort at Agra, with a view to strengthening its position, and rendering it a valuable stronghold and fortress in a military point of view. The question of the removal of the arsenal from Delhi to Agra is also under consideration, and is intimately connected with the former proposition. The expense of the necessary alterations will be considerable, but the advantages gained will far more than compensate for the outlay. It is, we (Delhi Gazette) believe, settled that a second Queen's regiment shall be stationed here, so that although Agra has been deprived by an arbitrary law of the importance its natural situation gave it as the seat of government of these provinces, it seems that as the principal military stronghold in North-western India it is still to retain the position it has held since Akber's time. The circumstances that regulate the sites of great and important cities are beyond the control of arbitrary or despotic rulers. The position of great cities never has been fixed or altered successfully by the whim or caprice of any monarch. Agra must have been selected originally for the seat of government, for certain causes, which, as they are chiefly dependent on the physical geography of the country, must be in operation still. Nor has the political constitution of surrounding States changed very much since that time. The independent States of Rajpootana, and Central India and the Deccan, with respect to which Agra is of special importance in a military point of view, is very much the same relatively to the British Government as it was to that of the great Mahomedan Emperor, who gave his name to this city. Future history will not accord its approval of Lord Canning's fiat directing the removal of the seat of Government to Allahabad.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS COMMISSION ON LAW REFORM.

The report of the gentlemen appointed by Sir C. Trevelyan to prepare a scheme for the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts has been sent in. It has not been published, but a review of its provisions has appeared in the shape of a minute by the Governor. From this document we are able to extract some at least of the main features of the plan proposed.

The commissioners are of opinion that the amalgamated court should consist solely of barristers and specially trained civilians. The unenvied judicial service and vakeels are excluded. Sir C. Trevelyan deprecates the exclusion, and would throw the seats of the new court open to all trained men. Similarly, in opposition to the commissioners, he would admit native pleaders to practice at the bar. The barristers, he says, will still have the preference, and "it would be hard to deprive the natives of the privilege they have long enjoyed of employing a cheap and rapidly improving, though still generally less efficient description of agency." He would therefore admit all classes, and apparently allow each man to strike his own bargain, and tout for his own practice.

The commissioners recommend a special training for all classes of judges, and in this project Sir C. Trevelyan heartily concurs. He would see the office of registrar revived as a training school for young civilians, and would compel them to "pass the examination for a B.A. degree at the Madras University, and attend the practice of the High Court; after which they should serve for three years in the revenue department, where they would obtain useful knowledge of systems of tenure, and of the manners, habits, and feelings of the people, together with an insight into magisterial duties."

Lastly, the commissioners recommend that the Supreme Court should retain its existing jurisdiction in the Presidency, and that the question of the amenability of the Europeans should be left to future discussion. Sir Charles Trevelyan agreeing to this, hints that the best time to bring them under the local courts will be when they demand the privilege of subjection. "For instance," he says, "the important European and East Indian community, which is rising on the table lands in the western parts of this Presidency, will not long be content to go to Madras on every occasion of an European being tried on a criminal charge, and will demand a competent Local Court, under the supervision of the High Court."

This is the scheme for Madras, published officially, and headed by the journals "Important Minute." It is a most excellent scheme, one indeed which we have had the honour of supporting for the last seven years! The commissioners were to some small extent original, but the commissioners plus Sir Charles Trevelyan have recommended precisely the scheme advocated, or rather sanctioned by the London board. We are not one step further on the road for all the trouble which has been taken, for all the commission which it cost a declaration of independence to create. India, so far as we know, has throughout assented to this plan, and the only obstacles, the resistance of her Majesty's judges, and the difficulty of devising a court competent to get through the frightful labour the scheme will involve, are not overcome.

Now that the report is prepared, what is to be done with it? If the Legislature were willing to take up the matter they would not have shelved it in its old form. The Governor of Madras will probably appeal to Parliament, but Parliament cannot with any decency invest a Legislative Council with power to decide such points, and then set its decision aside. It may give Madras a separate Legislature, but in that case a new chamber could register the Governor's decree just as well on the old report as on the new one.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYDERABAD, Jan. 24.—By my letter of 2nd Jan. I informed you of the sedition of a prince of the royal house of Hyderabad, and told you that I expected the dispute between the Government and him would be adjusted that day. I calculated upon the prince's being starved into concession; but the Nizam would not permit this, nor a cannonade being opened upon his house. The prince's party had shot down more than thirty persons, under circumstances of considerable aggravation. The prince's posts commanded the minister's house, and people were shot within its precincts. They commanded the area of one of the courts of justice and the house of the judge. In the former the sentry on duty was fired upon and wounded, and his son, a lad of sixteen years killed. In the latter two shots were fired at the judge, and two of his servants, standing near him, were wounded by them. Passengers in the streets, and shopmen in their boutiques, were wantonly fired at and killed. In this manner more than thirty persons were put hors de combat. Notwithstanding the atrocity of these proceedings, and that his troops were powerless to act against the prince, the Nizam's instructions to his minister, laconically expressed, and applauded by a party, was, "Do nothing by which you may bring opprobrium upon your fame and affliction upon me." The prince sees his safety and his advantage in his highness's feelings and opinions, and has receded from concessions which he had before made. The minister could apprehend him in a moment, but not without bloodshed. This the Nizam prohibits by a subsequent order. The only resource left to the minister was to starve the prince into subordination. He could not try the efficacy of the measure but for a day—his highness again interfering to prohibit his being starved. We have a sample of this government before us, its nature and habits strongly exemplified by it. Disorder and sedition have existed within the capital for the last twenty days, easily to be put down by the executive, which the Sovereign will not permit being done. Obviously it is no unimportant matter; it is fraught with danger to the lives and property of the peaceable inhabitants, it threatens the minister's person, against which it is directed, it obstructs the work of the Government, and is a nucleus upon which other factions and the disaffected, and what you call Budmashes, may form themselves. There has been some slight movement on the part of the Resident to bring the Nizam's house into order; it has been wholly without result. Colonel Davidson's character is energetic, and if he has proceeded by half measures in this matter, it will only be because he is restricted. It ought not to be forgotten that tumult and insurrection gather strength by time, though there may not be much danger in the present case. The prince's force has gained an accession of eleven Rohillas and five Arabs. The Nizam has given a second order to the minister, "Use your discretion to reduce the prince to terms;" but the adjunct to it is, "take care he does not suffer, and that there be no bloodshed." Curious as the order is, a party of course vindicate the Nizam, inasmuch as they say he has given discretionary power to the minister; and that there is no adjustment yet, is attributable to the minister's incompetency. Concession on the part of the Government would settle the question. The prince is defying, and will concede nothing; but the Nizam is more unwilling to concede to the demands of the prince than he is to authorize any position being assumed by which the prince may sustain injury in his person, or even inconvenience, as witness his injunction that his provisions should not be cut off. Hence all the difficulties of the minister's position. The Nizam's advisers are little aware that by protracting the duration of the disorder they are compelling the British Government to an interference which it is anxious to avoid, and which I wish it had adopted at the commencement. They do not seem to calculate that when interference is forced upon the English Government, it may find it necessary to use some strong measures. Opinions of this nature are foolishness to the people here; they live but for the day. Had the English Government, by unmistakable indications, given the Nizam to understand (which it cannot fail to know how to do) the value it places upon the services of the minister, he would not have suffered from the obstruction to his measures which he meets with at every moment from the intrigues of parties. P.S.—The only son of the insurgent prince left his father's house by stealth at night, and has taken refuge at his cousin the Nizam's; he complains of having received very cruel treatment from his father, and of having been kept penniless. The young man is of age.—Englishman.

THE FRACAS AT TANJORE.—Mr. Cadell has fined Lieutenant Chrystie fifty rupees for assaulting the Tanjore police Ameen, in the case related by us a few issues back. The magistrate admitted that the official in question acted under a misapprehension of his duty when he interfered with Mr. Chrystie, and that it was reprehensible conduct on his part not to give the leopard up to him. No doubt the Ameen was so far obnoxious to blame, but that did not, Mr. Cadell argued, justify the defendant in making the assault complained of. It must be here stated that the Ameen admitted before the magistrate what he denied in the first instance, viz., that it was Mr. Chrystie who shot the leopard, and he even went so far as to allow, that if the animal had been taken to Vellum, as he intended it should be when he refused to deliver it up to the defendant, it would have been lost to him entirely, as the skin, which after all formed the bone of contention, would have been tainted before the leopard could have been brought back. Having found Mr. Chrystie guilty of an unjustifiable assault, Mr. Cadell fined him to the extent mentioned above. That the magistrate was right in his law no one will dispute, whatever might be said of the amount of the fine, considering the provocation given, and that the assault itself was nothing worth speaking of. Fifty rupees for two blows with a light riding stick, every allowance being made for the official position of the party assaulted, may be looked upon as out of all reason, but the "rule in that case made and provided" permitted the infliction, and we willingly concede to the magistrate all the credit attaching to his firm and rigorous administration of the same. Mr. Cadell has also the best of the argument on another score. If fines to be effective at all must be apportioned to the capacity or means of the party punished, where five or ten rupees may not be considered too much in the case of an ordinary mortal, surely fifty rupees is anything but unreasonable in respect to a lieutenant of engineers. So far the conduct of the magistrate may not be open to adverse criticism. His subsequent proceedings, however, deserve the most serious attention. When giving the facts of the collision between Mr. Chrystie and the police, we stated that a most murderous assault had been committed on him by the latter, and that Mr. Chrystie intended bringing the matter before the magistrate when his own trial came on. This charge of assault was accordingly investigated by the same magistrate. Mr. Chrystie was attacked by a large body of the police, numbering some ten or fifteen, sent in pursuit of him by the tahsildar. The police were armed with spears and clubs. They surrounded Mr. Chrystie and seized him, and while one man pinioned his arms behind him, another belaboured him on the head with the butt-end of a spear. One of the blows all but proved fatal. Will it be credited that of these ten or fifteen policemen only two turned up before Mr. Cadell as having been concerned in the assault? They were, however, the principals, and the only parties whom the complainant was able to identify. With respect to the rest, it was difficult to distinguish one man from another, and as no one else of the many policemen who did not take part in the row, but were passive spectators, would come to his aid, the investigation was entered into as against the principals only. The tahsildar himself—the fons et origo of the savage attack—was screened by the interposition of the magistrate. Mr. Chrystie complained that the policemen acted under orders from their head. "That is a mistake," said Mr. Cadell, "the tahsildar gave no orders to seize you: he only said baddingal panne, which means bring back the leopard, and he cannot be made responsible for anything they may have done contrary to his orders." We are not deep enough in the mysteries of the vernaculars to be able to pronounce on the accuracy or otherwise of the interpretation given to the words by the magistrate. We have been told that baddingal panne may mean "settle" or "prevent," or anything else you like; but as the matter may be fairly said to be open to doubt, we shall abstain from all further reference to the tahsildar. The case against the policeman was fully established. Mr. Saville, the apothecary, proved that Mr. Chrystie escaped instantaneous death by half an inch. Mr. Cadell harangued the prisoners on the highly serious character of the offence they had committed, and fined the first man Rs. 30, in default imprisonment for fifteen days, and the second prisoner Rs. 15, or ten days' imprisonment! Contrast these sentences with the penalty inflicted on Mr. Chrystie. The two ruffians will not pay the fines, and so after a couple of weeks' duration will resume their occupations as limbs of the police, all the better for the temporary respite permitted them. The outraged dignity of a native chief of police is set down at Rs. 50, while the life of a European gentleman is not valued at half the figure. We cannot take leave of the subject without mentioning that the Ameen has just had his pay raised from Rs. 60 to Rs. 175 per mensem, and that the tahsildar, under the new talook arrangements, will in a couple of weeks be promoted to a post worth Rs. 250 a month.—Englishman.

AN UGLY AFFAIR.—A singular case affecting the character of a Captain Griffin, of the 3rd Madras Europeans, has been attracting attention in the North West, and given rise—as it well might—to considerable speculation concerning that officer's character. Captain Griffin was charged some time since with forging an endorsement to a hoondee made payable to a Lieutenant Griffin of the Bengal force. Captain Griffin affirmed that the hoondee had been made over to him by a Lieutenant Turner, R.A., in payment for a gold watch that he had sold him. It turned out, however, that there was no such man as Lieut. Turner in Bengal, and Captain Griffin suddenly identified a Mr. Callaghan (formerly in the army, and now in the employ of Messrs. Palmer & Co., of Allahabad) as the person who had bought the watch of him under the name of Turner. Mr. Callaghan is held to have established a satisfactory alibi before the magistrate and is acquitted, while very strong opinions are expressed for and against Captain Griffin in this strange business in the North West journals. By one party he is held to be the undoubted forger of the endorsement, while the charge is scouted by the other. The case can hardly rest where it now is, but must lead to further investigation.

THE "PEARL."—A little after noon on the 7th February the town was startled by the exhibition of signals from the flagstaff, that a fire had broken out on board the British barque Pearl, of 346 tons, Captain Bowery, bound for London with a cargo of oil, and was to have sailed the same night. The moment the danger was known on shore, the commander of the vessel and the master attendant pushed off to render assistance, but before they could reach her, and bring the benefit of their joint experience to bear upon the danger, the vessel was seen from shore under canvas, free from her anchorage, and standing towards shore northward of the entrance of the harbour. We understand that ere anyone could board her, the vessel had been scuttled, and already touched the ground. From that time every assistance was rendered in men and boats, and every effort made to subdue the fire, which defied all exertions, and soon broke out in flames high above the deck. To prevent the fire from communicating to the newly-tarred rigging, two lower masts were cut away. A portion of the upper deck in midship, and several beams were destroyed, but at the flow of tide, the water having reached within a few inches of the upper deck, it subdued the fire without further exertions of those on board; only a portion of the decks continued smouldering till the next morning. The vessel is now lying about a mile to the north of the port, in about 10 feet of water, and we hear some hopes are entertained of getting her afloat. Nearly the whole of the cargo will be saved. No clue has yet been obtained as to the origin of the disaster. It is lamentable to think that this is the third case of the kind which has occurred at this port during the last four years, and on every occasion on the very eve of the vessel's departure.—Cochin Courier.

H. M.'s 81st Foot.—The following officers and details of H. M.'s 31st Foot have proceeded by the following vessels to China:—Per H. M.'s steamer Assaye: Capt. Mitchell, Capt. McGregor, Lieut. G. Gardiner, and Assistant-surgeon C. Giraud, in medical charge, and 260 men, under the command of Major C. Swaffield. Per transport ship Earl of Clare: Captain S. Christian, Captain J. Harcourt, Lieut. G. Hamilton, Lieut. A. Jebb, Ensign A. Dangell, Ensign J. Wood, and Assistant-surgeon W. Grant, in medical charge, and 340 men, under the command of Major Eager. Per H. M.'s steamer Victoria: Captain T. E. Sweetenham, Lieut. C. McIntyre, Ensign R. Huxham, Ensign F. Buller, Ensign A. Gow, and Assistant-surgeon B. Giraud, in medical charge, and 226 men, under the command of Captain W. F. Macbean. Per transport ship Athlete: Captain G. Baldwin, Lieut. F. Cassidy, Lieut. R. F. Gould, Ensign W. Tibbitts, Ensign A. Mayward, Lieut. and Adjutant W. H. James, Quarter Master C. Kettles, Surgeon Watkinson, in medical charge, and 350 men, under the command of Lieut.-colonel and Brevet-Colonel F. Spence.

TROOPS FOR ADEN.—The details of H. M.'s 4th European Regiment, consisting of Ensigns W. Freeman, R. Bayly, and G. Sweny, and Assistant surgeon P. Kearny, in medical charge, and 207 rank and file, under the command of Captain T. P. B. Forster, were to proceed to Vaux Tomb, at the mouth of the Taptee, in the P. and O. steamer Norna, on the 25th Feb. The right wing, consisting of Captains F. Sheppard, C. P. Stokes, J. Howley, and J. Constable; Lieutenants C. E. Breton, F. Burrige, C. R. Hammond, C. E. Billing, and C. R. Durrant; and Assistant-surgeon J. Aikin, in medical charge; and 350 rank and file, under the command of Major F. Martin, were to embark from thence on board the Norna, and proceed to Aden. The steamer Pleiad left on the 24th for the mouth of the Taptee, to embark the wing on board the Norna.

H. M.'s 14th DRAGOONS.—The Commander-in-Chief has issued the following farewell address to H. M.'s 14th Dragoons, on leaving India for England:—Her Majesty's 14th (the King's own) Light Dragoons will embark for England by detachments on the 11th and 18th February, and the Commander-in-Chief while congratulating the regiment on its return home, after a long tour of duty in India, desires to record the highly honourable and gallant service rendered by this distinguished corps since its return to this Presidency from Bengal. The breaking out of the war with Persia altered the destination of the regiment from England to that country; on its return from that campaign, the regiment landed in Bombay, and was hastily despatched on field service to aid in the suppression of mutiny and rebellion in Central India. The distinguished and gallant conduct of the regiment in that brilliant but arduous campaign are matters of history, and won for it the frequent and well-deserved praise and applause of their distinguished Commanders, Colonel Sir Charles Stuart, and Major-general Sir Hugh Rose. Her Majesty has been pleased to acknowledge the brilliant service of this regiment by the distinction and promotions bestowed upon the officers whose noble leading has been so frequently noticed in the public despatches. In saying farewell to all, the Commander-in-Chief wishes the regiment a speedy and prosperous voyage home, and a happy meeting with long absent friends.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JOHN MICHEL, K.C.B., who is appointed to the command of a division of the British army in China, arrived in Bombay on the 24th February, from Mhow, accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel Elkington, A.B.C.

LIEUTENANT T. H. OUCHTERLONY, of the Regiment of Artillery, has been appointed Aide-de-Camp on the personal staff of his excellency the Commander-in-Chief, with effect from the 1st of February.

THE 3RD REGIMENT N. I. have sailed for China, as follows:—Per H. M.'s steamer Dalhousie, Commander Hopkins, Lieutenants W. Bannerman, H. Mason, Chapman, J. R. Strut, and Ensign Hunter, and 370 men under the command of Brevet-Major H. Richards, having in tow the ship Jumsetjee Seejeebhoy, Commander Cottier, Captain W. Neale, Lieutenants J. P. Forbes, H. Sandwith, Ensign G. Kennedy, Assistant-surgeon F. Joyant, in medical charge, and 370 men under the command of Captain C. F. Grant. Per H. M.'s steamer Prince Arthur, Lieutenant Twynam, Commander, Captain Grant, Lieutenant A. Bell, Ensign W. Yates, under the command of Captain R. Richards. The remainder, five European officers and 342 men, will arrive by this morning's train, and embark immediately in H. M.'s steamer Prince Arthur, which will proceed to Vingorla, to take on board a detail of the 5th N.L.I., consisting of Lieutenant J. R. Ramsay, Ensign R. G. Stratton, and 194 men of the 5th Regiment N. L. I., under the command of Lieutenant M. R. Haig.

HOMEWARD BOUND.—The second division of the 14th Light Dragoons, and a detail of time-expired men of H. M.'s British regiments, as follows, embarked in the ship Speedy, for England, on the 13th, and sailed on the 15th February:—2nd division 14th Light Dragoons, Major Thompson, Lieut. Jackson, Cornet Pritchard, 96 men, 2 women, and 2 children; 3rd Dragoon Guards, 5 men; 6th Inniskillings, 1 man; 7th Dragoon Guards, 4 men; 7th Hussars, 3 men; Royal Artillery, 10 men; 4th Regiment of Foot, 20 men, 4 women, and 6 children; 7th Regiment of Foot, Lieut. Lloyd, and 6 men; 18th Regiment of Foot, 10 men; 24th Regiment of Foot, 7 men; 31st Regiment of Foot, 5 men; 33rd Regiment of Foot, 1 man; 40th Regiment of Foot, 1 man; 51st Regiment of Foot, 4 men; 52nd Regiment of Foot, 12 men; 56th Regiment of Foot, 31 men; 57th Regiment of Foot, Lieut. Tragett, and 6 men; 70th Regiment of Foot, 33 men; 72nd Regiment of Foot, 15 men; 79th Regiment of Foot, 6 men; 81st Regiment of Foot, 14 men; 83rd Regiment of Foot, 10 men; 93rd Regiment of Foot, 10 men, 1 woman, and 3 children; 95th Regiment of Foot, Lieut. Cubitt, 13 men, 3 women, and 4 children; 98th Regiment of Foot, 6 men: total, 320 men, 10 women, and 15 children.

LORD ELPHINSTONE ON OATHS.—In a Minute on oaths and affirmations Lord Elphinstone considers "that to recur to superstitious oaths would be a retrograde movement, and he would prefer a fair trial of the experiment of whether by more summary and severe punishment the administration of justice cannot vindicate itself rather than the handing about of phials of Gangetic fluid in a British court of justice." He ascribes the frequency of perjury in our courts to our complicated system of law, which is not suited to Asiatics, and to the liability of judges, being foreigners, to be imposed on by false evidence. The Minute concludes thus:—"We tell a man who knows that he is guilty, to plead not guilty, and we teach him that by telling a lie he is likely to escape punishment."

GROSS MISMANAGEMENT SOMEWHERE.—The Dudbrook, whose arrival in Bombay harbour is reported, had on board 255 souls. The number embarked at Southampton was 296, and there have been two births on board. The number of deaths, therefore, has been 43—one adult female, 36 children between one and twelve years of age, being 25 per cent. of the whole number, and six infants, all the infants, in fact, under one year who were on board. Included in the above 255 are 134 married women, and 106 children. The causes of this dreadful mortality ought to receive the most searching investigation. The Eurine arrived at Madras the other day reporting some 76 deaths of women and children in the same day. We are sure the Government will institute a proper inquiry into this most lamentable story. It is incredible that were proper arrangements made for the transport of these families a mortality so terrible should have occurred.

ANCESTORS WANTED.—Any officer who cannot boast a long pedigree had better not either join or quit his regiment or get promoted in Bombay, as the journals of that Presidency are most industrious in hunting up all about the ancestry of people in the service. Thus Captain Fairfax, of one of H. M.'s Corps, arrives at that Presidency, and the public are forthwith informed that he is descended from Lord Fairfax of Commonwealth fame! Nor is this confined to the cases of military officers. Dr. Macdougall, the Bishop of Labuan, arrived at Bombay the other day, a passenger by one of the P. and O. Company's steamers, and a day or two afterwards his lordship's whole history from his school days down appeared in print. These notices are very pleasant reading, but we should feel obliged if our contemporaries would state how they come by the information on which they are based.—Phanix.

H. M.'s 64th REGT.—We have much pleasure in congratulating Quarter-master Serjeant Alexander Ross on his promotion to be quarter master of the corps to which he has for many years belonged, H. M.'s 64th regiment. This appointment could not have been conferred on a more deserving soldier in the corps, and we cordially wish Mr. Ross many years' happiness to enjoy the situation bestowed upon him by her Majesty.—Sind Kossid.

MAJOR HUTCHINSON, political agent at Sehere, is about to proceed to England. Major Mc Mullin is to act for him in his absence, and Major Ashbourne will act for Captain Shakespear until the return of the latter to India.

REDUCTION OF ABKAREE TAX.—In answer to a memorial from owners of toddy tree plantations against the recent increase of the abkaree tax in Bombay, the Government has resolved to lower the duty from Rs. 9 to Rs. 6 a year on cocoanut trees, being still an increase of 100 per cent. on the former rate, and the duty on other trees in similar proportion.

MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE.—The Rev. Jos. Taylor, formerly of the London Society's Mission in Guzerat, now in connection with the Irish Presbyterian Mission, has arrived in Bombay on his way to Borsad. The Rev. Mr. Corbold, after having transferred the Mission property and the care of churches to the Rev. Mr. Montgomery, has come to Bombay on his way to England. If permitted to return to this country, he will probably go to some other part of India, occupied by the London Society. The Rev. R. Stothert, missionary of the Free Church of Scotland, has arrived from England. He proceeds to Nagpore.—Guardian.

MR. CRAWFORD, the senior magistrate of police, having been granted three months' privilege leave of absence, takes his departure for England by the present mail steamer. This is well understood to be merely a preliminary step to his final retirement from the bench. Speculation is already rife as to the name of his successor; and we are not without hope that the choice of the Government may fall on Mr. J. F. Hore, the excellent judge of the Small Cause Court, whose accurate and impartial decisions give general satisfaction. It is especially desirable at present that Mr. Hore should be appointed to this post, because he is willing to carry out the scheme of the director of public instruction for admitting native students of law to practise in our courts.—Bombay Gazette.

GUN-BOATS FOR CHINA.—It has been resolved to despatch the four gun-boats that were recently put together at Keeamaree for service on the Indus to China, where they will be found most useful in carrying on operations against the enemy in the many shallow creeks that are inaccessible to vessels of a large draft of water. It is said that each of them will be commanded by an acting master of H. M.'s Indian navy who has been employed for a certain length of time in the navigation of the river.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—Mr. F. J. Candy, who lately arrived here from England, assumed charge of his duties as professor of applied science in the Elphinstone college on the 9th Feb.

Ameer replied that he wished to send Shere Ally Khan to take charge of the gold mine at Kandahar. The Sirdars stated that Shere Ally Khan had just returned from Kandahar, and it was unjust to send him there again. The four Sirdars and the Ameer consulted for some time, and resolved to send Nasir Naem Khan and Mahomed Rufeek Khan to Kandahar, in place of Shere Ally Khan. Rumour has it that the mine produces 1 maund (Tubraze), equal to 4 seers English weight of gold daily. The Ameer ordered Naem Khan and Mahomed Rufeek Khan to go and inquire at Kandahar whether this was a fact.—Dec. 22.—Some silk merchants having arrived from Bokhara, I asked them to give me some news regarding the doings at that place. They replied that the King had entertained some Russians in the disguise of silk merchants, who had come on pretence of purchasing silks from Bokhara. He had represented to them that he had sent several embassies to Mahomed Afzul Khan (son of Dost Mahomed Khan) to surrender Koondooz to him, but that Mahomed Afzul Khan (Governor of Koondooz) had refused to do so. It is reported that the Dost treats the people of Koondooz with great severity. It is also in contemplation by the Dost to invade Badhakshan (a territory belonging to the King of Bokhara). The King of Bokhara told the Russian spies that it is his intention to guard against this invasion, and to make arrangements for keeping the Cabbules off from coming near Badhakshan. The Russian spies observed that the King of Bokhara had neglected to inform the Czar of Russia at the time that Dost Mahomed had invaded Koondooz; and that if the Czar of Russia had been made acquainted with the Dost's designs, he would not have permitted the Ameer or any other nation (meaning the English) to take Koondooz. And that if he wished it, they would inform the Czar of Russia, and he would, even now, make arrangements for the recovery of Koondooz from the Dost. The agents from Russia accordingly wrote to the Czar regarding the King of Bokhara's wishes.—Dec. 23.—Nazir Mahomed Naem Khan, and Mahomed Rufeek Khan came to the Dost to pay their respects, as they were proceeding to Kandahar, to assume charge of that station. The Dost took them into a separate tent, and advised them not to listen to what Ameen Khan would tell them, but to exercise their own influence and efforts in keeping the country in good order and tranquillity. He also admonished them to find out the precise quantity of gold the mine yielded; and to guard against the evil advices of Ameen Khan, ex-governor of Kandahar. They then left the Dost, and having bid good-bye to some of their friends, started for Kandahar.—Dec. 24.—Mahommed Hussan Khan, Hakim of Cabul, wrote to the Dost, stating that he had received a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan, from Kandahar (the bearer being a slave boy). The Dost having perused Mahomed Ameen Khan's letter, was much displeased, and kept silent for some time. The Dost took the boy aside, and asked him to state what he knew of occurrences in Kandahar. The boy replied that it is rumoured in Kandahar that a force of 10,000 men had arrived in Mashudda-Mookuddas, and having left it, had marched to Herat; and that it is their intention to come to Kandahar, and take possession of it, on account of its gold mine. It is also asserted that three spies, who have arrived at Kandahar, are Russians, come from Herat in the disguise of merchants. This circumstance was reported to Mahomed Ameen Khan, who arrested them and confiscated all their property and merchandise, and informed the Ameer of the transaction. This news was communicated to the Dost by the slave-boy. The Dost having finished his conversation with the boy, started for Numlah, and arrived there about 12 o'clock, where Mahomed Oosman Khan had pitched a tent for the Ameer in a garden.—Dec. 25.—The Dost ordered the architect attached to the garden in which he was encamped to erect two handsome buildings, one on the north, and the other on the south side of the garden.

Return Home of the 14th Light Dragoons.

Bombay, Feb. 10.

H.M.'s 14th (the King's Own) Light Drags. will embark for England by detachments on the 11th and 13th inst., and the C. in C., while congratulating the regt. on its return home, after a long tour of duty in India, desires to record the highly honourable and gallant service rendered by this distinguished corps since its return to this presy. from Bengal.

The breaking out of the war with Persia altered the destination of the regt. from England to that country. On its return from that campaign, the regt. landed in Bombay, and was hastily despatched on field service to aid in the suppression of mutiny and rebellion in Central India. The distinguished and gallant conduct of the regt. in that brilliant but arduous campaign are matters of history, and won for it the frequent and well-deserved praise and applause of their distinguished commanders, Col. Sir Charles Stewart, and Maj. general Sir Hugh Rose.

Her Majesty has been pleased to acknowledge the brilliant service of this regt. by the distinctions and promotions bestowed upon the officers, whose whole leading has been so frequently noticed in the public despatches.

In saying farewell to all, the C. in C. wishes the regt. a speedy and prosperous voyage home, and a happy meeting with long-absent friends.

Naval Etiquette.

Commodore's Office, Bombay, Jan. 17.

The following rules for the guidance of officers com. vessels of the I.N. in company with those of the R.N. are to be strictly carried out:—

Whenever an officer commanding a vessel of H.M.'s I.N. falls in with a vessel of the Royal Navy commanded by an officer superior in rank to himself, he is invariably to wait upon such superior officer without loss of time and pay his respects to him, communicating generally on what service he is employed.

Whenever any vessel or vessels of H.M.'s I.N. may be in company with vessels of the Royal Navy, the senior officer of which is superior in rank to the senior officer of H.M.'s I.N. present, the time of such superior officer is to be kept, and his routine with regard to hoisting colours and firing the morning and evening gun is to be invariably observed and followed.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE.

THE old feud between the official and non-official English residents in Bengal, which appears to have lain dormant during the all-absorbing excitement of the late military revolt, has again broken out in Calcutta. In the absence of the official correspondence on the subject, it is in our power to give only a one-sided statement of the case, but so strongly corroborated by circumstantial evidence that it may be regarded as substantially correct. There is, certainly, more than sufficient proof of the unhappy jealousy that divides the two classes, and which can have no other effect than to weaken the hands of the Government, and that in a country inhabited by a hostile race, ever on the watch to profit by the errors of its rulers. There where, of all places in the world, common interests should most closely bind together all members of the great Anglo-Saxon family, do we find the most bitter jealousy and heart-burnings, and the widest severance of opinions and sentiments. The time may have been when it was not unnatural that the responsible servants of the East India Company, often sore beset in maintaining the authority of their princely masters, should have viewed with no friendly eye the somewhat reckless proceedings of the adventurers who, moved by the indomitable energy of their race, successfully strove to establish themselves in a still unsettled country, and among a people entirely alien to them in laws, language, religion, and social usages. But such a feeling has long since become an anachronism. Both men and circumstances have undergone a complete change during the last quarter of a century. Now-a-days the planters are gentlemen by character and education, and, excepting in official position, in every way the equals of the covenanted servants of the Government. In some respects, indeed, they are superior to the latter. For instance, they possess a more thorough and intimate knowledge of native habits, manners, and modes of thought, and are consequently more able to form a correct judgment of the actual position of Europeans in the country. Owing to this more perfect acquaintance with the people among whom they live, they have all along been sensible of the thinness of the ice which conceals the fatal whirlpool destined sooner or later to engulf the heedless officials who now, ever and anon, perform such fantastic evolutions on the shining but slippery surface. It is the conviction of the innate corruption of the natives, their total want of principle, and deep-seated hatred towards their rulers, which has filled the mercantile and industrial European community with such horror and dismay whenever it has been proposed to invest native magistrates with jurisdiction over themselves in criminal cases. They have suffered enough from their gross partiality in civil actions not to dread being placed under the power of their irreconcilable enemies in matters affecting the liberty of their persons as well as the contents of their purse. More than once the attempt has been made to introduce what the non-official residents with bitter scorn designate as "The Black Acts;" but hitherto the determined attitude assumed by them has deterred the Government from driving them to desperation. There can be little doubt that, if such a criminal folly be ever perpetrated, the most respectable European residents in the Mofussil will dispose of their property at any sacrifice, and withdraw from a country where personal security is denied to them. And yet, in face of all this, and notwithstanding a long experience of the native character, Mr. Sconce, the member for Bengal, has chosen the present moment for a revival of this insane agitation. The remonstrances of Sir Bartle Frere, indeed, prevailed upon him to withdraw his motion for the present; but there appears to be much reason to apprehend that he will return to the attack at no very distant period. The ostensible motives which have actuated Mr. Sconce to insult his countrymen are traced by himself to a curious affair that occurred near Ranee-gunge about eight months ago, and which is sufficiently suggestive to be described at some length.

It came to light in August last that the dewan of the Bengal Coal Company had illegally confined three defaulting ryots in a godown or warehouse. On being made acquainted with this circumstance Mr. Alexander, the acting magistrate at Ranee-gunge, summoned to his court—not Beharee Lall, the dewan, who alone was accused, but—Mr. Lord, the company's superintendent. The magistrate himself admits that no charge had been instituted against that gentleman. "It is true," he says, "that neither the plaintiff nor his witness asserts that he was seized or confined by Mr. Lord's order, or that he was taken before Mr. Lord previous to his being shut up, but nevertheless I consider I am bound to act by what I heard and saw in the matter." The only apparent ground that existed for the conclusion at which Mr. Alexander so hastily arrived was the fact that the key of the godown was kept in Mr. Lord's house—as if the dewan could not have invented a dozen plausible excuses for obtaining it. However, Mr. Lord's complicity being held to be thus established, he was summarily fined 300 rupees in each case, or 900 in all, of which 50 rupees were given to each sufferer. The fine was, of course, immediately paid, and notice duly given of an appeal to a higher court. It will scarcely be credited, but there is no doubt of the circumstance, that upon this Mr. Alexander employed the public-crier to "tom-tom" through the district that any one who would come forward to give further evidence against Mr. Lord should be protected from all annoyance; but, to their credit be it said, not a single native responded to this insidious invitation. Mr. Lord's appeal was naturally successful, and an order was issued that the amount of his fines should be returned to him; but it does not appear that any reprimand was administered to the officious and indiscreet magistrate, so eager to strain the law against his own fellow-countryman. Foiled in this instance, Mr. Alexander proceeded with all the more zeal against those who were really accused. According to the Englishman, "these were Beharee Lall, the dewan of the Coal Company, the Chuprassie who was found standing at the door of the godown, and four of the company's servants employed in collecting the rents and other management of Kejarah, one of the company's villages." Now, it should be premised, had the defaulting ryots been detained in July no offence would have been committed, but a new Act came in force in the beginning of August which rendered any such detention illegal. Under such circumstances it might have been thought by most persons that a nominal punishment for the first offence under the new order of things would amply have satisfied the ends of justice. But Mr. Alexander was of a different opinion, and moved by a fervent philanthropy he determined to vindicate the majesty of the law with a high hand. The evidence, indeed, was not very clear, but that is a matter of very secondary importance where a conviction is a foregone conclusion. So far as the case is before us it seems that a ryot repaid in person to Mr. Alexander, and complained that he had been confined against his will in one of the Coal Company's godowns. At the preliminary inquiry he stated that the four collectors had asked him to accompany them to Ranee-gunge, that he assented to their request, and on the road met a friend whom he engaged to transact some business for him during his absence from home, and that at a certain point on the road the defendants left him, after which he proceeded in company with some other persons to the Company's premises. No charge whatever was made against the latter parties, but the collectors, who had used no manner of restraint whatever towards the plaintiff, were actually prejudged in their absence and committed for trial.

The case then passed into other hands, but Mr. Alexander's successor was worthy to walk in his footsteps, and short work was made of the defendants. The dewan was condemned without a hearing, and without any attempt at identification, to six months' imprisonment, and a similar sentence was passed on the four collectors, though the charge of illegal detention was in no way brought home to them. This strange decision was also appealed against, when Mr. Russell, the Sessions Judge at Buncoorah, commuted the sentence on the rent-collectors from six to three months' imprisonment, and declared that the dewan had been illegally convicted. "Ah! then justice, after all, was fairly administered." Your pardon, gentle reader. The dewan having been condemned illegally was not therefore acquitted. On the contrary, he was sent back to be tried a second time for the same offence; and on again appearing before the magistrate the latter asked the plaintiffs if this were Beharee Lall; and when they answered in the affirmative, the unfortunate dewan was ordered into confinement. Subsequently, bail was accepted in the sum of Rs. 4,000 hard cash, deposited in Court; but Beharee Lall was nevertheless compelled to be in attendance at Cutcherry every day from ten A.M. till five P.M. Such is Mofussil justice; and when on the appeal the prisoner's counsel, Mr. Doyne, insisted that the conviction was against the express forms of law, the Government prosecutor—that is, the magistrate who had committed him—is said to have replied that that was of no consequence, because, "if such a principle of adherence to forms of law were allowed to prevail, the public business would never be got through." In one respect, indeed, this case may be thought to prove too much. Is it possible that native magistrates could commit greater blunders, or be guilty of greater oppression, than these European mal-administrators of the law? The only true remedy for such an intolerable state of things is the requirement of a judicial training on the part of all civilians who aspire to magisterial functions. We are not unaware of the importance of the local knowledge acquired in the revenue department, but there can be no reason why a certain period of time should not be so employed before judicial, or even magisterial, functions are placed in the hands of those who prefer that department to the other. As things now are, the European community is inflamed by hatred and contempt of men who know nothing of law, and who care still less for equal justice, and these feelings are participated in by the natives, though in a higher degree. But arms will never long avail where the "toga" is despised.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE NAWAB OF THE CARNATIC.

Mr. SMOLLETT rose to ask the Secretary of State for India, if he would consent to lay upon the table of the House a copy of a despatch from the Governor-general of India, dated the 14th day of November, 1855, and copies of letters from the Government of Madras, respectively dated the 12th day of October, the 20th day of November, and the 4th day of December, 1855, reporting the death of his Highness the Nawab of the Carnatic on the 7th day of October, 1855; and copy of a despatch from the Court of Directors of the East India Company replying to these communications, announcing that the dignity of the nabobs of the Carnatic had expired, and that the treaties which secured the rights and title of the family of the nabob were at an end. The hon. gentleman stated the circumstances, that the late Nawab died in 1855, leaving no issue, that his uncle, who was his nearest heir, applied to succeed him, but that, after some correspondence, the Court of Directors, acting on the report of the Governor-general, decreed that the title was extinct. Lord Dalhousie, in his minute of his seven years' administration, took credit to himself for this extinction of the dignity, contending that the treaty which invested the grandfather of the late Nawab was one made personally with himself, and that his successors were invested with the title only by the grace and favour of the company. He (Mr. Smollett) contended, on the other hand, that the treaty was not made a personal one, but was made with the family, and made the title hereditary. He quoted extracts from the treaty to prove this, and concluded by asking the question.

Sir J. FERGUSSON said he believed there was no treaty in existence which established the hereditary right of the uncle of the late Nawab of the Carnatic to the dignity which had been held by his nephew; and he could not help expressing his regret that his hon. friend should have taken that opportunity of directing an attack against the Indian administration of Lord Dalhousie.

Sir C. WOOD stated, in reply, that he was prepared to lay before the House not only those despatches, but all the papers connected with the subject. He thought he had a right to complain of the extraordinary and, he hoped the hon. gentleman would forgive him for adding, the unfair course which the hon. gentleman had pursued upon that occasion. The hon. gentleman had merely given notice that he would ask whether there would be any objection on the part of the Government to produce certain documents, and upon that notice he had founded an attack on the Government of Madras and on the Government of India, but more especially on the administration of Lord Dalhousie. The natural result was that he (Sir C. Wood) was not prepared at that moment to answer the charges put forward by the hon. gentleman. He could then only express his belief that Lord Dalhousie could not have been guilty of such conduct as the hon. gentleman had imputed to him; and upon due notice he would be ready to enter into a detailed consideration of that subject.

THE INDIAN NATURAL HISTORY COLLECTION.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary of State for India whether the natural history portion of the Indian Museum had been offered to the British Museum. He could state that he had himself contributed a portion of the Indian collection, and that he had given it not to the Imperial Government but to his former masters, the East India Company. He had also to ask the right hon. baronet whether it was true that a telegraphic communication had been received by him from Calcutta in six days?

Sir C. WOOD said he had to inform his hon. and gallant friend and the House that he understood the natural history portion of the British Museum was about to be removed from its present site; and as it was desirable that that great collection should now be made as complete as possible, he had thought it right to offer its managers such portions of the Indian Museum—which after all was but an imperfect one—as they might require for the attainment of that object. In reply to the second question of his honourable and gallant friend, he had to state that he believed the telegraphic communication was complete between Calcutta and Alexandria; but that there seemed to be a break in the line at some point in Europe, and probably either at this side of Alexandria or at Malta. He had not himself received a telegraphic communication from Calcutta within the space of six days; but a communication from Calcutta had that day been received in the City dated the 10th of March, and which had not, therefore, occupied more than that time in the transmission.

THE TRADE OF CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. W. EWART said he wished to inquire of the Secretary of State for India whether the Indian Government were adopting any means for the extension of our trade with Central Asia. He believed it was very desirable that a trade should be opened with that portion of the world through Thibet. Russia was greatly extending her commerce in that quarter, and he had no doubt that on fair terms we should be able to compete successfully with her in that market.

Mr. W. EGERTON had to put a question to the Secretary of State for India relative to the trade with Central Asia. He wished to ask the right hon. gentleman whether the road which was begun by Lord Dalhousie, from India to Central Asia, through Simla, was yet completed.

Sir C. WOOD stated in reply that the question put by his hon. friend the member for Dumfries (Mr. Ewart), with respect to our trade with Central Asia, was a matter, no doubt, of great importance, and had not escaped the attention of the authorities either in India or in this country. He had that morning had a conversation with Sir John Lawrence, who had lately filled the position of one of our Indian administrators with such distinguished ability, not only in war but also in peace, and he had been informed by him that every possible effort had been made of late to open a communication between India and Central Asia, from which such large quantities of wool were to be obtained. He found that the value of the wool exported from the port of Kurrachee, which had amounted in the year 1853-54 to £180,000, had risen to £303,000 in the year 1857-58. Some years ago a Chinese commissioner had been sent into Thibet, and an English commissioner had been sent from India, in order that they might meet and take joint measures for facilitating the trade of that region; but the proposed meeting of the two commissioners had never taken place; one of them had been murdered; and no further steps had been taken in the matter. He was happy, however, to be able to state that instructions had been given to Lord Elgin to enter into negotiations with the Chinese government for the friendly settlement of that subject. In answer to the question which had been put to him in reference to the progress made in the construction of the road to Central Asia through Simla, he had to state that he was not then prepared to afford any precise information upon that point.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Mr. A. MILLS wished to ask the Secretary of State for India whether there was any objection on the part of the Government to lay upon the table of the House the minutes in council in Calcutta of the 2nd and 7th of January last, by Lieutenant-general Sir James Outram and Sir Bartle Frere, on the question of the amalgamation of her Majesty's Indian forces with the British army. In the year 1859 the Indian army commission had presented a report in which no step appeared to have as yet been taken. But he did not blame the Government for the delay which had taken place in the matter, because the principal question with which they had to deal was one of considerable difficulty, and one which had given rise to a remarkable conflict of opinion among the witnesses who had been examined by the commissioners. He should add, however, that it was extremely desirable the Government should decide as speedily as possible one way or the other, in favour either of a local army, or of an enlargement of the line in India.

Sir C. WOOD wished to observe that before any question connected with the organisation of the Indian army was brought before the House it would be his duty to produce not only the papers to which the hon. gentleman referred, but also a variety of other documents bearing upon the subject.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY (LIMITED).—The prospectus of the Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company (Limited) is issued. This company is formed with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, for the purpose of working certain mines of coal and iron at Mopani and Tendukera, in the Nerbudda Valley, and near the line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. It is mentioned that "the company receive from the Government a concession of the mines upon most favourable terms, a nominal rental of £10 or 100 rupees per annum being paid for the first five years, to be increased to 1,000 rupees per annum after that period, and to merge in the royalties payable after the fifth year, and afterwards a very moderate royalty of 4 annas or 6d. per ton on coal sold, and 1 rupee or 2s. per ton on all iron manufactured." Reference is made to the favourable character of these terms in comparison with those arranged in the case of the Bengal Colliery Companies, whose operations, nevertheless, have been very successful. The names connected with the present undertaking are very respectable. The capital is fixed at 120,000 in £20 shares, with a deposit of £5 per share.

RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH.—The first ordinary general meeting of the Red Sea and India Telegraph Company was held on the 19th inst. The chairman, Mr. J. C. Marshman, expressed satisfaction at the completion of the company's cable from Alexandria to Kurrachee, and stated that although there is at present no telegraphic communication between Candia and Alexandria, it is expected that the entire line will be opened from London to Calcutta in the course of two months. The financial position of the company he showed to be exceedingly good. In October the receipts from messages between Suez and Aden amounted to £377, and in January to £815. It was estimated that the two sections of the line would yield £22,000 per annum. The system will in a few years be extended to Australia. The amount of capital guaranteed is £800,000, and the company have power to increase it to one million if necessary. Meanwhile, of the original £800,000 there is still a balance unexpended. The directors' report was adopted.

SALARIES TO EAST INDIAN OFFICIALS.—A return has been made to the House of Commons, showing the annual salaries and emoluments of all Indian employes. The salary of the Governor-general is £25,000 a year, in addition to which there is an outfit allowance of £5,000, and other allowances, which in 1858 amounted to £12,863. The four ordinary members of the Supreme Council receive £8,000, and an outfit allowance of £1,200, and they are appointed at home. The four ordinary members of the Legislative Council receive £5,000, and the clerk to the council £3,000. The secretariat is composed of five secretaries to the Government, three of whom have £5,000, one £3,600, and one £3,000; four under-secretaries, two at £2,400 and two at £960; and four assistant under-secretaries, one at £720 and three at £600. The list of officials is so long that we can only notice a few of the more important items it contains. The chief commissioner of Oude receives £6,600 a year, and there are 37 assistant and deputy-assistant commissioners with salaries ranging from £4,200 to £480. The lieutenant governor of Bengal has £10,000, and allowances which amounted in 1858 to £1,738, and the lieutenant governor of the North-West Provinces and of the Punjab receives the same salary, with allowances varying slightly in amount. The governor of Madras receives £12,800 a year, with £2,500 for his outfit; and the members of council £6,400, with an outfit allowance of £1,000. The governor and members of council at Bombay receive the same sums. Among the low salaries of subordinate officials we notice a few of £120, but these are rare; £240 is the lowest in most departments of the Government.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffuseness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; 11s., and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo. bound, price 6s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

In 8vo. cloth, with Maps, price 10s. 6d.,

MEMOIR on the EUFRATES VALLEY ROUTE to INDIA; with Official Correspondence and Maps. By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.

"It is impossible to refer to the Surveys and Reports of General Chesney and his colleagues on the Euphrates, published twenty years ago, without astonishment, that even at that period the British Government and people failed to take immediate steps to avail themselves of its capabilities."—The Times.

"What a glorious thing it would have been," said a writer in the 'Lancet' of August last, "had the Euphrates Valley Railway and the Scinde and Punjab Railway been accomplished facts at the time of the present insurrection."—Fide The Indus and its Provinces—p. 14.

WORKS IN THE HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE,

BY

DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.,

PROFESSOR OF ORIENTAL LANGUAGES IN KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON; MEMBER OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, &c.

REDUCED IN PRICE.

The indisputable superiority of this Series of Works to all others of the same kind having created a demand very far beyond their most sanguine expectations, the Publishers take the opportunity to testify their gratitude for the public favour so unequivocally manifested, by making a considerable REDUCTION IN THEIR PRICES. They are further encouraged to take this step by the consideration of the greatly-increased number of Europeans who will henceforth be located in India, and to whom the possession of these Works may be regarded as indispensable. Serviceable to all, they will be found especially adapted to meet the requirements of Officers of her Majesty's Army serving in India.

DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI. Second Edition, greatly enlarged, and revised throughout. By D. FORBES, LL.D. In One Vol. royal 8vo. price in cloth, £2. 2s.; or, half-bound, £2. 5s. 6d.

*.* This edition of Dr. Forbes's Dictionary contains a greater number of words, with their explanations, than are to be found in any other dictionary in the language; and here, for the first time, the whole of the Hindee words have been printed in the Devanagari as well as in the Persian characters.

A ROMANISED DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI. By DUNCAN FORBES. Royal 8vo. (Nearly ready.)

A SMALLER ROMANISED HINDUSTANI DICTIONARY. By DUNCAN FORBES. (In the Press.)

GRAMMAR of the HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE in the Oriental and Roman Characters, with numerous Copper plate Illustrations of the Persian and Devanagari Systems of Alphabetic Writing. To which is added a copious Selection of Easy Extracts for reading in the Persi-Arabic and Devanagari Characters, forming a complete introduction to the Bagh-o-Bahar, together with a Vocabulary and Explanatory Notes. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Octavo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

HINDUSTANI MANUAL; a Pocket Companion for those who visit India in any capacity, containing a compendious Grammar, Exercises, and Vocabulary of Useful Words. 18mo, 3s. 6d.

BAGH-O-BAHAR; consisting of Entertaining Tales in the Hindustani Language. By MIR AMMAN, of Delhi. A New Edition, carefully Collated with Original Manuscripts, having the essential vowel points and punctuation marked throughout; to which is added a Vocabulary by DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

*.* The Bagh-o-Bahar is the text book in which Cadets and Assistant-Surgeons have to pass an examination in India. This edition was prepared under the authority of the Honourable the East India Company.

BAGH-O-BAHAR, Roman Character with Vocabulary. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. 12mo. (Just ready.)

*.* This book is being printed in a clear and distinct type, and will be very moderate in price.

BAGH-O-BAHAR. Translated into English. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. With Notes by the Translator, illustrative of the Manners, Customs, and Ideas of the Natives of India. A New Edition, Revised and Corrected throughout. Octavo, cloth, 6s.

HE BAITAL PACHISI; or, the Twenty-five Tales of a Demon. A New and Corrected Edition, with a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, 9s.

*.* Military and Medical Officers have to pass in this work.

TOTA-KAHANI; or, Tales of a Parrot. In Hindustani. A New Edition, with the vowel points, &c., carefully marked, and accompanied by a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, cloth, 6s.

ORIENTAL PENMANSHIP; an Essay for facilitating the Reading and Writing of the Ta'lik Character, as generally used in the East in Persian and Hindustani Manuscripts and Printed Works; consisting of various Specimens of Fine Writing, accurately lithographed from Original Native MSS., accompanied by letter-press Descriptions, together with Explanatory Notes and Observations. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Quarto, cloth, 6s.

GRAMMAR of the PERSIAN LANGUAGE, with Reading Lessons and a Vocabulary. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, 12s. 6d.

A GRAMMAR of the BENGALI LANGUAGE, with Reading Lessons and a Vocabulary. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo. (In preparation.)

London W. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stoeckeler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stoeckeler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

This day is published, price 1s. 6d.,
OBSERVATIONS on the CIVIL, CRIMINAL, and POLICE ADMINISTRATION, as prevalent in the Provinces of Bengal. With Suggestions for its Improvement and Amendment with greater Economy to the State. By M. H. COURT, Bengal Civil Service.

In post 8vo., cloth, price 2s. 6d.,

CHRONOLOGICAL ACCOUNT of INDIA Showing the principal events connected with the Mahomedan and European Governments in India.

By JOHN CHARLES BURGOYNE.

London: W. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

THE INDUS and its PROVINCES; their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.,

Chairman of the Scinde and Punjab Railways, and Indus Steam Flotilla; Author of "Indian Railways as connected with the Power and Stability of the British Empire in the East," &c., &c., &c.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original ideas, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Scinde and the Punjab, though with ulterior views, extending far beyond the immediate benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 12, 1858.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

In Three Vols. royal 8vo., price £5. 5s.,

AN ANALYTICAL DIGEST of all the REPORTED CASES decided in the Supreme Courts of Judicature in India, in the Courts of the hon. East India Company, and on Appeal from India, by her Majesty in Council. Together with an Introduction, Notes Illustrative and Explanatory, and an Appendix. By W. H. MORLEY.

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,
BY J. R. YOUNG,
(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the
MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL
APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss, which cannot fail to fit, forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 238, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS,

&c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 238, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

March winds are noted for producing great disturbance in the circulation, whence proceed bronchitis, sore throat, diphtheria, and multitudes of ailments resulting from variable temperatures. A chill or cold should always have instant attention, or serious consequences may spring from neglect. All may rub Holloway's Ointment on the skin over the affected part with the certainty of mitigating previous sufferings and averting all future danger. This Ointment penetrates the skin and revives the feeble circulation in subjacent organs, purifies the blood, and rectifies every function. In urgent and chronic cases Holloway's Pills (taken whilst the Ointment is being used) expedite and insure a speedy cure; which in most cases will be thorough, radical, and lasting.

NEWBERRY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.

"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newberry—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."—Medical Times, 12th Feb., 1859. Eight Cakes, 1s. 9d.; Sixteen (about 1lb.), 3s.—F. NEWBERRY and SONS, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established A.D. 1746.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BACLEY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD PRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE. At Home from Eleven till Five.

CLAPHAM COMMON.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS, handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common. Apply at Brunswick House, Clapham-common.

INDIA.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, an Oriental, Botanical, Preparation for Improving and Beautifying the Complexion and Skin. It is distinguished for its extremely bland, purifying, and soothing effects on the skin; while, by its action on the pores and minute secretory vessels, it promotes a healthy tone, allays every tendency to inflammation, and thus effectually dissipates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, the softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, its capability of soothing irritation, and removing cutaneous defect, render it indispensable to every toilet.

It obviates all the effects of Climate on the Skin, whether with reference to cold and inclemency, or intense solar heat. CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR," &c., are on the wrapper of each bottle, and their signature, "A. ROWLAND and SONS," in red ink at foot. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d.

BENGAL.

JUSTICE IN THE MOFUSSIL COURTS.

The case of the Queen v. Oomeschunder Mookerjee, the commencement of which we reported in our issue of Saturday, and the result, terminating in the acquittal of the accused, in Monday's paper, is one which ought not to pass without comment, as indicating some of the dangers to which all doing business in the interior or subject to Mofussil courts may be liable.

The story is shortly this. About fourteen months ago a large native banking firm in Calcutta was robbed of money, chiefly consisting of Bank of Bengal notes, to the extent of 21,000 rupees. Notice was promptly given to the banks and to the police, and in spite of many efforts the notes have not yet been successfully put into circulation.

It appears from the evidence in the case, that in October and November last eight of the bank notes for Rs. 1,000 each made their appearance in Calcutta, and were at once traced, —6,000 to Kylaschunder Pal, commonly called Chowdry, and 2,000 to Kisto Bullub Paramanick, both residents at Santipore. On being questioned as to how they had obtained these notes, they both declared that they had received them and paid cash for them to the accused in the present case, Oomeschunder Mookerjee, who was head of the Native Establishment of Mr. John White, the proprietor of the large Bansbariah indigo concern in the district of Kishnaghur, and they produced letters from the Baboo of different dates, requesting that the notes might be exchanged for cash, and which they brought forward evidence to prove was done.

Upon this evidence there was nothing for it but to commit Oomeschunder Mookerjee for trial, for having issued notes knowing them to have been stolen; but fortunately for him, the robbery having been committed in Calcutta, it was considered that he must be tried in the Supreme Court, and the accused was thus enabled to employ English solicitors and counsel to defend him, and was tried by an experienced and trained lawyer and a jury.

On the trial it appeared that the plot had been got up with wonderful skill and ingenuity. It was quite in accordance with his practice, and the ordinary course of business, that Mr. White should receive bank-notes from his agent for the disbursements of his concern, that he should hand the notes to his head native to get cashed as he required the money, that the Baboo should send them to the nearest mart to be exchanged for rupees. The bankers produce the letters from the Baboo, making the request for the exchange of the notes, produce the coolies who carried the rupees, and who swear that they delivered them to the Baboo himself, in the station of Kishnaghur, and whom they identify as the man who received them. In short, the chain of evidence is complete and without apparent flaw, and if taken in a Mofussil Court, where, as Mr. Thoby, of Raneegunge notoriety, says, it is not usual or necessary to take evidence in presence of the accused, or to allow him to cross-examine, there can be no doubt that Oomeschunder Mookerjee would now be undergoing a felon's doom.

Fortunately the case was in other hands. The solicitors, aided by Mr. White and the accused, with infinite labour and trouble traced the antecedents of these coolie witnesses for many years. Only three were produced, but it had been ascertained, and counsel extracted from them the acknowledgment, that they were professional witnesses, that at the instigation of the Paul Chowdry they had appeared in a trial in the Kishnaghur Court some years ago, and that they had deposed in a charge of murder brought against Mr. Broderick, to the finding and identifying the body of a man as having been murdered, who subsequently was produced alive. Other evidence was brought forward which satisfied the jury that the letters were forgeries, and that Oomeschunder was not in the station at the times sworn to, and he was acquitted, as the Judge said, with no stain on his character, but with heavy expenses to bear.

It may be that the Paul Chowdry and Paramanick were the dupes and tools of some cleverer villains, and that they were not aware of the plot which so nearly involved an innocent man in disgrace and ruin; but there can be no doubt that there was a deep laid scheme, the authors of which will perhaps never be discovered.

Had a European been charged with the crime it would have been almost impossible for him to have procured the evidence which in this instance has secured acquittal, and if arranged before a Mofussil court, he must in self-defence have had recourse to bribery and other objectionable means.

It is for this reason we contend so strongly against subjecting Europeans to Mofussil courts as at present constituted. We feel that they can afford no fair trial to a European, and that they would be used as a means of extortion, oppression, and fraud to an extent that can only be credited by those who have learnt what is possible from bitter experience.—Englishman.

PASSING IN THE VERNACULAR.

With reference to the general order of the Commander-in-Chief, which appeared in our last issue, touching the nineteen officers whose examinations were vitiated, we cannot help thinking that the "declaration upon honour" on the part of candidates is not likely to effect much good. The youth who is determined to pass, by fair means or by foul, will have no more scruples about signing the "declaration" than had members of Parliament to avow that they possessed the necessary qualification for a seat. It is notorious that numbers of "honourable gentlemen" representing counties had not sixpence a year, much less £600—while others in scores sat for boroughs who never had the title of £300 a-year. In all such cases candidates make a compromise with their consciences, and regard these "declarations" as mere matters of form. We have known Dis-senters at the University subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles in order that they might take a degree. We have known Roman Catholics adjure the Pope in the halls of the inns of court, in order that there might be no obstacle to their call to the bar. When a man's prospects in life are at stake, a declaration on honour, or even on oath, is not very likely to stand in his way. We do not mean to say that every man would be guilty of telling a falsehood to promote his interests; but we fear the name of those who would may be accurately styled "Legion." At Oxford or Cambridge so much care is taken that it is extremely difficult for a student to take an undue advantage; nevertheless, some few instances have been known where the questions have "leaked out" before the day of examination in the Senate House. The son of an enormously rich Jew, a Christianized Jew, once bribed a compositor employed at the Pitt Press to give him a proof of the examination papers. £300 was the price paid; and had the nature of this ingenious Israelite been washed out of him at his baptism, he would have "passed" with ease. But providentially for the ends of justice, the Jew was in him still. Not satisfied with making a fraud the instrument for "chiselling himself into a degree," he must needs pant to make money by the transaction—and nothing short—usurious villain—of one hundred per cent. From twelve "men" who were certain of being "plucked" he received £50 each; and one of these "men," at a rather late period of the evening, communicated the secret to a very indiscreet friend, who communicated it to a friend of one of the Examiners. The consequence was that the Jew, and those who shared in his fraud, were not only plucked, but expelled; for the Examiners, at the very last moment, changed the papers!

It is to the vigilance of the Examiners, and not to the "honour" of the candidates, that Lord Clyde must look for fairness. We all know how examinations were conducted some few years ago, when it was a sham sine qua non that no one could hold a staff appointment until he had passed in the vernacular. There ought to be in every district throughout India professional examiners on liberal salaries, and not gentlemen appointed without pay, and by chance, or standing in either service. We could recount many instances of gentlemen appointed to preside at examination committees who were far more ignorant of the languages than the youths whom they were called upon to question. The whole affair used to be a farce, and from all we have lately heard, irrespective of Lord Clyde's order, we sadly fear matters are not much improved.

Whilst dwelling on the subject of examination, we may be permitted to say a few words on what is known as "the competitive system." Anybody who can "pass," or obtain a certain number of marks, may become a Bengal civilian. The number of marks depends on the amount of classical, mathematical, scientific, or other knowledge of the candidate. The consequence is, that we are importing a great quantity of erudition packed up in very inferior cases; and before long it will happen that in wandering through the East, instead of now and then encountering a covenanted European "snob," the miracle will be to light upon a gentleman.

The natives of this country will mark the difference, quite as much as English people. We had lately the—not misfortune, but—amusement to be fellow-passenger with several of these "competitive" gentlemen. Albeit they were as learned as Jesuits, they gave us the idea of persons who had imbibed their manners and feelings in Kentucky. It was impossible to contemplate them on the quarter-deck of the Simla without being reminded of, and wishing to pin on their coat-collars, the Ace of Spades, upon which is printed, "For exportation only. £50 penalty if re-landed in Great Britain."—Mofussilite.

MR. WILSON'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

This morning (Feb. 18) the very limited available space in the Council Chamber was closely packed with gentlemen of all classes, who had during the past week besieged the secretary with applications for seats which would have crowded the room ten times over. Of course the commercial and banking interests were fully represented; the clergy, the military, and the native landholders also attended in full proportions. All other business was of course set aside, and as soon as the council opened,

Mr. Wilson commenced his speech by remarking on the little probability there appeared this time last year that he would be induced to abandon his parliamentary career at home for this new field. He assured the council that the proposed measures, whether popular or unpopular, had the unanimous support of the Executive Council and the Governor-general, and were the result of earnest thought and sincerity of purpose. He thanked all parties, official or others, for the readiness with which information had been given, and though obliged to be severe in some of his remarks, begged to say that they applied to the discreditable system and not to the individuals.

The last authoritative Indian financial statement was that made by the Secretary of State in August, which showed a deficit of about ten millions. A statement sent from this Government in September exhibited a considerable discrepancy, and a more favourable view, which was not borne out by subsequent facts. The September account showed a deficit, including home charges, of £0,600,000, whilst according to the account he held in his hand the deficiency would amount to £9,200,000. No fault was to be found with the parties who made up the September statement, and the mistakes were not to be wondered at when it was known that there was an error of £600,000 in the Bombay military estimates, and of £300,000 in those of Madras, on which it was founded. The interest on the railways, too, had not been taken into account, owing to the defectiveness of system, in which there must be a radical change. He proceeded to give a most lucid exposition of the actual financial position, declaring that it would be unworthy of him to attempt to varnish over weakness or to mislead by false hopes. For himself and his colleagues he declared that what he knew this day all should know. Referring in detail to the accounts for the last five years, Mr. Wilson showed that the mutiny had cost forty millions, involving an increased annual charge of two millions in interest, and pointed out in strong terms the value of peace, and the serious consequences of disturbance and rebellion, which should be known to and impressed on every one.

He alluded to former occasions when financial difficulties had been overcome without any recourse to taxation, but proved clearly that what Lord Amherst and Lord William Bentinck had to meet were but trifling in comparison to the present embarrassments. Referring to the war, he eulogized the principles on which it had been carried on, that every service had been paid for, and every claim met, and he said that the future historian would give credit to Lord Canning for the calmness and consistency with which he had pursued his course and policy.

The present position of India was worse than that of any British possession ever had been, and it was not to be endured that they should go on as hitherto with annual deficits to be met by open loans. He remarked in detail on the sources of revenue, commencing with land, the assessment on which, he pointed out, was in many cases too high, rendering reductions necessary; on opium, as a most dangerous and precarious source, dependent on a foreign country, where the cultivation might be induced from the very dearness of price and consequent present flourishing state of our revenue from it, and was, therefore, glad to understand that efforts were being made to increase the cultivation. To the Custom-house duties, which he went through in detail with a masterly exposition of the principles on which they should be imposed—proposing that transit duties for native States, especially of wool, should be abolished, that hides, hemp, and jute, should be free on export, and also tea, as well as books, prints, and works of art. On salt-petre he proposed a duty of Rs. 2 per maund, or £5. 10s. per ton, and on tobacco 8 annas per seer. He did not propose any increase in indigo, among other reasons, because chiefly produced by English capital and skill, and he had occasion emphatically to remark on the desirableness and even necessity of encouraging by all means European settlers.

He showed the failure in operation of the charge of 20 per cent. under the last imposed tariff, as having discouraged importation of the articles subjected to it, but included twists in the same category as piece goods, and would make it liable to the duty of ten per cent.; revisions of the valuations were to be made so as to be the same in all parts of India; the alteration in those duties to take effect from Monday next inclusive; but twists sold to arrive, and afloat on this day, to be admitted under the old duty. With reference to the objection that had been brought forward against taxing the Hindoos, Mr. Wilson proved by quotations from the "Institutes of Menu," that what he would propose was an absolute trifle to what that sacred book authorised; and then brought forward his large scheme for general taxation, which included a licence tax, in three classes, namely:—

One rupee per year for artificers.

Four rupees for retail dealers and small manufacturers.

Ten rupees for wholesale dealers, professional men, and merchants.

And an income-tax of 2 per cent. on all incomes of Rs. 200 to Rs. 500. On all incomes above Rs. 500, 3 per cent. for the imperial revenue, and 1 per cent. for local purposes—in all, 4 per cent. He adopted the schedules and principles of the English income-tax, and made no exception either of individuals or classes.

Mr. Wilson took occasion to remark on the monstrous claims put forward by the fortunate zemindars, under the permanent settlement, of exemption from taxation. He showed the utter untenableness of their position, and that it never was contemplated by Lord Cornwallis or acknowledged in any way. On the contrary, that Lord Cornwallis looked forward to the time when their increased prosperity and the general advance of the country would afford fuller sources of revenue. That Government had no hesitation in making the income-tax apply to zemindars as well as to fundholders, to all servants of the State, and, in fact, to every class. They felt that there would be difficulty in carrying out the tax with natives, but it was the business of statesmen to overcome difficulties, and they were not to be deterred from doing their duty. If there were risks they were prepared to run them. At the same time every consideration would be shown, the strictest secrecy would be observed, and if communities could agree with the commissioner to compound for the taxes and assess themselves, facilities would be afforded, under proper precaution, for their doing so. The only other tax he had to propose was that on tobacco. This was an article which was taxed in all countries; there were differences in opinions as to the mode in which it should be collected, Mr. J. P. Grant, among others, thinking it ought to be collected from the grower. He again scouted the idea that this would be any infringement of the permanent settlement.

With respect to the Imperial guarantee for the debt of India, he hoped that the people of India would never ask, nor the people of England ever grant it. He for one would never consent to such a measure. India must meet her own liabilities and must stand or fall by the consequences of her own proceedings.

He then summed up as to the probable result of these measures. Fortunately for India she had been so entirely free from all taxation that there were positively no data on which to make a calculation. No great diminution of the civil expenditure was to be looked for, but increased efficiency secured, perhaps, at greater cost. The country must hereafter be held by a European army, and large expenditure was necessary in building barracks and providing accommodation, but he hoped that the number of the forces would be gradually reduced, though this could not be done immediately.

He protested in strong terms against the suggestion that because the rebellion had taken place chiefly on the Bengal side of the country, Madras and Bombay should escape from the consequences. He pointed out that even at the present moment, notwithstanding that Bengal paid the whole of the interest of the debt, the deficiency in Bengal was less than that of Madras and Bombay. That now the great source of danger, the sepoy army, which statesmen had scarcely dared to speak of, had disappeared, and everything was peaceful and promising throughout the empire, attention might be immediately turned to administrative reforms, particularly in finance, in which he found the monstrous and discreditable anomaly to prevail of the financial department having only to look after the expenditure, with no knowledge or control of the income—that this had formerly been pointed out by that able statesman Lord Ellenborough, but without effect.

In conclusion he said that though the hoped-for improvements must be waited for, they were now in a position to wait; that the balances in the treasury were now better than they had been in any year since 1833; that in India they amounted to fifteen million and in England to four million six hundred thousand pounds, in all close upon twenty millions sterling; and though the reduction of expenditure would not be immediate, and the new taxes cannot be expected to produce much for six months, still he expected to be able to go on without further borrowing, and certainly without having recourse to the discreditable system of open loans. He sketched the development of English trade under direct taxation, and the willingness of all classes to adopt that system more generally. He pointed out that he had proposed no novel method, that novelties in finance were dangerous; he adhered to modes followed by eminent statesmen, which events had tried and justified. He regretted that such classes as the clerks in the 'presidencies could not be more leniently dealt with, but there must be no exemptions, and he trusted to such a development of trade as should relieve them by improving their general position.

After an eloquent peroration he thanked the council for their patient hearing, and with a hope that a course of strict justice, pursued with neither fear nor favour, would find a general and generous support, he concluded a statement which, though occupying three hours and twenty minutes in delivery, was throughout masterly in conception and clear in detail.

Mr. Wilson gave notice that, either on Saturday, the 25th, or at latest on the Saturday following, he would introduce a Bill, the object of which would be to extend to the whole of India a system of well-secured convertible paper note currency. He afterwards gave notice of motion, that at the next sitting of the Council, or at latest in a fortnight, he would introduce a Bill, the object of which would be to extend to the whole of India a system of well-secured convertible paper currency.

The standing orders were suspended, and the Bill to alter the customs duties, in accordance with the scheme set forth in his speech, was read a first time. Consequently from this day the articles in the late tariff which were subject to 20 per cent. are now reduced to 10 per cent., excepting only tobacco. Cotton piece goods remain unaltered, but twists now pay the same rate, 10 per cent., but contracts to arrive, under which the goods were afloat on Saturday, are subject only to the former rate of 5 per cent. Transit duties are abolished, as are export duties on wool, hides, hemp, jute, oil, seeds, tea, and coffee. There are eight annas per seer on tobacco, and two rupees per maund on salt-petre exported.—Englishman.

COAL AND IRON IN THE PUNJAB.

An official correspondence regarding the existence of coal and iron in the Punjab has just been issued from the Public Works Department. It was originated by the Lieut.-governor of the Punjab, in August last, consequent upon the report of a committee, appointed by his order for the purpose of ascertaining the existence of coal and iron mines on the Murree Hills. Some specimens which the committee had "sat upon" were despatched to Professor Oldham, the head of the Geological Survey, and the report appeared so encouraging that the Governor-general resolved on "having the localities examined by a competent and scientific geologist, who would be able to furnish the Government with definite and reliable information, both on the scientific and economical conditions of the deposits." Mr. H. Medlicott, the Professor of Geology in the Thomason College, was the gentleman upon whom this duty devolved, and he proceeded at once to Murree. This gentleman had previously, while in charge of the Geological Survey Office, made an analysis of the specimens of coal forwarded by the Punjab committee, and obtained the following results:—

Of these specimens of coal, No. 1 contained 36 per cent. of volatile matter, 56 of carbon, and 8 of ash; No. 2, 30½ per cent. of volatile matter, 45½ of carbon, and 24 of ash; No. 3, 31 per cent. volatile, 37 carbon, 8 ash.

Referring to Mr. Medlicott's report, Professor Oldham, writing to the Government of India, D. P. W., in October last, observed that as far as the quality of the minerals forwarded was concerned, they represented good useful fuel, on the whole better than the average quality of Indian coal, but—and here came the dawning of discouragement—

Mr. Medlicott did not enter on any discussion on the probable amount of the supply, which would seem to be the most important question involved—but which, by the way, Mr. Medlicott does not seem to have been called upon to do, since it was only in reference to the specimens received that his report was required. However, the Committee in their statement had very plainly declared that in almost every instance in which coal was observed they had completely dug out the mass, such as it was; and this fact the professor naturally considered ominous of ill success. That his anticipations were not ill founded we now learn from the report of Mr. Medlicott, dated Camp Murree, 7th November, 1857, from which we take the most important portions:—

“For the first twelve days I engaged in visiting the localities examined by the committee appointed by his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, as well as several other places reported by the natives since this committee ceased to act. All these localities are in the hills of the Rawul Pindee districts, between the meridian of Murree and the river Jhelum. My researches here proving altogether unpromising, I asked to be shown the report by Mr. Calvert, an assistant engineer on the Punjab railway, on a place in the Cashmere Territory not far from the Jhelum, in which report I was told Mr. Calvert asserted the existence of regular seams of good coal. From this report and the file of papers connected with it, I perceived at once that the coal in Jummo, and the rocks with which it is associated, are entirely different in character from what I had seen in the hills east of Murree. Had I seen this report in the first instance, I should have been satisfied by a much more cursory examination of the Murree rocks; but thinking the conditions of all were alike, I wished, in compliance with Mr. Oldham's instructions, to leave no place unseen. With the permission of government I therefore proceeded at once to examine the coal deposit near Kotlee, in Jummo. The discovery of coal, and the statements that have been published of its abundance in these hills, originated from Mr. Calvert's report.

“Before discussing the coal formation of Kotlee, I wish to explain the case of the Murree Hills, in the hope of satisfying those who are not familiar with such subjects, yet are unwilling to relinquish the hopes that have been raised. I would very briefly state the few simple facts upon which my opinion is founded. First, respecting the chemical or mineralogical question—the quality. The fossil substances used as fuel, and most of which are known by the generic name of ‘Coal,’ present every shade of composition, from that of wood to that of charcoal, which is approximately pure carbon: the process is one of carbonization, or more properly the escape and modification of the volatile elements of the vegetable substance; the varieties thus presented are known as ‘peat,’ ‘lignite,’ ‘common bituminous coal’ and ‘stone-coal’ or ‘anthracite;’ it is more or less arbitrary, at what points of the scale these names are severally applicable; for lignite and coal proper, it is usual to draw the line between the coals that do, and those that do not yield a hard cohesive coke, and it has been found that this property of coking does not exist, or but very imperfectly exists, when the volatile ingredients exceed about 25 per cent., or more generally the heating quality of coal is in proportion to the degree of carbonization. As an attendant fact, in lignite the vegetable structure is still more or less visible. Lignites, however, form a valuable fuel, when better coal cannot be procured. The geological facts affecting the quantity are equally simple. Vegetable substances become fossil (buried) in two ways, by accumulation in the place of their growth, and the covering over of such accumulations by sedimentary matter consequent upon the slow changes of level of the earth's surface; or else, vegetable substances become shifted and deposited with other sedimentary matter. The most regular and continual deposits of coal are proved to have been formed in the former manner.

“It is certainly not impossible that at some place in the group a sufficient accumulation of such materials may have been formed to make it worth working; but to exhaust this possibility would be the work of years; the specimens are not confined to any definite position in the formation, but scattered through a great thickness of strata, so that it would be almost a blind search through the whole.

“I now come to the Kotlee coal. Captain Babbage and I had some trouble in finding the localities mentioned in Mr. Calvert's report, owing to an unaccountable mistake made by that gentleman in his sketch map, in which the ravine of the hills with Dundela and Mohara is placed on the west instead of on the east of the Poonch, the main river flowing past Kotlee. Arrived at Dundela, however, we had no difficulty in recognising the main features expressed in the drawings. In examining this case, I wish, as far as possible, to accept Mr. Calvert's data; there are some few spots marked on his plan as anthracite, and which I could not discover on the ground, but this hardly affects the general question. The rocks in the immediate vicinity of Dundela are thin carbonaceous shales and grits, with earthy ferruginous lime-stones; among them is ‘the bed or seam of coal or anthracite,’ varying in thickness from one inch to nearly two feet, undulating in chambers or bunches, more than in a continuous even seam. This is Mr. Calvert's description of the spot he selected from which to take his samples, and it may serve as a favourable type of all that is actually visible. Now, as I remarked above, ‘your a priori knowledge or direct observation (short of actually seeing good beds of coal) can be but very vague; the rocks enumerated are, no doubt, such as are frequently associated with coal, but it were contrary to all experience to establish a general rule to that effect. There is no kind of necessary connection between the phenomena; and numerous instances are recorded of such rocks being extensively carbonaceous, as in this case, without proving of any value. Upon these facts alone, therefore, I am convinced that no geologist could confirm Mr. Calvert's conclusion ‘that a further exploration must result in the discovery of good beds of coal.’

“In fine, it is my unhesitating opinion, that the rocks at Dundela give no prospect of a useful supply of coal.

“As regards iron, I did not see anything at Dundela that deserves to be called ore; that which the natives work very near at Moharee is very poor compared to most Indian ores. It is a concretionary hæmatite (red oxide), but very imperfectly separated from the clays, both locally and in the mass, which is irregular in size and direction; being apparently consequent upon the contortion and modification of the carbonaceous and ferruginous shales; its occurrence is very uncertain, much of what the natives work being found in isolated patches in hard lime-stone.”

Some further researches on the part of Mr. Medlicott led to no more promising result. Even with regard to the only remaining question—Whether the coal, such as it is, had not better be worked methodically, than left to the crooked devices of the natives, he says that the answer had better be indefinitely postponed. “The economy of systematic works,” he says, “would not be felt for a long time after commencing observations. Such a poor seam as this might never repay much outlay in working it; besides, it still remains to be seen if the stuff is workable at any price.”—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SONTHAL PERGUNNAH.—The following is an extract from a private letter from camp Edgi, of the Daman-i-Koh, twenty-five miles south of Rajmahal (Sonthal Pergunnah), dated 25th January:—“I am only skirting round these hills without entering them, but am glad once more to meet my old friends the Sonthals. The railway has been the making of them, and they flourish, and get drunk to their hearts' content. They are, however, good-tempered in their cups, and only a little noisy, but never quarrelsome. The railway has, however, made all provisions very dear, and I have a hard fight to get fowls at even three or four for the rupee, where they formerly were 16 and 20. Some of the sheltered bays outside these hills are very unhealthy, and one gentleman at Sitapahar lost no less than eight servants within a very short period, and my own camp has not escaped. Towards the close of the rains the mortality is something fearful, last year 3,000 out of 16,000 coolies dying off like rotten sheep, so that there was no means of disposing of so many bodies, and scores of their skeletons, still held together by the ligaments, are piled together in the nullah near this, the water from which I have been forced to drink. In a case like this I think even you would allow a dash of gin or wine to be both a palatable and wholesome addition. Another scourge in some places is the number of tigers, which carry off an incredible number of people from this district, upwards of 250 men in one district in six months; things got to such a pitch that Government have permitted the Sonthals the use of their arms again, of which they were deprived after the Sonthal rebellion; they, too, at that time suffered terribly from cholera. I very much doubt if 2,000 were shot and killed in battle, but I am credibly told that 20,000 at least died of disease and privation when they were assembled in large numbers, and before they were dispersed. Mr. Cuthbert has been up here, with the design, I believe, of establishing a mission and schools among these tribes, but I know nothing of the details of the project.”—Englishman.

Dacca, Feb. 4.—An affair of a very serious nature has thrown the district of Tipperah into a state of alarm; a body of Kookies, reported to be some seven hundred strong, subjects of the Tipperah Rajah, invaded the plains at Kundul, a place about a day's journey from the station of Comillah, and by the last accounts they were plundering and burning the villages; some five hundred of the villagers are reported to have been killed. The authorities at Comillah rubbed their eyes, reported the matter to the commissioner, and called for information from the Rajah as to what his people meant. The Rajah, with an eye to business, replied, that he thought it must be the act of an enemy of his, “a relative.” This seems to have been satisfactory, and they appear to have gone to sleep again. The commissioner, however, was not so easily satisfied. The Chittagong police corps was marched against the Kookies without delay, and a telegram was sent to the commissioner of Dacca requesting him to send troops as speedily as possible for the protection of the station of Comillah. The requisition was met with a promptness that well deserves notice. At three p.m. on Thursday the message, stating what had occurred, and asking for troops, arrived in Dacca. The commissioner was absent on circuit, and the message was taken to the judge. The officer commanding the station was requested to furnish the required complement of men, boats were ordered to the ghaut without a moment's delay, there was no want of energy in any quarter, and within three hours after the arrival of the message Lieutenant Travers, commanding the Kamroop detachment, had marched his men down to the ghaut. They embarked and were despatched to the scene of action, and in about thirty-six hours after the message left Chittagong the Kamroops had reached Comillah, a distance of some seventy miles. This came of having “the right men in the right place” at a moment of difficulty. It is to be hoped that a thorough investigation into this affair will be ordered, and that some able active officer will be sent to make it. Some steps should be taken to control the subjects of this miserable ape of a Rajah, who is notoriously a mere tool in the hands of his Gooroo and his Amlah.—Englishman.

GOWHATTEE, ASSAM, Jan. 30.—There is a very serious question connected with these tea countries, which is causing considerable anxiety among planters, and which must soon come under the notice of Government. One of the conditions of the grants of land to tea planters is that one-eighth of the whole grant shall be cleared and rendered fit for cultivation within five years of the date of the grant, one-fourth in ten years, and so on. Should the grantee fail in any of the conditions the entire grant will be resumed,—all that may have been brought into cultivation and all remaining uncultivated. If the condition is strictly carried out by the Government, some of the leading planters and companies will lose their properties. The Government, however, should have very great consideration for the planters, for it ought to be remembered that tea planting is a new business to them all, and that nothing but the experience of years could have shown how difficult it is to bring into cultivation more than five or six hundred acres of tea land in any single situation. The Government itself has shown how completely unacquainted it is with tea planting, for in framing the rules for Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar, it has placed no limitation to the amount of land to be given to applicants. Thus it is that private parties and companies have got grants of ten thousand, twenty thousand, and even twenty-five thousand acres. It is beyond the bounds of possibility that one eighth of such grants can be brought into cultivation in five years, and it is to be hoped the Government will revise the rules and limit the grants as they are limited in Kumaon, to two thousand acres. Or, better still, if it would sell in fee simple the waste lands, which would at once place the planter in a secure position, prevent him from taking more land than he could manage, and enable him to prosecute his business without the uncertainty and its attendant anxiety, of not being able to fulfil all the conditions of the grant, and losing at one swoop the fruits of years of labour and outlay. This is a subject involving large and important interests, and worthy, therefore, of your editorial advocacy. The Lieutenant-governor has ordered the Khas Mehals of Bengal to be sold. Let him sell the waste lands of Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar, and he will develop a trade that will make these provinces the most important in the Indian Empire, and in process of time will contribute in a great degree to render England independent of China for its supplies of tea. Wherever I travel I observe that the forest and waste lands have the soil suitable for tea cultivation, a rich, dark, vegetable mould on the surface, with a sub-soil of yellow, porous, friable, silicious earth, the whole so fertile that it supports a dense forest vegetation and the most gigantic grasses. Every kind of tree, and shrub, and grass not only love, but struggle for the soil; and these again are covered with innumerable creepers and parasites of every kind, among which the most beautiful and the most conspicuous are orchids, which cling to the trunks, or perch themselves upright on the horizontal branches of almost every tree of the forest. Unlike other vegetable and human parasites the orchids do not strangle or destroy their supporters. The oak, the saul, the peepul, the caoutchouc, the banyan or Indian fig-tree, which Milton said was the same as grew in Paradise, and which had leaves "as broad as Amazonian target," and a hundred others suitable for "tall ammirals," grow in great vigour, and are the monarchs of the forest; but at their base and around them, and pressing their way through their lower branches, are millions of bamboo trees, and palms and dates, and clusters of the graceful betel-nut tree. At their base again are net-works of creepers, and shrubs, and grasses, rendering the forest almost impenetrable, and showing how rich the soil must be which can support such a vast accumulation of vegetable life. Macaulay's beautiful description of the south-western part of Kerry occurred to me as I looked at the hills of Assam, and the words he uses, "freshness of landscape, warmth of colouring, brightness of foliage," &c., may apply to them with equal truth. Before leaving the valley of the Berhampooter to cross the range of hills which divides it from the valley of the Soorma (which I intend to do in a day or two), I wish to say a few words more on the all-important subject of tea planting. In a previous letter I said that the soil of the waste lands generally was most suitable for the growth of the tea shrub, but very few sites can be made available for this purpose for want of labour and roads to the rivers; chiefly, however, for want of labour. I have already spoken of the opium consuming habits of the Assamese, and the policy of prohibiting the free growth of the poppy, and such a measure would, no doubt, add considerably to the amount of labour now procurable. But it is not enough, and labour must be introduced from Bengal before the tea-producing powers of this province can be largely developed. I have heard that an agency for this purpose has been, or is about to be, established in Calcutta by parties interested in tea cultivation, but it should be recognised and encouraged by Government in the same way as the coolie agency for the colonies beyond sea. A free passage in Government steamers to the coolies and their families, protection to their rights, and proper treatment at the plantations, would assist most materially in inducing them to emigrate from Bengal—if emigration it may be called—to this province. It is not creditable to the Government that the planters of the West Indies and the Mauritius can obtain labourers from Bengal, while they cannot be procured from one of its own most promising provinces. Let the labourer know that he will receive a fair remuneration for his labour, and above all, that his rights will be protected by a recognised agency, and there is no reason to suppose that he will not come here, as well as cross the sea to Trinidad or Demerara. As regards roads, the cost of making and keeping in repair such roads as would suffice for the transit of produce to the rivers, I have been informed by very competent persons, would not be very great. A Government hint also to executive officers that they were expected to attend to their duties, as well as to draw their salaries, would do a very great deal of good.—Englishman.

THE ALLAHABAD MELA.—For the first time since 1850 the great Allahabad mela at the junction of the Jumna and Ganges was held last January. The number of people present at one time is estimated at about 50,000. A sum of Rs. 10,000 was paid to Government by the owners of the various booths for stands. It is said the barbers alone were assessed at Rs. 2,000. In many spots of their enclosure the hair was ankle deep, shaving being a necessary preliminary to bathing. They believe that the Sirkar makes use of the hair. Probably the Kotwal makes a small revenue out of it. The Hindue proverb well expresses the different forms of worship at the three great seats of superstition—at Prayag, shave; at Kasee, walk; at Gya, pay.

CHEROOTS.—With a tax on tobacco in prospect it may be worth while to examine the mode in which the Spanish Government of the Philippines raises its tobacco revenue. The cultivation is in theory a strict monopoly, the cultivators being compelled to sell the leaf to the agents of the Government at the price of five dollars a quintal. The leaf thus collected is forwarded to Manila, where it is manufactured in the State factory, an establishment on a gigantic scale, employing some 20,000 hands. The cost of the cigars when made up is as nearly as possible Rs. two per thousand, a price which may make the Indian consumer sigh with envy. The Government tax, however, is more than six hundred per cent., and the selling price of cigars may be taken at Rs. thirteen per thousand. That, however, is an average, the "number two Cortados" chiefly consumed in India, costing Rs. 16 a thousand, a price the merchant quietly doubles for the benefit of the purchaser. Of the tobacco manufactured one-half is consumed in the islands, besides an indefinite amount of smuggled leaf; one-fourth is exported in the form of che roots, and the remainder is sent to Spain as a tribute in kind. The total produce of the monopoly is £1,200,000 a year, but the expenses are enormous, and the net outturn does not exceed half a million sterling. According to Sir John Bowring, a tax on the tobacco land, accompanied by an export duty, would admit of a reduction in price, while increasing the revenue. In any Indian tax the Government would probably leave the manufacture entirely in private hands, and tax the weed as it taxes spirits, in transit from the factory to the retail dealer. The consumption of these cigars in India is curiously small. To judge by appearances, this country must be one of the best customers of the estanco real. Almost every Anglo-Indian smokes. Few in Bengal smoke anything but Manila cheroots. There is scarcely a merchant in Calcutta who does not deal more or less in cigars. Yet the total importation of 1858 was only about 1,500 boxes of 500 each, valued at Rs. 20,000. That European luxury at all events does not afford much scope to the financier.—Friend of India.

THE SHAJAHANPORE MASSACRE.—Three of the Sepoys of the 28th N.I. who took a leading part in the Shajahanpore massacre have been sentenced to be hanged at Lucknow. They were clearly proved to have been the murderers of Mr. Ricketts, the collector, as he tried to escape from the church, and of Dr. Bowling while escaping with his family in his carriage. From the evidence it appears that Dr. Balfour and Mr. Lemaistre were killed inside the church, the Rev. Mr. McCallum, and Messrs. Ricketts and Smith outside. One of the scoundrels had enlisted in the loyal Lucknow regiment under a false name. When the spies made their appearance to search for him, he was found hid under some bales of clothing.

Mrs. MULLEN'S BENGALI STORY for native women, "Phulmani and Karuna," has been translated into Marathi, and extensively circulated in Bombay. A Gujarati version is nearly ready. A writer in a native journal compares it to "the classic narratives of humble life by Leitch Ritchie and Hannah More."

MEDICAL INVALID ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—The total loss of the Indian Branch of the Medical Invalid and General Life Assurance Society from the mutinies is from £70,000 to £80,000. The business transacted in 1858-9 was only 10 per cent. less than that in 1857.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 22).—Piece Goods.—A general steadiness has prevailed, and gradually prices of almost all descriptions of goods have improved more or less in value, as well as in demand. The transactions in Piece Goods have been again very limited, although the buyers show more inclination to buy largely at current rates, which sellers do not feel inclined to accept. Grey Shirtings.—Their demand and value have lately improved, and are about 2 annas per piece higher, with good prospects. White Shirtings.—In fair demand at firm prices. White Figured Shirtings and Brocades.—In good request, particularly 36 inches by 40 by 54 yards. Brocades also are very much wanted. White Jaconets are selling freely at one anna per piece advance for low and middling qualities. 38 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1-12 to 5-0; 45 ditto at 3-2 to 6-0. Grey Madapollams.—Improving, and prices are one anna higher. 32 inches 42 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 2-3; do. 50 do. at 2-5 to 2-6; do. 56 do. at 2-8. Cambries.—Rather quiet and little doing. 60 inches 24 yards at Co.'s Rs. 4-0; 60 do. at 5-0 to 5-1. White Twills.—In moderate demand, at about 1 anna per piece higher. 36 inches 40 yards at Co.'s Rs. 5-7. Full Mulls.—Rather dull at previous rates. White are in better demand, and rather higher. White Mule Twists.—Owing to the increase of the import duty, prices are about 2 pie Morah higher, particularly for No. 40.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 22).—Indigo.—Market continues firm, and better prices were obtained at the late public sales. Saltpetre.—Very little shipped for Great Britain, and the inquiry for other ports also continues limited. 5 to 6 per cent. refraction sales are reported at 10 to 10-4 per manded. Raw Silk.—Supplies are very small, and very little has been done since our last. Silk Piece Goods.—Business, even at a reduction, very limited. There is scarcely any good quality in the market. Luc Dye.—There is a fair demand for fine qualities. W.B.L.D. sold at Rs. 82-8, and S.L.D. at Rs. 70. Hides.—In good demand for Great Britain, and prices are fully maintained. Jute and Hemp.—Jute is taken freely for Great Britain. For Hemp there is no inquiry. Oil Seeds.—Landed: owing to supplies being abundant, prices have fallen. The Greek houses are operating largely at 2-10 to 2-13. Rapeseed in very little request. Caster Oil.—In some demand for Great Britain.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW POLICE.—A serious encounter between the Madras new police and the Hindoo inhabitants of Vellore took place on the 6th of February. A body of the police, said to be partially intoxicated, stopped an idol procession in the streets, arrested the tom-tom players, and carried the idol to the thannah. The shops were at once closed; the people rose, and besieged the station-house. An official asked them to remove the idol, but they refused. Government had defied it. Away with the new police!—The military were called out, but the commanding officer could not prevail on the leaders of the excited mob to remove the "swami." At last, under the protection of the troops, the shops were re-opened, the "swami" was marched back with all the honours, and the police looked on. There were not less than 8,000 people collected.

WIDOWS' AND ORPHANS' FUND.—The report of the "Madras Widows' and Orphans' Fund" for the past year shows continued progress. There are 556 subscribers. In the children's branch there are 154 subscribers for 481 children. The total receipts were Rs. 84,321 or Rs. 4,791 in excess of the preceding year. The disbursements were Rs. 77,757, of which 37,212 were for pensions, or Rs. 2,268 in excess of 1858. The funded property now amounts to Rs. 6,85,616. The Appropriation Fund exhibited a balance of Rs. 2,22,755-9-2 to the credit of the Widows' Branch, and of Rs. 71,646-11-8 to that of the Children's Branch, after deducting all the annuities paid during the year. The fund is in a healthy state. The number of subscribers is larger than that of the Calcutta Uncovenanted Service Fund.

THE TRADE RETURNS OF Madras for the year 1858-9 show an increase of imports to the value of about forty-seven lakhs of rupees, but a decrease of exports to the extent of above sixty-four lakhs. The latter is attributed to the unfavourable season and deficiency of produce. The trade was altogether, with re-exports and treasure, about eight and a half millions sterling, or one-fourth of that of Calcutta and Bombay. This shows a total decrease of one and one-seventh millions sterling on the previous year.

THE SWINGING FESTIVAL.—The magistrate of Tinnevely reported to Government on the 25th January, that neither the swinging festival nor the ceremony of walking through fire had been performed in that district during the year 1859. Government directed this fact to be brought to the notice of the Home authorities, with reference to a despatch from them, dated the 22nd October, 1856.

also a schedule showing the labour employed and the tax due on each estate in one district, the precursor of some thirty or forty others of a similar character. Of course the planters are dissatisfied at having to pay for a scheme from which as yet they have derived little or no benefit, and this feeling will not be allayed when it is generally known that there is now no chance of the steamers being at work this year.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.—Captain Grant's trial still continues. Commencing as it did on the 19th of January, it is rather a long one, but the witnesses are so numerous, that I fear the defence, which is now going on, will last some time longer. The Commissioners are patiently going through the unpleasant task. The general impression here now is, that Captain Grant will get over it—but I cannot but think that this affair will oust him out of civil employ. Those implicated in the concoction of these scandalous charges against him, I am however of opinion, will not escape. The evidence for the prosecution has been the most contradictory. Captain Grant, in his written defence, particularly dwelt on the fact of two professional lawyers being retained for the prosecution, when the Act under which he was tried only stated that "a competent person" was to conduct the prosecution. One of the prosecutors on the part of Government (or at least the one who assisted the prosecutor) was seen by a military officer in court (a spectator) nodding to a Burman witness for the prosecution, when he was deposing against the defendant. This same assistant is an officer in the Pegu commission, lately a pleader in these courts. The matter has been brought to the notice of the court and placed on record, as well as strongly dwelt on in the defence. The head clerk of the commissioner's office figures most prominently throughout the case. The defendant has got his defence printed, together with all the correspondence connected with these charges, as well as the former charges brought against him by the commissioner of Pegu, which latter he got over. If the two charges are not proved (the third was abandoned, as the witnesses had bolted), it will look very ugly indeed on the part of those who had a finger in the pie.—Madras Athenæum.

JAVA.

The war on Boni has been brought to a close by the complete reduction of that country. On the 14th December General Van Swieten proceeded with a column from Palakka to Pampanua, accompanied by the Prince Aru Palakka and his followers. The march was accomplished in three days. Until they reached Timurong, a large campong some miles from Pampanua, the country was found very sparingly inhabited, and thus also little cultivated. It appeared to abound in deer, herds of ponies, and buffaloes. At Timurong a large population was met with, so numerous, indeed, that they seemed to have collected from all the scattered campoungs and houses of the neighbouring country. It was, therefore, found impossible to procure any houses in which the soldiers could be billeted, and they bivouacked in an open plain near a river. The people then brought fruit and poultry for sale, and offered a present of ten buffaloes, besides paddy for the horses.

While the troops proceeded by land, a marine division, consisting of three gunboats and four armed boats, containing 100 sailors and marines, besides twenty prahus with provisions, entered the river Chenrana, in order to try and reach Pampanua. No opposition was encountered, but owing to the strong current of the river they reached Pampanua a day later than the land division. The river was found generally to have a depth of two, three, to four fathoms, only one place being noticed where there were only nine feet. Captain Kroeff, who commanded this division, and the commanders of the steam ships Bali and Admiraal van Kinsbergen, who accompanied him, were of opinion that the last-named steamer could steam up the river as far as Pampanua. Lieutenant van Gennep accordingly returned to the entrance of the river, and on the 22nd brought his steamer to anchor off Pampanua. The ascent was not accomplished without considerable trouble, as the draught and length of the steamer rendered it difficult to pass the many and sometimes sharp turns and bends of the river.

On the 26th December the troops returned to Palakka, which they reached in two days.

On the 20th the governor of Celebes and the dependencies arrived at the head-quarters at Palakka, to take a part in the political arrangements.

The blockade of the coast of Boni was raised on the 1st January last, and the commander-in-chief felt himself in a position to order the return of the 14th battalion to Sourabaya, and of the infantry, cavalry, and artillery serving in Celebes to Makassar. Up to the 5th January, besides a number of minor chiefs and nobles, eight of the principal chiefs of Boni, Sopping, and other neighbouring States had arrived at head-quarters, one of them announcing that Aru Ujung was on his way with the crown jewels.

At Sinjaai all was progressing most favourably. The fortification at Balangnipa was being rapidly proceeded with, about a hundred workmen being engaged upon it and the necessary materials readily furnished. The health of the troops was excellent, and supplies of all kinds, fowls, ducks, fruit, fish, vegetables, &c., were abundantly supplied at low prices. The inhabitants of the neighbouring campoungs had mostly returned to their houses with their buffaloes and ponies, and followed their usual occupations as if no change had taken place.

The measures taken by the Governor of Celebes to open up direct communication between Makassar and Balangnipa had been completely successful. Letters had been received by way of Maros and Chamba in three days.

The Queen of Boni, by giving up the regalia, has virtually ceded her rights to the throne of Boni, and her successor has acknowledged himself to be a vassal of Holland. The kingdom of Goa thus remains the only independent country in Celebes in alliance with Holland. The States of Soping, Wajo, and Guwu have declared themselves ready to enter into contracts of peace and friendship with the Government, and to recognise it as their suzerain. Major Kroesen died on the 15th Dec., in consequence of his wounds. The whole loss of the expedition by death, since it left Java, only amounts to forty-three, Major Kroesen being the only officer.

There is very little news from Banjermassing. Two servants of officers on board the Onrust appear to have escaped the general slaughter, and had arrived at Banjermassing. An expedition was to leave on the 20th January for the place where the Onrust was captured. The report of an attack on Banjermassing turns out to have been incorrect. It arose from a non-commissioned officer having mistaken the prahu of the Resident, when making its usual nightly round, for a fleet of hostile prahus. There is said to be treachery amongst the pangerans who surround the Resident, and it is suspected that they communicate intelligence to the rebels of all intended movements.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Dec. 26.—The Ameer was still at Numlah. Allyjah Shah Murd Khan came from Jelalabad to receive the Dost, and brought some presents. The Dost asked the people of Gundluk and Jugdillah why they did not make some arrangements to render the road from Cabul to Jelalabad safe for travellers and merchants, as he had always received complaints from travellers and others that they were robbed on that road.

Surbulend Khan, one of the clan, replied that three months have elapsed since he had made arrangements to render the roadway from Kotal to Kurchukcha safe, by metalling the road and posting three thanahs; and that he had also assured travellers, that if any of them were plundered, he would make good their losses. The Dost then enjoined the other notables to use their endeavours and resources in making a metalled road between Cabul and Jelalabad, and to adopt some measures for checking the plunderers and robbers from committing depredations and outrages on the road. The Ameer left Numla about midnight, and arrived the following morning in Bala Baugh, in Mahomed Oosman Khan's fort. 27th Dec.—The Dost remained with Oosman Khan this day, and received many of the Sirdars and chiefs of the neighbouring villages. —Dec. 28.—The Dost started for Jelalabad on horseback, and ordered the troops to march also for that place. The night having come on, the Ameer, Shere Ally Khan, Golan Mahomed Khan, and the son of Shere Ally Khan, with fifty sowars, encamped at a place called Charbagh, where a Faqueer named Shahi Khan resided.—Dec. 29.—The Ameer arrived at Jelalabad, under a salute of three guns. The chiefs and Sirdars came to pay their respects to him, after which the Ameer visited Sirdar Golan Hyder Khan's garden, and expressed his regret that the garden was not completed before the founder's death. He also requested the gardeners to make the garden as beautiful as possible, and to spare no expense in making it showy and superb. The Ameer then went to Mahomed Ukbar Khan's Garden.—Dec. 30.—The Dost held a durbar this morning, and summoned all the chiefs and notables of Jelalabad, who all presented themselves to pay their respects to the Ameer. The durbar having broken up, the Dost retired, and had private intercourse with Mahomed Oosman Khan, Shere Ally Khan, and Golan Mahomed, till midnight. The subject of this private interview has not been disclosed yet.—Dec. 31.—The Dost held a durbar this morning, at which all the chiefs, &c., attended to pay their respects. Some Ghiljaes also came to pay their respects, and brought some presents for the Ameer. The Ameer ordered Allyjah Shah Murd Khan to erect a bath of Sung murmur (or white marble) at Jelalabad.

Jan. 1.—As usual, the Dost held a durbar, and the usual offerings and nuzzurs were made to him by the chiefs and sirdars of Jelalabad. The Dost told one sirdar, Saadut Khan, not to tax cattle so high as he has already done, and for which the Dost had already reproved him once; but that as a scale of the taxes 'was already sanctioned it should not be exceeded.—Jan. 2.—Peer Mahomed started from Cabul for Jelalabad and arrived there at midnight, to visit the Dost.—Jan. 3.—The Ameer held a durbar at Jelalabad, this morning, and summoned the chief and notables of the station, who presented themselves accordingly. After the durbar, the Ameer, with Peer Mahomed Khan, Gholam Mahomed Khan, Sirdar Oosman Khan, Abdool Gyas Khan, and Hafiz, held a private interview in the garden of Gholam Hyder Khan, after which the Ameer and others played some games of chess. About two in the afternoon the Dost took a ride to the river side, and commenced angling, and also ordered the fishermen to cast their nets into the river and catch fishes. At evening the Ameer returned to his camp. Rumour has it, that the Dost has despatched Shair Ally Khan to Peshawur, the truth of which I shall tell you in my next.—Jan. 4.—Nothing of interest transpired on this day.—Jan. 5.—The Dost held a durbar, at which all the sirdars were present. Shah Murd Khan also presented himself with some other chiefs. Some Khyberies under the employ of Shah Murd Khan represented to the Dost that they had not received their wages for the past year. The Dost asked Shah Murd Khan why he did not pay them, to which he replied that the khyberies had plundered all the merchants on the Khyber-pass, and that as he himself had suffered a severe loss he was unable to pay them. The Dost informed the Khyberies that they were not entitled to any wages, on account of this illegal proceeding, but that they would be paid next year. Shah Murd Khan then took the complainants to his house to make some settlement with them.—Jan. 6.—The Ameer wrote a letter to Mahomed Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, and requested him to send two Hindoo goldsmiths to Jelalabad immediately on receipt of the letter. The object of the Dost in sending for the goldsmiths was to despatch them to Kandahar, as spies to ascertain the exact quantity of gold which the mine yielded, and to inquire whether Sirdar Ameen Khan, Mahomed Naeem Khan, and Mahomed Rufeek Khan agreed with each other, and how the country was governed by them. The Dost also appointed three kossids to accompany the goldsmiths, and bring the intelligence from Kandahar.—Jan. 7.—At about noon an urzee was received from Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan, by the Dost, to the effect that he had left Cabul for Khelat-i-Ghilzie, by easy marches, confirming the people on his way in their loyalty to the Dost, and assuring them of the Ameer's endeavours to promote their interests. He was received at Khelat-i-Ghilzie by the chiefs and by the people with much pleasure, and remained there for two days. Some sirdars, sent by Mahomed Ameen Khan, arrived from Kandahar to receive him, and informed him that Mahomed Ameen Khan had sent them to request Mahomed Shureef Khan to come to Kandahar. The Ameer told Gholam Mahomed Khan that he was greatly pleased to observe that Mahomed Ameen Khan had some affection for his brother Mahomed Shureef Khan, which he manifested in inviting him to come to Kandahar whilst at Khelat-i-Ghilzie.—Jan. 8.—The Dost summoned Shah Murd Khan, and informed him that he was much pleased with the manner in which he governed Jelalabad, but that he was sorry to observe that some measures were not adopted to put down theft. The Ameer had received several complaints from the residents, stating that they were very frequently robbed, and that their property was insecure. The Ameer stated that some arrangements should be made to fine the Khelat-i-Ghilzies whenever any robbery was committed, as he suspected that they were the class of people who committed thefts generally. Shah Murd Khan agreed to devise some stringent measures to prevent this crime. The Dost then ordered Mahomed Ally Khan to caution the men of his regiment to be vigilant, and to prevent theft as much as they could.—Jan. 9.—The Ameer received an urzee from Koorum, from Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan, to the following effect:—"That the commissioner of Peshawur, with a British force, had reached the Wuzereeh hills, and arrested and punished the turbulent people, and imprisoned some and taken them to the snowy hills. The force then returned to Kohat. The Ameer remarked to Gholam Mahomed Khan, that the Wuzereeh Pathans, &c., are very wicked people, as they had the audacity to commit foul murders (which is an act of cowardice), but when they come in contact with a small British force, they make themselves scarce. If they have not the strength to fight why do they commit depredations? Gholam Mahomed Khan replied that the British Government is very merciful, but in the meantime it chastises those who rebel and prove ungrateful and turbulent. A traveller arrived from Kandahar, and stated that news had reached Kandahar from Herat that a force had marched from Mushhudd-Mukuddas for Herat.—Jan. 10.—Sirdar Shah Murv Khan received orders from the Ameer to arrest some thieves, who had committed robberies at Jelalabad. The Sirdar accordingly rode out towards Futtehabad, where he was joined by some of the chiefs of that place, and succeeded in arresting six thieves who belonged to the tribe of Sungoo Kheyls, of which two were blown away from a gun, and four were imprisoned for the time being, and the Ameer ordered that when the Sirdar should go to Sungoo Kheyl, these men should share the same fate in the presence of their brethren, who would also witness the punishment which such misconduct deserved, and impress them with some fear.—Jan. 11.—A Loghurree came and represented to the Dost that he had murdered his wife and her paramour, as he had discovered them in the act of adultery; and also that in consequence of this the relatives of his wife were finding an opportunity to avenge her death; and that he had come to the Dost for protection. The Dost replied that he may go home and live peaceably, and not to fear; to which the Loghurree answered that the relatives of his wife were stronger than himself, and that he could not live in peace. The Dost then granted him a per wannah to the effect that if any one assaulted the Loghurree he would be severely punished, and his property confiscated.—Jan. 12.—The Ameer held a durbar this morning, as usual. The sepoy represented that wheat was very scarce at Jelalabad; and that it was not procurable some times. The Dost ordered them to bring it from Kutch, where it was sold at 4 seers (Cabulee) per Rupee. A detachment was accordingly sent to Kutch to purchase the grain.—Jan. 13.—The Dost received an urzee from the son of Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, by the hand of a kossid, dated Ghuznee—which contained the following intelligence:—"That agreeably to the orders of the Dost he had purchased blankets, &c., and was waiting for Naeem Khan and Mahomed Rufeek Khan to deliver the articles, but that up to the day of the despatch of the letter no one had arrived at Ghuznee to take the articles—owing probably to the large quantity of snow (1 yard deep) which had fallen in and about Ghuznee." The kossid also stated that about three feet snow had fallen in Ghuznee and two feet in Cabul. The Ameer was much surprised, and stated that if the snow continued to fall so heavily, it would be impossible for Naeem Khan and Mahomed Rufeek Khan to go to Ghuznee for the articles.—Jan. 14.—The Dost had a private interview with Gholam Mahomed Khan, Peer Mahomed Khan, and Sirdar Oosman Khan. This interview, I learned through the agency of one of the Dost's servants, was to the following effect:—"That a letter had been received from Mahomed Azim Khan from Turkistan; the contents of which were that he (Mahomed Azeem Khan) had met some men from Badhakshan, and that he showed every hospitality towards them. The Badhakshan people told Mahomed Azeem Khan that they were anxious that their country (Badhakshan) should be annexed to the Dost's possessions. On hearing this, Mahomed Azim Khan made preparations to march for Badhakshan, but the men who came from that place ran away on seeing the force intended for the occupation of Badhakshan being equipped. It is rumoured in Turkistan that a large force is marching from Bokhara (but for what destination it is not stated), and has crossed the river Hamoo. The Ameer has been written to come over to Turkistan. It is the intention of the Dost to start for Turkistan after eight or nine days.—Jan. 15.—The Dost, after the usual durbar had broken up, told Allyjah Shah Murv Khan to inform the sirdars, moonshees, and others, to have their accounts and other documents ready for his (the Dost's) signature within eight days. Shah Murv Khan accordingly requested the men to prepare the accounts. Some merchants arrived in Cabul from Bokhara, among whom was the agent of Meer Gholam Jan (merchant). I asked the agent of Meer Gholam Jan to give me some news of Turkistan. He stated that a large Russian force had come via Aga Musjid, and encamped three stages this side of Kokan.—Jan. 16.—The Dost received an urzee from Mahomed Afzul Khan, stating that the district of Moolk Khoos (which belongs to Turkistan) was formerly governed by Mahomed Shereef Khan, but latterly he had given it to Sirdar Ablool Roaz Khan. Some zemindars, who had absconded some time ago, had assembled together and intended an attack on Moolk Khoos. That Sirdar Mahomed Azeem Khan and he had both made preparations to resist the attack; and sent some troops and two guns from Tashkurgah, in company with Mahomed Azeem Khan's force. The Ameer replied that as soon as the turbulent zemindars had assembled, he would also send a force under the command of one of his brothers.—Jan. 17.—Lalla Tootee Ram, accountant of Jelalabad, asked the Ameer if he would charge the pay of the Khyberies in the accounts. The Ameer replied, that the item may be charged in its proper place, but it should not be included in the total of the disbursements, and that this fact should not be revealed to the Khyberies. The Ameer received a letter from the Hakim of Cabul, stating that much snow had fallen at Cabul; and that the inhabitants were greatly distressed in consequence. Three sowars also arrived (in Cabul) from Ghuznee, who also stated that much snow (nearly three feet deep) had accumulated on the road from Ghuznee to Cabul.—Jan. 18.—Some merchants who were travelling from Jelalabad to Cabul were plundered on their way, at a place called Kurguch. The robbers wounded some of the traders (one severely) and took away all their merchandize. The merchants having left their wounded at Mama Khail, returned to Jelalabad and related all the circumstances of the disaster to the Dost. The Dost on hearing this was much displeased, and ordered 12 sowars to accompany the merchants, and to arrest Suabolund Khan, a ghilzie (the leader of the gang), and also the marauders.—Jan. 19.—Shere Ally Khan, with three regiments of infantry, some sowars and some guns, was in readiness to march for Sungoo Kheil against the tribe of Shunwarees, to arrest the robbers. Shere Ally Khan asked the Ameer how he was to deal with the insurgents when he caught them. The Ameer replied that some notorious thieves should be taken (from the gaol) and executed in the presence of the turbulent tribes, which circumstance would impress some fear in their minds, and induce them to give up the marauders. Shere Ally Khan and his force marched for Sungoo Kheil in the evening. Some time ago another serious complaint was presented to the Dost, in which some women (of Jelalabad) who had gone to Sungoo Kheil, to celebrate the marriage of one of their relatives, were plundered of their ornaments, and all that they had, on their way back from Sungoo Kheil. This circumstance, combined with the one above stated, greatly irritated the Dost, and orders were accordingly given to Shere Ally Khan to punish severely every refractory person among that tribe who would oppose and disobey his orders, and to arrest and execute as many highway robbers as he could trace.—Jan. 20.—The Dost held a durbar this morning, as usual, and at its conclusion invited Sirdars Gholam Mahomed, Oosman Khan, and Peer Mahomed Khan, to a private interview, and informed them that the Viceroy and Governor-general were shortly expected at Peshawur; and that it was requisite that he should prepare some handsome nuzzurs for presentation to his Excellency. The Sirdars replied that such was indispensably necessary. The Dost accordingly ordered the Sirdars to purchase some good horses (with their ornamental saddlery, &c.) a number of Turkey carpets from Persia; some large-sized mules from Persia; a number of camels; a lot of poshteens (sumbooree,) &c., and to get them ready. Sirdar Oosman Khan asked the Ameer whether he would go personally to pay a visit to the Governor-general. The Dost replied that it was not his intention to go in person, but that he intends sending Sirdar Shere Ally Khan with the nuzzurs, &c. The Sirdar reiterated and told the Ameer that it would be more suitable and customary for him to go in person. The Ameer said that he would see about it.—Jan. 21.—A letter was received by the Dost from Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, stating that on his arrival at Hissaruck (a district near Sungoo Kheil) he was received by the chiefs of that place with much kindness and cordiality, and was informed that the inhabitants of some of the neighbouring villages had deserted their homes, for fear of being arrested or capitally punished by Sirdar Shere Ally Khan; to which Shere Ally Khan replied that he had come to chastise only those people who would not obey the orders of the Dost, and such as would exhibit a rebellious spirit.—Jan. 22.—At the conclusion of the durbar, the Dost invited Sirdars Mahomed Oosman Khan, Peer Mahomed Khan, and Golam Mahomed Khan, and asked them to propose some measures for sending some troops to Badhakshan and Koondooz, as he had received several letters from Mahomed Afzul Khan, complaining of the intended attacks of the rebellious tribes of Badhakshan and Koondooz, Oozbookes and other tribes on his frontiers. The Ameer also stated that as much snow had fallen on the road (from Cabul to Badhakshan), the path was impassable for troops, and that this was the difficulty he wished to overcome, and send some assistance to Mahomed Afzul Khan. Sirdar Oosman Khan replied that it would not be advisable to send any guns or cavalry, but only infantry, to the aid of Mahomed Afzul Khan; and that if any emergency presented itself, Mahomed Afzul Khan could send for some troops from Turkistan and manage affairs, for the space of eight or nine days, after which reinforcements would be sent to him; and then he could proceed against any tribe he wished, and punish them. An urzee was received from Sirdar Ameen Khan, dated Kandahar, stating that Mahomed Rufeek Khan and Nazir Naem Khan had arrived there; that previous to their arrival he had closed the gold mine, and set a guard over it, as the expenses over the mine far exceeded the income derived from the gold. The Nazir Naem Khan had proposed to lease the gold mine to a contractor who had accompanied him to Kandahar. The contractor consented to produce one maund thubrazee (equal to four seers English) of gold daily from the mine; and that he was anxious to know whether the Dost had any objection to the measure. The Dost smiled after reading the contents of the urzee, and remarked that Ameen Khan had not replied to his former letters regarding the gold mine; but since he had sent two other Sirdars after him he had now written and informed him (the Ameer) of the state of the gold mine. Sirdar Golam Mahomed Khan, Mooktear, ordered his subordinates to get the nuzzurs, &c., ready, as the Ameer is about to go to Peshawur in person, to meet the Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

—Jan. 24.—Information was received from Sirdar Mahomed Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, that he had purchased 1,500 posteens, and despatched them to Turkisthan; and that much snow had fallen at Cabul; and the inhabitants were greatly distressed. Whilst the Dost was seated in the garden the sowars brought in Surbolund Khan, the robber, and the Ameer on seeing him was greatly irritated, and told him that during his (the Dost's) presence in Jellalabad all these robberies were being committed, and that if he did not trace the marauders he would be severely punished. Surbolund Khan replied that these robbers do not belong to his gang; because on the night of the robbery he had sent two of his brothers and some sowars after the thieves; but they belonged to the gang at a place called Suffaid Ko, or white hills. The Ameer insisted on his tracing the thieves, and informed him that if he failed to catch them he would fine him 4 Rs. on every 1 Rupee worth of property plundered. The Ameer gave him a few days' grace to discover the thieves.—Jan. 25.—At the conclusion of the durbar the Dost remarked to Sirdar Golam Mahomed Khan, that he had received news from Lahore, that the Governor-general of India had bestowed handsome khilluts, jagheers, and pensions, on Rajas, Chiefs, and Sirdars in Hindoostan, and to such as proved loyal during the mutinies. Golam Mahomed Khan stated that the Governor-general of India is possessed of much influence, and can bestow any grant he wishes on deserving and faithful subjects of the Queen; he also highly applauded the system of government which the British pursued. It is rumoured that the Dost had written to Sirdar Sooltan Mahomed Khan, stating that the Governor-general of India was expected at Peshawur on the 15th Feb., and that if he (Sooltan Mahomed Khan) was anxious to accompany him, he was welcome, and the Dost would introduce him to the Governor general, a thing which he long ago desired.—Lahore Chronicle.

Attendance of Officers at Lectures.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Khunna, Jan. 26.

The G.O. dated Oct. 23, 1857, directing the daily attendance of officers, when practicable, at Hindoostanee lectures, and calling for periodical reports of progress, is cancelled.

The C. in C. believes that the officers of her Majesty's service are fully aware of the value of a proficiency in the native languages, and it has been gratifying to him to observe that more than thirty officers have passed at recent examinations.

The C. in C. has further to publish for general information that his Royal Highness the General Commanding in Chief has notified his concurrence with the recent announcement of the Government of India, that a knowledge of the native language, as certified by examination, will be considered an indispensable qualification for responsible employment in this country, whether on the personal staff of general officers, the general staff of the army, or in other appointments.

Formation of Invalid Companies.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Giranah, Feb. 3.—The C. in C. desires that all weakly and worn-out men of the native infantry corps proceeding to China be left in India, and that all men of this description, of each regiment, be formed into a company.

2. H.E. is further pleased to direct that all companies of the Punjab infantry corps, so composed, shall be united together, and formed into a depot batt. at Lahore, where it will perform general duty.

3. A native officer and two non-commissioned officers, at least, from each regiment, are to be left behind for the purpose of looking after the depot companies and drilling the recruits, should it be found necessary to entertain any in the place of casualties occurring in the service companies.

4. As soon as any of the companies referred to in para. 2 shall reach Lahore, the officer commanding the Lahore division will order the formation of the depot battalion alluded to, and appoint, subject to the approval of Lord Clyde, an officer to its command.

5. To this officer all family remittances from the men of the regiments composing his battalion, who are employed on service in China, will be carefully and regularly remitted, and it will be his particular duty to see that they duly reach their destination, and that a proper system of accounts is kept up for each corps.

6. The depot of the regiment of Lucknow will be stationed at Cawnpore, and marched to that place under an officer who will be selected for its command by the officer commanding the presidency division, and who will be responsible for its efficiency and discipline, and through whom the family remittances of the service companies will be made as directed in para. 5.

Suspension of the "Discharge" Order.

Adj. gen.'s office, H.M. British forces, Calcutta, Feb. 16, 1860.—Hd. Qrs. Camp Girana, Feb. 3, 1860.—In consequence of the great inconvenience and risk of moving small detachments of soldiers during the hot and rainy seasons, and the difficulty of procuring passages from India, the C. in C. directs that soldiers shall not be sent from H.M.'s regts. for disch. or transf. between April 1 and Sept. 30 of each year.

Soldiers who may be entitled to claim discharge by expiration of term of service between April 1 and May 31, are permitted to make their applications in time to be sent from their regts. before April 1.

Those entitled to discharge between June 1 and Sept. 30 will make their applications in time to be sent from their regts. immediately after Oct. 1.

In the case of regiments at or near the presidency, of soldiers who apply to be discharged at the station where serving, or of transfers in which soldiers may have but a short distance to proceed, general officers will be pleased to exercise their discretion in forwarding applications for discharge or transfer; but, the special circumstances having now ceased under which discharges have been authorised throughout the past year, the C. in C. directs, that in accordance with the custom of this command, the movements of small parties of soldiers may be confined to the season when they can be performed without risk.

This order does not apply to detachments of invalids or convalescents under special arrangements, which will proceed as before in urgent cases, as opportunities offer.

Commanding officers will be good enough to explain these instructions to their regiments, and point out that the order is not a prohibition of discharge, but a detail arrangement for the convenience of the service.

Transfer of Troops.

Hd. Qrs. Camp Reyah, Feb. 4.—Subject to the approval of H.R.H. the General C. in C., the soldiers of H.M. regiments who have been doing duty with the 4th troop 2nd brigade Bengal Horse Artillery, and who, under Government authority, dated 18th July, 1859, volunteered to the Bengal Artillery, are permanently transferred to the Bengal Artillery. Their transfer documents are to be completed and forwarded, and the soldiers are to be struck off the strength of their former regiments.

This order does not apply to soldiers of H.M.'s regiments who have been attached to the Bengal Artillery under the authority of Circular 2,191 of 7th June, 1853, from the Department of the Adjutant-general of the Army.

The Beyt and Dwarka Operations.

Hd. Qrs., Bombay, Jan. 14, 1860.

From the adjt.-gen. of the army to the maj.-gen. comdg. N.D.A., Ahmedabad.

Sir,—Adverting to Col. Scobie's despatch, detailing the combined operations of the forces under his and Lieut.-col. Donovan's command before Dwarka, in Oct. and Nov. last, I have the honour, by direction of the c.-in-c., to annex copy of a resolution passed by govt. on the subject, which I am to request having been duly communicated to Lieut.-cols. Donovan and Christie, is also made known to the officers and troops of all arms of the service engaged in these operations.

I am at the same time to intimate that Sir Henry Somerset highly appreciates good services rendered by both officers and men, and cordially concurs in the sentiments of government as now expressed. You will be good enough to request Lieut.-cols. Donovan and Christie to favour the c.-in-c. with the full particulars, supported by sufficient evidence, of the admirable conduct of Lieut. C. Goodfellow, engns., and Lieuts. La Touche and Hebbert, 17th regt. N.I., respectively, in order that H.E. may be able to decide whether or not their gallant deeds may be submitted for recommendation for reward by the decoration of the Victoria Cross.

A separate communication on the subject of the first two paragraphs has been duly made to Col. Scobie. EDWARD GREEN, Col., Adjt.-gen.

Resolution by the Rt. Hon. the Gov. in Council, dated Dec. 13, 1859.

1st. Although the anticipated result of the operations against Dwarka was frustrated by the escape of the enemy, the Govr. in Council is glad to find that the skill, gallantry, and determination with which they were carried on have secured to the combined detachments under Col. Scobie and Lieut. col. Donovan the approbation of H.E. the C. in C.

2nd. His lordship considers that in the operations subsequent to the evacuation of Dwarka Col. Scobie evinced great judgment.

3rd. The Rt. Hon. the Govr. in Council has read with warm interest the account of the gallant affair of the detach. under Lieut. col. Christie with a large body of Wagheers in a very strong position near the village of Sumlassa. The Rt. Hon. the Govr. in Council regards the affair as very creditable to Col. Christie and the officers and men under his command. The detach. was marching and fighting from 4 a.m. until dark, and all did their duty bravely and cheerfully. His lordship notices with particular commendation the gallantry of Lieuts. La Touche and Hebbert, Naique Sew Pursaad Sing and the three privates of the 17th N.I., who carried off a wounded comrade from under a galling fire at a very critical period of the engagement.

4th. His lordship in Council fully concurs in the favourable view taken by H.E. the C. in C. of the conduct of the officers mentioned in the despatches of Col. Scobie and Lieut. col. Christie.

H. L. ANDERSON, Sec. to Govt.

INDIAN ARMY.—A return moved for by Lord Ellenborough has just been issued, and shows the manner in which the officers of the disbanded regiments of the Bengal army are now disposed of. It appears that of the officers disbanded 277 are on furlough; 115 on political and civil employ; 55 on the military staff; 302 serving with irregular regiments; 118 doing duty with her Majesty's European regiments; 36 doing duty with other corps of the Bengal army; 6 on duty with discharged soldiers proceeding to England; 64 with police corps; 58 with commissariat and stud; 38 on public works and surveys; 3 studying at Thomason College; 1 in temporary command of station at Barrackpore; 14 doing duty at Saugor, Meeanmeer, Meerut, Mooltan, Delhi, Barrackpore &c.; and 64 unemployed, including ten colonels residing in India; making a total of 1,151 officers. The total number of privates and non-commissioned officers who took their discharge from the late East India Company's army in consequence of the transference of the government of India to the Crown was 10,185; of which number 6,338 were from Bengal, 1,739 from Madras, and 2,108 from Bombay. The present effective strength of the local European regiments in India is in Bengal 6,324, in Madras, 2,879, and in Bombay 2,676 men: total, 11,879; not including 3,303 recruits embarked for India between the 1st of June and 1st of December, 1859, and 1,393 recruits for India now at the depots in England.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

SUCCESS, it is proverbially said, is apt to blind the judgment, and to produce undue self-confidence. No company of modern times has exhibited greater enterprise than that which monopolises the overland traffic with India; and, consequently, none has been more completely successful. But commercial prosperity, like political power, can only be maintained by the exercise of the same faculties which originally achieved it. Such, however, does not appear to be the view of human affairs entertained by the directors of the great P. and O. Company. Elated by their long series of triumphs over all competitors, they have come to regard the Overland Route as their special property by right divine, and, after the manner of despots, they are insensibly led to abuse their privileges. It seems quite to escape their recollection that they are the servants of the public, and not its masters, and that their actual position is that of stewards. As the unjust steward fondly imagined that because his master deferred calling him to account, he was therefore independent and irresponsible, and accordingly betook himself to ill-treating his fellow-servants, and to playing all sorts of fantastic tricks before high heaven, so have the P. and O. Company arrived at the mistaken conclusion that they are answerable to no man for their manifold shortcomings and neglect of duty. On all sides complaints are made of the overcrowding on board their ships, especially on the Suez side, where such a state of things is the most prejudicial to the health of the passengers, but where there is no competition to excite emulation. The inferior quality of the wines has long been a subject of indignant remonstrance, but latterly, it is said, the provisions have been not only indifferent, but also insufficient in quantity. On reaching their destination passengers are usually too busy to do more than address an angry letter to the newspapers, and thus the numerous laches of this powerful company have hitherto escaped their proper punishment. At length a stand has been made against a course of conduct quite unworthy of honourable men. An action for "loss and injury" sustained by a second-class passenger has been brought in the Small Cause Court at Bombay, and damages awarded to the amount of five hundred rupees, together with costs. The plaintiff was one George Craven, a fitter in the employment of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, who proved that, although he had paid £43. 10s. for a second-class berth from Southampton to Bombay, no berth whatever was procurable between Suez and that port. The first night he slept on the floor of the second-class saloon, but next day orders were issued that the steerage passengers should not be permitted to go below either by day or night. They were therefore compelled to sleep on deck under a sort of awning, which protected them so imperfectly that when they arose in the morning their clothes were soaked through with dew and spray. For fifteen days the plaintiff was unable to change his clothes, nor was any bed or bedding supplied to him. Indeed, there were no more than six or seven beds for twenty-two persons. It is not very surprising that Mr. Craven should have suffered in health in consequence of such exposure to the sun by day and to dews and damp by night. On his arrival at Bombay he was obliged to proceed to the hospital, and for two months he had been prevented by rheumatism, congestion of brain, and bowel complaint, from attending to his duties and earning his livelihood. The defence set up by the Company's attorney was scarcely creditable to them. No attempt was made to disprove the plaintiff's statement, but a technical objection was raised on the ground that no contract had been entered into with himself, but only with his employers. It was shown, however, that, although the G. I. P. Railway Company did advance money to pay his passage, it was in the form of a loan, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, and the Judge rightly decided that in this instance his employers acted merely as his agents. As his Honour's summing up was as concise as it was perspicuous, we give it for the benefit of other passengers, who will thus be encouraged to assert their rights, should the Company refuse to take warning from this example:—

"The duties of the defendants to the plaintiff—said Mr. Judge Hore—ought to be collected from the ticket. It appears quite probable that an agreement may have been entered into between the two companies, but there may have been, however, duties arising out of this contract towards the plaintiff. The plaintiff swears that the money paid was paid by the company on his behalf, so that it is in reality a loan; and previous to his departure from England this ticket was handed over to him, from which it is clear that the company represented to him certain privileges to which he is entitled. The ticket says, a '2nd Class berth, all requisite cabin furniture, bedding, linen,' &c. It is abundantly clear he did not have them, and the P. and O. Company have been guilty of an omission of those duties, and in consequence of such omission the plaintiff has suffered and is still suffering. Although others may have preferred to sleep on deck, I am led to conclude that the plaintiff suffers from the omission of a duty on the part of the defendants. The amount of damage was a point upon which it was difficult to judge—how long the plaintiff may yet suffer and be deprived of half monthly pay it is impossible to say; it has not been attempted on the part of the defendants to reduce the claim, and taking all points into consideration, I feel that I must give a verdict for the amount claimed."

We trust that the directors of this great and opulent Company will not persist in braving public opinion simply because they happen to enjoy a monopoly. As men of honour they are bound to fulfil their contract to the uttermost, and as wealthy men they have not a single excuse to offer in defence of their niggardly and avaricious conduct in failing to supply sufficient accommodation and proper food in return for the very handsome remuneration they take care to exact.

A MAGISTERIAL INQUIRY IN INDIA.

We all know the venerable anecdote of the maid-servant who was enchanted with a sermon in which the word "Mesopotamia" came in "beautifully." A similar case has lately occurred at Kirkee. Only in this instance the maid-servant is personated by a magistrate, and the formula, "I over-rule the objection," takes the place of Mesopotamia. It is hardly necessary to say that we allude to the preliminary investigation instituted into the circumstances of the wounding of Cornet Browne, H.M.'s 14th Dragoons, by Mr. Hunt, late sergeant-major in that distinguished corps. It is still less requisite that we should recapitulate the details of this disgraceful and melancholy affair. Our object is not to "improve the occasion" with regard to Mr. Browne's grievous offence against all laws, human and divine, but to show the utter incompetency of the committing magistrate. Of Mr. Kemball as an individual we have not the slightest personal knowledge. He may be, and no doubt he is, an excellent and amiable gentleman in private life, and not by any means the less lovable as a friend, or the less agreeable as an acquaintance, because he happens to be ignorant of the commonest principles of evidence. In fact, like the counsellor mentioned in "Sir Jonah Barrington's Memoirs," he might be surnamed "Necessity," quia nullas habet leges, because he knows nothing of law. As a magistrate, however, this defect is certainly an awkward one, and very likely to expose the Bench to ridicule. Indeed, such has been the result in the case to which we desire to draw the attention of our readers. The simple formula, "I overrule the objection," appears to be the alpha and omega of this gentleman's acquaintance with the practice of the law courts, and may be regarded as the measure of his capacity for conducting an investigation implying the slightest difficulty or delicacy. Our limits will not permit us to review at any great length the extraordinary character of the inquiry in question, but it may startle even a briefless barrister in this country to find a magistrate in Mr. Kemball's position unaware of the latitude allowed to counsel on cross-examination. Mr. Browne having testified a strong disinclination to prosecute Mr. Hunt, was asked by Mr. Judge, the attorney for the defence, if his reason was not that he considered he had injured the defendant. Thereupon the magistrate exclaimed, "That is a leading question, and I must over-rule it." Mr. Judge saw his advantage at a glance, but contented himself with mildly observing, "I submit I am allowed to ask any questions on a cross-examination of the prosecuting witness." At another point of the inquiry the sapient magistrate asked the Captain of the Bazaar what Mr. Hunt had said to him when he was arrested. The attorney naturally objected to any such second-hand evidence, when Mr. Kemball grandly replied, "I must require him to say anything he did hear Mr. Hunt say—I must have all that occurred." In vain Mr. Judge reminded his worship that the magistrates of Bombay and elsewhere had been severely reprimanded for taking down any confession in evidence. The stereotyped answer was ready, "I overrule the objection." Again did Mr. Judge return to the charge and protest against Captain Eveyard repeating anything that Mr. Hunt might have said to him, on the ground that it was to be regarded rather as a confession than as evidence—he was still met by the cuckoo-cry, "I have overruled your objection." At the very outset of the investigation the same game was played. "Check to your queen" was the invariable retort to every move, regardless of the loss of pieces and the inevitable check-mate. When Mr. Judge inquired on what information the charge against his client was grounded, the magistrate glibly responded: "It is a dying deposition." But when the defendant's counsel insisted that a dying declaration could not be used while the deponent was alive and out of immediate danger, the answer was: "I hear your objection, but overrule it. I hold it is a deposition and not a dying declaration," although only two minutes previously he himself had characterised it as "a dying deposition." Mr. Judge having then asked if his worship had overruled his objection because the documents adduced—Mr. Browne's statements, made when he considered himself on the verge of death—were not dying declarations, Mr. Kemball unhesitatingly replied that he did not view them as such. Mr. Browne, however, distinctly swore that he made the said depositions under the conviction that he was a dying man, and further that he had stipulated that no use should be made of them if he recovered. Mr. Kemball further appears to labour under the impression that he was at liberty to conduct the preliminary investigation with closed doors, and even expressed himself to that effect in an emphatic manner when the defendant's counsel raised a doubt on the subject. At another time the magistrate refused to take down the answer of a witness unless Mr. Judge would tell him whence he obtained the information on which he had founded his question. That it may not be supposed we are giving a false colour to simple facts, we subjoin an extract from the report in the Bombay Times referring to the point last alluded to:—

"(Lieutenant W. H. S. Beamish, re-sworn.)

"Mr. Judge: Mr. Beamish, have you not a nickname in your regiment?"

"Beamish: I have a nickname in the regiment."

"Mr. Judge: What is it?"

"Beamish: I am called 'the Snapper.'"

"Magistrate: I can't allow that, unless you (Mr. Judge) will tell me who gave you that information. Witness ought not to have answered it."

"Mr. Judge: I cannot put him on his guard. (To witness.) Did you carry any letters to Mrs. Hunt for Mr. Browne?"

"Beamish: I did. (To the Court.) Am I obliged to answer that?"

"Magistrate: Not if it affects your own character."

"Mr. Judge: I beg to differ from the Court. Under Act 2 of 1855, sec. 32, witness is compelled to answer, although such evidence cannot be used against himself. (To the witness.) Did you carry any letters through another party?"

"Beamish: Am I obliged to answer?"

"Magistrate: You are not compelled to answer anything which affects your own character."

"Mr. Judge: Has the Court taken down witness's answer to the first question?"

"Magistrate: I will take down the reply, 'I am called "the Snapper" in the 14th Regiment of Dragoons,' if you will tell me who gave you that information."

"Mr. Judge: I will do so privately."

We need not pursue the subject any further, though we have by no means exhausted the measure of Mr. Kemball's absurdities. But, in truth, our business is not with that gentleman individually, but with the entire system of which, in this instance, he happens to be a prominent and conspicuous symbol. If magistrates unacquainted with law are to be permitted to exercise magisterial functions, at least let them have the benefit of professional advice; just as in this country our county magistrates, when they alight upon a just judgment, are indebted to the guidance of an experienced clerk. A wiser course, no doubt, would be to require the possession of legal knowledge on the part of those who are called upon to administer the law, but this seems so obvious and natural a proceeding, that we forbear to press it lest we should incur the suspicion of expecting common sense from the governing powers.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY.

Mr. H. BAILLIE asked the Secretary of State for India whether he was about to sanction the issue of a paper currency by the Government of India; and, if so, whether he intended to communicate the details of the scheme to Parliament, and to take the opinion of the House upon the subject; and whether the Government had come to a final decision with respect to the re-organisation of the Indian army?

Sir C. WOOD said he had sanctioned the issue of paper currency in India. The details of the measure would be brought before the council in India; but it was not his intention to take any vote on the subject in that House. A motion had already been agreed to for the production of papers, and he had to state that they would be laid on the table on Monday next. With regard to the second question, the Government had not come to any final decision respecting the re-organisation of the Indian army.

REWARDS OF INDIAN OFFICERS.—THE RUMOURED DISBANDMENT OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Sir J. FERGUSSON asked the Secretary for India whether it was in contemplation to bestow honours or promotion upon any officers who have been recommended for such rewards in consideration of distinguished services in the suppression of the late mutiny in India, but who have not yet been rewarded. He called particular attention to the case of the 2nd regiment of Bombay Light Cavalry. That regiment was part of the forces employed under General Sir Hugh Rose, and he enumerated the services of the regiment in operations in which the disproportion of the European forces to those opposed to them were as great as at Plassy. The commanding officer of the regiment, Major Taylor, was no less than eight times mentioned in despatches, or thanked by the Governor-General, or by the governors of presidencies, or by the Secretary of State for India, but he had received no promotion or reward.

Colonel SYKES said there had appeared in the morning papers within the last day or two a communication from Calcutta, to the effect that the whole of the native army of India was to be abolished, not only the mutinous army of Bengal, but the two loyal armies of Madras and Bombay. The mischievousness of such an impression getting abroad could not be too broadly stated. Of course the friends and relatives of the thousands of officers who had read the statement would be in the utmost alarm; the officers themselves in India must have received it not only with alarm but with indignation, and there must be great agitation among the troops. He also asked when the returns ordered by the House of the services of the Bombay regular cavalry, and the returns of all officers recommended for brevets or honours during the late mutiny, would be laid upon the table of the House? The officers, he said, to whom these returns related happened to be in this country with their regiments, and the returns were prepared, but unhappily they required the formality of going through the Adjutant's-office at Bombay. He believed they would comprise the cases mentioned by the hon. baronet (Sir J. Fergusson).

Colonel TORRENS said a few months ago the Secretary for India authorised the publication of a despatch eulogising the services of Sir Robert Hamilton and Lieutenant-colonel Durand. They had received the thanks of Parliament, and he wished to know whether any more substantial reward was to be conferred on them for their eminent services during the mutiny in Central India?

Sir C. WOOD said, in reply, that he would first refer to the question of the honourable baronet (Sir J. Fergusson) as to the rewards to military officers. Such rewards were always given on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, and those rewards were promotion and the honour of the Bath. Every officer recommended by the Commander-in-Chief had been promoted, and with regard to the Bath the recommendations were so numerous that they almost exceeded the proportionate number of the order which was allotted to the officers of the Indian service. That honour had been conferred on a considerable number, and the remaining officers would receive it as recommended by the Secretary-at-War. Two officers of the 2nd Bombay had been recommended by the Commander-in-Chief, and they had been promoted. Delays had occurred with respect to the civil service rewards; but it was thought better to wait for a complete statement from India than to leave out some by proceeding on a partial report. He hoped there would be no delay before those officers received that reward for which they had been recommended, and which they so richly deserved. The next question he had to answer was that which had been asked by his hon. and gallant friend behind him (Colonel Sykes), viz.: whether there was any foundation for the report that the whole native army of India was to be abolished, including the armies of Bombay and Madras. He had to state, in reply, that there was no foundation at all for such a report. He was sorry to say that the expenditure of the Bombay army was higher in the present year than in the preceding one; but, on the other hand, that of the Madras army was less. With regard to the returns mentioned by the hon. and gallant member, some delay had necessarily arisen in their preparation, but they would be laid before the House as soon as possible. A portion of the information required would have to be obtained from India, but two additional clerks were now employed in preparing the returns.

THE INDIAN DUTY ON YARNS.—The directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce at a recent meeting passed a resolution strongly condemning the increased rate of duty on yarns, proposed by Mr. Wilson as part of his system of Indian finance. They have also requested an interview with Sir Charles Wood, the Secretary of State for India, for the purpose of expressing to him their opinions on the subject, and we are informed that Sir C. Wood has appointed to receive a deputation from the Chamber on Tuesday, the 27th inst.

CLAPHAM COMMON.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Picnic, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS, handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common.

Apply at Brunswick House, Clapham-common.

MILITARY and NAVAL EDUCATION.—

A CAMBRIDGE GRADUATE, resident at Brighton, RECEIVES a limited number of PUPILS, between the ages of Twelve and Fifteen, who may be destined for the Military and Naval Professions. With a view to this ultimate object, the entire course of Study, from the outset, is regulated expressly in conformity with the requirements of the Examinations at Addiscombe, Sandhurst, Woolwich, and Portsmouth; and every care is taken to direct special attention to those subjects likely to prove professionally useful in the future career of the Naval or Military officer. The Pupils are examined periodically in Mathematics by Professor J. R. YOUNG, formerly of Belfast College, and Author of "A Course of Mathematics, Pure and Mixed, for the Use of Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations," &c.; and also in Classics and Modern Languages by Scholars of repute.

Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street, London.

BY J. R. YOUNG,
(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

SIXTY YEARS OF SUCCESS HAVE PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL possesses extraordinary properties for promoting the growth and improving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of Whiskers, the Beard, and Mustachios, it is unfailling in its stimulative operation. For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR, while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the numerous Testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION.—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," &c., in white letters, and their Signature, "A. ROWLAND AND SONS," in Red Ink.

Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years.

"W. J. NEWMAN,

"Surgeon Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

NELSON'S MEDICATED BELT.

(Ed. Nelson, Naval Surgeon from 1832 to 1857.) Gentlemen who are subject to pains in the back or loins, Rheumatism, Lumbago, or who are given to corpulency, are advised to wear NELSON'S MEDICATED BELT, as it gives a great support to the entire frame, and a comfortable and genial warmth to the back and abdomen, promoting health and digestion. Gentlemen who ride for business or pleasure should wear this Belt as a preventive of Rupture, &c.

NELSON'S MEDICATED MARINE BELT for the prevention of Sea Sickness and the support of the back and loins during a long voyage.

"All those whose duty or pleasure calls them to sea should possess this Belt, for, putting aside its use on board ship, it is invaluable as a Riding Belt, fitting easily, and supporting the back."

"MARK PERCIVAL.

"Lower Parade, Leamington, August 3, 1855." These Belts are sold by Mr. WHITBURN, Chemist, 174, Regent-street, price 21s. each, or direct from the Maker, WM. ELSTAB, 12, Avery-row, New Bond-street. Circulars free. Orders from the country must have the size of waist and hips, and a Post-office Order for 21s., payable to Wm. ELSTAB, at Cavendish-street.

These Belts can be had of any tailor.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—

Decision.—It is difficult for the learned to decide what particular remedies in the pharmacopoeia are best adapted to an individual case. In this the treatment pursued by Professor Holloway has a manifest advantage; for the use of his noble preparations will effect a purity throughout the system by casting out all noxious matters; and this must prove beneficial in all diseases—this must arrest the progress of most disorders. Multitudes have followed Holloway's simple but sure instructions with success; if faithfully obeyed none will be disappointed. Whilst the power of the Pills drives out internal disorders, the Ointment soothes, cools, and heals wherever it is applied. Holloway's remedies have a decided advantage over all drugs.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBERRY

sold Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of Fever, Rheumatism, Violent Colds, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name, F. NEWBERRY, No. 45, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.

Unqualified and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorous, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BASCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to

THE PUNJAB OCTROI IN THE HILLS.

We have not yet seen a full report on the working of the octroi in the great towns of the Punjab, but in the hills it is said to be most oppressive. There is no carrying trade to be stopped or impeded, and from geographical peculiarities the tax is levied with certainty and ease. Yet the result, we are assured, is a complete triumph for the traders, on whom it was intended the tax should mainly fall.

Perhaps Kussowlie is a good example. At a hill station only accessible by two roads, with no stores of provisions, the tax was carried into operation at once, and was levied without difficulty or the possibility of evasion. The duty levied was Rs. 2, annas 2 per cent. on all sales.

The following table shows how the bunneahs met it:—

Prices before tax.	After tax.	Duty.
Wheat, 32 seers per rupee.	24 seers per rupee.	Rs. 2-2
Atta, 30 seers per rupee.	26 seers per rupee.	per cent.
Dhal (Oorudke), 14 seers per rupee.	12 seers per rupee.
Gram, 45 seers per rupee.	38½ seers per rupee.
Ghi, 2 seers 10 chittacks per rupee.	2 seers 8 chittacks per rupee.
Oil, 6 pice per bottle.	7 pice per bottle.

Prices were rising at the time, but they must have made a large margin of profit by this attempt to tax them.

At Sanawar the duty has been farmed to a native contractor, who pays Rs. 300 for six months, and boasts he will make 1,000. If he is correct, the residents must pay Rs. 1,000 a year, and in addition 600 to Government. This bill, it must be remembered, is only inhabited by the officers, inmates, and servants of the Lawrence Military Asylum, who are by no means overpaid, and all maintained by Government. By giving away Rs. 1,000 in exchange for Rs. 600 it is contemplated to increase the public revenue. This principle has, we believe, been widely acted upon in the Governor-general's durbars.

In Umballa the results are much the same. Everything taxed has risen so much that the trader gains by the tax, and all the discontent and unpopularity of the transaction, which are very great, go to the sarkar. Here is the result expressed in figures:—

Prices before tax.	After tax.	Duty.
Wheat, 35 seers per rupee.	34 seers per rupee.	10 annas
Atta, 31 seers per rupee.	27 seers per rupee.	per cent.
Dhal (Oorudke), 25 seers per rupee.	16 seers per rupee.	on all
Gram, 45 seers per rupee.	38 seers per rupee.	kind of
Rice, 19 seers per rupee.	16 seers per rupee.	grain
Oil, 6 pice per bottle.	7 pice per bottle.	(reduced
Sugar, 3 seers per rupee.	2½ seers per rupee.	duty).
Masalla, 8 seers per rupee.	7 seers per rupee.	3 Rs. p.c.
Ghi, 5 seers and 1 chittack per rupee.	3 seers 9 chittacks per rupee.	5 " "
Cloth.	For cheap cloth we believe 4th risen.	3 " "

The Government have reduced the duty on the necessities of life, after putting on a higher one by way of experiment.

Another advantage the shopkeepers have reaped from this attempt to separate them from their rupees is that more business now falls into their hands. Formerly prices were kept down by many articles being sold without their intervention. Natives with a little money to come and go upon bought wheat, dhal, &c., from the zemindars, and ground and sorted it themselves. Now, however, the country people do not come as formerly. They grudge paying the duty, and fear if they do not make a sale that it will be lost. The bunneahs have it all their own way. Itinerant traders and boxwallahs will get their death blow. That tax, whatever else it may be, is certainly not an income-tax on trade.—Friend of India.

MR. WILSON'S BILL FOR THE INTRODUCTION OF A SYSTEM OF PAPER CURRENCY.

The Legislative Council sat on Saturday morning, March 3rd, and after the routine business was disposed of,

The Right Honourable James Wilson rose, according to notice, to move the first reading of a Bill for the introduction of a paper currency. He said that when he had the honour a fortnight since to make his financial statement it would be remembered that amongst the needed reforms of the administration of India few things had been considered of more importance than the adoption of a well-considered improvement in the currency. In fulfilment of the pledge then given he now proposed on behalf of the Government to introduce this Bill, which embodied principles of the soundness of which there could be no possible doubt; but he felt anxious only that he should find the power of fully expounding and clearly expressing principles and measures of such great importance. Whatever difference of opinion might exist on some points, there was but one opinion in England or India, that the present system required great amendment—it was most unsatisfactory, and called for prompt remedy. He detailed the well known defects of the cumbersome system based upon the standard of a silver coin, the risk and cost of the necessary transfer of which from district to district it was difficult to estimate. One mark of its cost was Sir Charles Napier's declaration that at one time not fewer than 30,000 native troops were occupied in the guard and transport of treasure. Even if it could be considered solely as an economic question, it would be one of great importance. To day he was prepared to propose for remedy a scheme at once large and comprehensive. The Government felt it their duty not to legislate piecemeal on such a vital question, but to put before them a well considered plan, based on sound principles so wide as to embrace all India, capable of being extended to any required limits, yet secured by checks within itself which should prevent possibility of wrong or failure. In the peculiar position of India it would be well to premise what was the object proposed to themselves, in order to decide upon the best means of its attainment. Starting with the fact that from time immemorial silver had been the standard of Indian monetary systems, he sketched forcibly the evil attendant upon its difficulty of transport, upon the withdrawal of so much of the precious metals from profitable use to be locked up in the unprofitable form of coinage;—upon the limitation of commerce and great loss attendant upon remittance of a great bulk of silver from out districts to-day to be returned possibly to the same districts to-morrow; and having explained the theory of commerce which lies at the base of all currencies that they are the condensed modes of exchanging commodities, he proceeded to declare the determination of Government to do nothing in the proposed changes which could by any possibility involve any breach of faith through which the public could suffer loss by the adoption of any change in standard or system. He illustrated the enormous development of Indian commerce from the returns, which showed that whilst the average importation of bullion for the years 1836—40 was four millions sterling, the average of the last four years was nearly twelve millions, and that this was all required for the coinage was proved by its being taken to the mint for conversion, though there was a charge of 3 per cent. upon the coinage. He ran over the theory of exchanges through which nations, and banks, and individuals conducted their business operations. He ably exposed the fallacies by which a gold currency, either at a fixed value or a fluctuating one, had been supported, and showed by the experience of France and Austria how it must inevitably fail here. He declared a double standard to be a misnomer; the thing could not exist; and so arrived at the purpose of the Government to adopt a sound and well-considered paper currency, leaving the standard unchanged and retaining its full value. There would be thus a great profit in the release of the precious metal from its profitless form, and a well regulated paper currency would not be an addition to, but a substitution, in a cheap material, for the existing coin. He illustrated the inconvenience and absurdity of the present mode by an allusion to the sealed bags, said to contain Rs. 1,000, which were circulated by endorsement, probably without actual value, in the N. W. Provinces. He then developed the Governmental scheme of paper currency, the leading points to be secured by which were, 1st, absolute convertibility, 2nd, due limitation of the issues. The outline of the provisions of the Bill, are,

That there shall be an absolutely convertible paper currency, in the form of notes, of Rs. 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 each.

That these notes shall be made a legal tender as between individuals, and receivable in payment of revenue and all demands of Government.

That the issue shall be by the agency of commissioners in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, fully empowered, bound to observe the regulations laid down, and released from all obligation to obey in this respect any other commands than those of the legislative council. That there shall be a division of all India into circles, each presided over by a deputy commissioner at the central town of each circle. The notes all to be manufactured in Calcutta, and the notes of each circle to be at all times convertible into specie at the treasury of the circle, and also at the presidency. The commissioner in Calcutta will despatch notes to the districts for distribution to the public in exchange for silver.

That every commissioner shall retain at all times, and under secure checks to ensure it, one-third the amount of the notes issued by him in silver, and the remaining two-thirds in public securities.

The whole was described as being a secure and self-acting system based upon the issue department of the Bank of England; and security against forgery of the notes will be ensured by the adoption of all the well-tried means of the Bank of England, through whose manufacturers and machinery the paper is to be made and the preparation of the notes to be effected.

He proceeded to show how this system would yield a great profit to Government, and as no private company could compete in circulating an issue against the Government, the provisions in the charters of the Presidency Banks permitting them to issue notes would be rescinded under due notice, and with all possible care that their interests should suffer as little as possible under such a change. He alluded to the intended means of utilising the treasury balances, seldom less than 10 to 12 crores, and also to means already in operation of getting out from England ten lakhs of copper coinage; as well as to establish new copper mints in Calcutta and Bombay.

Having thus detailed the main points of—

1. A fixed standard of silver,
2. An absolute convertibility of paper,
3. Full security for reserves to cover the issues, he wound up with an assurance of his conviction that the great interests of India which were involved would be secured and the measure prove a sure basis of growing prosperity.

The speech occupied two hours in delivery.

At a later stage of the day's proceedings Mr. Wilson announced that Government had nearly prepared, and would soon submit, a Consolidated Customs' Act.—Englishman.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL AND THE SIKH SIRDARS.

While Lord Canning was at Lahore he received the Rajah of Kapoorthulla and other chiefs in public durbar, and was presented by them with the following address:—

"ADDRESS PRESENTED TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT CANNING, VICEROY AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

"Your excellency's visit to this part of the country is a happy event, and we count it our good fortune that your excellency has been pleased to set foot on this ground, and thus endowed it with fresh beauty, and conferred an honour on its people.

"In 1857, when the whole of Upper India was terribly convulsed with the events which followed the mutiny of the Bengal army, when the blood of human beings flowed in streams throughout the North-western Provinces, the people of this country were full of anxiety for their own safety, and for the preservation of order in this land.

"But happily the chief authorities in the Punjab arrested the course of the threatening torrent, and perfect tranquillity and security reigned in the province. The Chief Commissioner, Sir John Lawrence, G.C.B.; the Judicial Commissioner, Mr. (now Sir) Robert Montgomery; the Financial Commissioner, Mr. D. F. McLeod, and the Commissioner, Mr. A. A. Roberts, planned, matured, and executed such arrangements as prevented the outbreak of any general disturbance; and when in certain detached localities mischief made head, it had been anticipated, and was immediately crushed. This result is, under Providence, due to the policy suggested by your lordship, and carried out by the instruments of your selection, the able officers in charge of the Punjab administration.

"But the obligations which we are under to the British Government and your excellency, its representative in India, are many and various.

"The Government regarded the nation as one capable of performing service; many a man who lurked in obscurity was exalted to honour; many a man stained with the mark of a rebel for his deeds during the Punjab rebellion was offered, and availed himself of, the opportunity of washing off the blot which had unfortunately attached to him; yea, more than this, was raised to dignity, and is now reaping the fruits of his loyalty. An entire change has come over the whole nation of the Punjabees; offices of honour and trust have been bestowed upon individuals, and the whole body of the people is recognised as a nation loyal to its rulers, and a race attached to the Government. The little service which this people was enabled to perform has been appreciated by the Government in a higher degree than it was worth; honourable and lucrative offices have been given, khillats have been conferred, and permanent jagheers bestowed for services slight in themselves; services which, as the subjects of the parental Government under whose protection we lived in happiness and security, we were bound to render, not only as true lieges of the State, but also in order to escape from the mighty whirlwind which, in its terrible fury, threatened to involve all in its circle, and to scatter peace and order into anarchy and confusion. Were each hair on our bodies to be turned into a tongue, it would not be possible to express the deep sense of gratitude and thankfulness with which each and all of us are impressed.

"The British Government has now ruled the destinies of the natives of India upwards of a century. It is true that the liberality of the Government was before this exercised to a certain extent by the grant of jagheers and dignities of which the traces are still existing; but it is nevertheless true, that never was the bounty of the Government displayed to the extent meted out by your lordship at the present time. At present, numerous rajas and maharajas, hundreds of other chiefs of lesser note, and thousands of the loyal servants and subjects of the Government, have obtained at your excellency's hands additional territories, new jagheers and titles, which have been granted to them in perpetuity. And in order to secure the position of their families, the recipients of such rewards have obtained them on the condition that they shall be heritable by the eldest son in each generation, thereby securing the estate against the evil, so common in India, of dividing it according to the number of the heirs; the effect of which is unhappily, but manifestly, to reduce an influential and opulent house, in a series of years, to poverty and oblivion. Above all, has the generosity of the Government been evinced in the permission which has been accorded to reigning sovereigns and other families, to adopt an heir in the event of the failure, at any time, of the male issue of their body. The measure speaks for itself. The people have been convinced that it is the sincere desire of the Government that the rule of the respective native sovereigns shall be perpetuated, and that sequestration is not its policy.

"Accordingly, your excellency's speeches at the several durbars which your lordship held during your march from Calcutta upwards have been peculiarly characterised by that spirit of magnanimity and generosity which has dictated the policy recently adopted. Verily the bounty of your excellency is in its influence extensive as the generous rain from heaven.

"Only two years ago the whole of Upper India was in a state of conflagration in consequence of the rebellion, and it was thought that the fire could be extinguished by severe and forcible measures only. But your lordship tempered vigour with mercy, and fortitudinously adopted and carried out a vigorous yet merciful policy, which, in a short time, restored peace and order to the country.

"That the natives of India are indebted to such treatment to yourself is evidenced by the Proclamation of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, which professed to sanction your excellency's recommendation for the grant of a general amnesty; and the immediate effect of which was the restoration of perfect tranquillity throughout the country.

"We might here, with propriety, recount the many blessings which the extension of British rule to the Punjab has conferred during the last ten years on the people of this province. These consist in the excavation of new and restoration of old works of irrigation, by which means waste forests are expected within a few years to be turned into beautiful gardens; the introduction of the railway, which must extend the internal trade, and enlarge the external commerce of the country, develop its natural resources, and diffuse wealth in a more equable proportion; the construction of extensive lines of roads, and the police arrangements for the protection of these roads, which render them practicable with perfect security for all classes of travellers; the establishment of cheap postal and telegraph communication; the suppression of female infanticide, and of the immolation of females on the funeral pyres of their husbands, which, though prohibited by our religion, had become so prevalent under the sanction of custom; the strict interdiction laid against the sale of females; the measures adopted for the reduction of expenses on occasions of marriage, and for the suppression of overt immorality; the construction of bridges on the large rivers, whereby immense saving of life has been effected, particularly on the "Father of Rivers," the Indus; the establishment of serais at halting stages; the spread of vaccination, by which means our dearest hopes, our children, are annually preserved from the ravages of small-pox; the establishment of charitable dispensaries at every large station, where medical aid on the enlightened European principle is readily and liberally afforded to countless numbers; the imposition of a light assessment on landed tenures; and, lastly, the introduction of a scheme of general instruction throughout the province.

"We sincerely hope that ere long a college will be established at Lahore, wherein a liberal and useful instruction may be imparted to youths of the Punjab, an instruction calculated to benefit them for life, and the advantages of which should descend to posterity and raise the nation, as a mass, from the low pit of ignorance to the eminence of knowledge and civilisation.

"We cannot close this address without expressing our grateful sense of the services rendered to this country by the able officers intrusted with the administration of this province since its incorporation with the British empire.

"The first and foremost of them was the late eminent philanthropist, Sir Henry Lawrence, K.C.B. His first connection with this country began in his capacity of Resident, and the sincere interest which he took in the welfare of the people is too patent to require comment. For a time he was succeeded by Sir Fred. Currie, Bart., who treated the people of this country with the same kind consideration. Even when a few of the native chiefs, by their rebellion, brought down the horrors of war on their country, Sir F. Currie, during the time he remained in the Punjab, treated the nation with indulgence. And when Sir H. Lawrence returned from Europe, and the Punjab was annexed to the British possessions, that officer adopted a liberal policy which secured ample means for the loyal and well-affected, and which engendered that good feeling and attachment towards the Government, the effects of which were so recently manifested during the crisis.

"The selection of Sir J. Lawrence as the successor of Sir H. Lawrence was a wise and happy choice of the Government. The chiefs and the people of the Punjab were treated by that officer with consideration and justice, and to the decision, energy, and command of resources displayed by him during the late terrible crisis is doubtless owing, under Providence, the preservation of perfect tranquillity throughout these territories, and the immunity which the people enjoyed from the horrors of a civil commotion.

"Equally happy was the nomination of Sir R. Montgomery, K.C.B., as head of the Punjab Government in succession to the Right Hon. Sir J. Lawrence. It was Sir Robert Montgomery, who, as judicial commissioner, immediately on the receipt of the intelligence of the outbreak at Delhi suggested that the native troops at Meen Meer should be at once disarmed, and the wisdom of the measure is evident, inasmuch as, but for its prompt execution, the terrible deeds enacted at Delhi would have been in all probability repeated at the capital of the Punjab. The wise advice afforded by Mr. D. F. McLeod, the financial commissioner, during the troublous period, is acknowledged by Sir Robert Montgomery himself. As chief commissioner of Oude, Sir Robert Montgomery, with your Excellency's approval, conferred a blessing on the people of that country for which they will be grateful to the end of time.

"The judicial commissioner, Mr. E. Thornton, has simplified and improved the judicial law in the Punjab, and has set to the task with an honesty of purpose and earnest good will scarcely to be equalled.

"Mr. A. A. Roberts, present officiating financial commissioner, was commissioner of Lahore during the crisis. He managed his difficult charge with credit, and performed heroic deeds against the rebels of Googaira and the mutineers in the Goordaspur district.

"The present commissioner of Lahore, Mr. R. Temple, has been a kind and considerate officer ever since he held the high office of secretary to the chief commissioner. His even-handed justice since his assumption of his present office, and polite treatment of the native gentry are too well known to require a comment.

"The indefatigable diligence and prompt zeal evinced by Colonel J. D. Macpherson, military secretary to the chief commissioner, and Major R. Lawrence, captain of police, during the crisis, were rewarded by the preservation of order, and entitle them to our deepest gratitude.

"In the frontier districts of Peshawar, Kohat, and Huzara, unprecedented quiet prevailed throughout the crisis, in consequence of the conciliatory policy adopted, and the influence exercised on the people by Lieutenant-colonel H. B. Edwards, C.B., and his subordinate officers, Captain Henderson, at Kohat, and Major Becher, in Huzara.

"In the Leis and Mooltan divisions the commissioners discharged their duties with credit. The arrangements made by Lieutenant-colonel G. W. Hamilton, the commissioner of Mooltan, especially for the capture and destruction of the two disarmed regiments who broke out at that station, were extensive in operation and effective in result.

"In the Cis-Sutlej states the complicated relations of the Government with the various native States were ably managed by Mr. Barnes, and upon that officer devolved the important task of keeping open the Grand Trunk-road from the Sutlej to Delhi. A single false step would have been attended with serious consequences. But the result has shown that the charge could not have been placed in abler hands.

"Major Edward Lake did good service in the Trans-Sutlej states, a division wherein are situated three very important forts, viz., at Noorpoor, Kangra, and Philour, the last the great arsenal of the Punjab, which furnished the siege train that ultimately was the means of the re-occupation of Delhi.

"The vigilant supervision maintained over their districts, and the important cities of Lahore and Umritsur, by Messrs. R. E. Egerton and F. Cooper, and by other district officers over their respective charges, were attended with the best results.

"In commending the able management of the details of the Punjab administration, especially during the crisis, by the various officers concerned, it is not our object merely to praise them before your Excellency; but we here give vent to our grateful feelings for their sincere desire and endeavours to promote our interests and to preserve order in the country, whereby they have also faithfully served the Government and proved themselves so worthy of the confidence placed in them.

"It is our true and sincere prayer that the sun of the transcendent fortune of our most gracious sovereign, the Queen of England, may continue to shine with increased splendour to the end of time; that our able and merciful Viceroy may for ever remain at the head of the Government in India; that the Honourable Sir R. Montgomery, K.C.B., Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, and his subordinate officers may continue to conduct the administration of this province, and lastly, that ourselves and our posterity may remain constant in our loyalty and fidelity to the British Government.

"In conclusion, we beg that your Excellency may accept this address as expressive of the deep gratitude of all natives of this country, whether present here at the durbar or not, for the obligations which they owe to your Excellency, the representative of her most Gracious Majesty in India, and that your Excellency may be pleased to look upon the people of the Punjab as loyal and devoted subjects of the Crown."

The Governor-general replied as follows:—

"TO HIS HIGHNESS THE RAJAH OF KAPOORTHULLA.

"I have read with pleasure the address which you presented to me in public durbar on behalf of yourself and other sirdars of the Punjab.

"I thank you all for this strong and spontaneous manifestation of your loyalty and devotion to the Queen, and I see with pleasure your appreciation of the mercy and generosity which, in accordance with her Majesty's gracious commands, have been extended to the people of India.

"I thank you too for your friendly feeling towards myself.

"Your right estimate of the high qualities of the English officers who have successively been intrusted with the administration of the province, and to whose energy, wisdom, and justice its present flourishing condition and its freedom from civil troubles are largely to be attributed, is just to those distinguished men, and honourable to yourselves.

"The desire which you express that a college may be established at Lahore, has long been felt by the Government. It will be fulfilled as soon as the state of education in the Punjab is advanced enough to admit of such an institution being founded with public advantage.

"I take leave of you all with a sincere acknowledgment of the cordial reception you have given to the representative of your sovereign, and with an assurance of the deep interest I feel in the prosperity of the Punjab, and the lasting welfare of its loyal chiefs and people."

AGRA OR ALLAHABAD?

Is Allahabad to be the seat of the North-west Government? The question is once more being agitated in the North-west papers, and apparently with as little chance as ever of answering it. The report which has given rise to the renewed controversy is that Mr. Wilson had decided against Allahabad, conceiving that it would be less expensive to restore Agra to its pristine state than to complete Allahabad according to the original design, and render it capable of accommodating the public offices, &c. We fancy, however, that Mr. Wilson, although naturally alive to the importance of the question in a financial point of view, is not likely to lose sight of political considerations in the matter; and if he has recommended the restoration of Agra to the honour which has been wrested from it, it is probably because he considers its position more advantageous than the station which the admirers of Lord Canning cannot apparently succeed in getting named after him.

We are certainly of opinion that whatever is done for or against Allahabad should be done quickly—either it should be confirmed in its present honour and glory, or it should be put out of its misery at once. A continual state of anxiety will pull down the strongest man, and even the most flourishing station is not exempt from the law. As a man finds his hair fall off or turn grey under the influence of hope deferred, so Allahabad finds itself shedding bricks and mortar; for, according to all accounts, the houses in the new station are very insecure, and many of them show signs of coming down, if not with a run, at any rate by very unpleasant degrees. We have heard it maliciously insinuated that this state of things is caused by the economical principles upon which some of these buildings were constructed, notwithstanding that the Government, so long as they made advances, made them upon a sufficiently liberal scale for the efficient performance of the work. But as it is impossible to suppose that either a Government employé or a high-minded British merchant would put any of the money so advanced into his own pocket, we can only conclude that there has been some mistake upon this point. Our own opinion is that the new station is sensitive upon the possibility of being called "Cannington," and that it is in a natural spirit of resentment at the indignity that it threatens ere long to be fading away. That such should be the fact is much to be regretted, for the new station might be made the handsomest in Upper India. It has the advantage of being laid out upon a plan—and a very excellent one—instead of being reduced to say with Topsy, in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "guess I grewed," which is the case with other Indian stations. Its roads are superb, and its natural advantages in the way of abundant vegetation are being carefully improved upon by art. Altogether, there is every material for the formation of Allahabad into a station such as India has never seen.

That the interests, not only of Allahabad, but of Agra, and the State generally, through the unsettlement of the question, should have been so long neglected, would be inexplicable were the character of our present ruler more of a mystery than it is. It is even now believed by persons likely to be well informed, that the papers relating to the change of the seat of Government have not yet been sent home, and it is certain that they had not been a short time ago.

In the mean time, it is impossible to predict the future of Allahabad, which not long since was looked upon as likely to become a possible rival to the metropolis of India.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR J. H. GRANT, K.C.B., left Calcutta on the 26th February, under the salute due to his rank, to take command of her Majesty's forces in China.

LUCKNOW JEWELS.—Under instructions from the home authorities, the Government of India has directed the sub-treasurer of Fort William to make over to Major Herbert, the superintendent of the ex-King of Oude, all the Lucknow jewels, which were in his custody for some time past, in order to be returned to his Majesty.

SUICIDE.—Mr. Alphonse R. Morinet, of the firm of Messrs. William Moran and Co., merchants and indigo and silk brokers, residing at Ballygunge, has put an end to his existence. The weapon used was a pistol. The local police were quickly on the spot, also the magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs. After the necessary inquest was held, the magistrate issued orders for the interment of the corpse.

ALLAHABAD, March 3.—The cholera has again broken out very badly in the city and the neighbourhood of the Kydgunje entrenchments. The early advent of this scourge may be considered surprising, for it rarely prevails as an epidemic in these provinces at this season of the year. But it is not difficult to account for the immediate cause of the fact. The filth which is allowed to accumulate, especially in those public institutions, which are a benefit or a curse, according as they are well or ill-managed, is a fruitful source of fever and cholera at any season of the year. From the native population the disease can hardly fail to spread to the Christian community, and especially among the soldiers. A tainted atmosphere is no respecter of persons, and when once the epidemic begins to rage, the most judicious prophylactic measures are, unhappily, but too often of no avail to keep off the disease. It behoves, then, the Christian as well as the native community to bring the local authorities to a right understanding of their duty on the subject. It is understood that Mr. A. Cocks will officiate for Mr. Thornhill as commissioner of Allahabad. He is here at present on a visit, I believe. Captain Allen has been relieved of the office of Cantonment Joint Magistrate by Lieutenant Wemyss Smith. One of the barracks to the west of the Government House is to be assigned to the chief engineer's office, on its arrival from Agra. There seems to be nothing confirmatory of the impression which recently prevailed, that the seat of Government was to be removed again to Agra. The sale of timber which had been collected for the erection of public offices here, as stated by the New Times, is a pure myth, none having ever been purchased by Government for this purpose.—Delhi Gazette.

GOVERNMENT PAPER.—Mr. Cooke, the intelligent and hard-working deputy secretary of the Bank of Bengal, sold on February 22nd, by public outcry, some Four per Cent. Government Paper at a discount of Rs. 17-14. Some decided improvement must shortly arise if no other loan is opened in this market during the next few months.

MAJOR PROBYN'S SIKHS.—The Government has announced its intention to despatch another cavalry regiment to China. There can be little doubt as to the policy of this step, and less as to the eminent fitness of the officer who has been selected to command the corps. Under such a leader the swarthy troopers of India will be to the Chinese what the elephants of the King of Epirus proved to the Romans. Whatever may be their other merits, the enemies with whom our soldiers will contend in China are certainly not horsemen, and they are probably unacquainted with the tactics by which mounted assailants should be repulsed. We think, too, the sight of a corps such as that commanded by Major Probyn will have no slight effect on the minds of our allies. It has been recorded that during the mutiny these men were ever foremost where danger was to be encountered or glory won, and we have no doubt but that in China they will sustain to the full their glorious reputation. The French will learn from them that there are others besides Turcos and Chasseurs d'Afrique worthy of combating side by side with the chivalry of Europe.—Englishman.

RAWUL PINDEE, March 3.—The Governor-general, Lady Canning, and suite, with Lord Clyde, who did not remain for another day at Peshawur, as was first arranged, arrived here at five p.m. to-day in three closed carriages drawn by artillery horses. The troops were as usual drawn up to receive them. They are to leave to-morrow morning (Sunday) on their way to Sealkote. The viceregal party will halt at Deenah to-morrow, and will the day after visit and inspect the old fort of Rhotas, which was built for the purpose of coercing the Ghoorkas by Shere Shah, the Afghan who expelled the Emperor Humayoon, the father of the celebrated Aker. The august travellers will stay at Jhelum on the night of the 5th, and intend reaching Sealkote on the following day. There is to be a grand durbar at Sealkote, at which will be present the chiefs of the Deyrajat and the Maharajah of Cashmere. The Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab is to be there also. It is expected that the Governor-general will proceed to Simlah by Roopur. The bishop returns from Murree to-night, preaches a sermon to-morrow, and leaves for Simlah on Monday.

JEYPORE.—A letter from Jeypore informs us, that since the interview the Maharajah had with the Governor-general at Agra he has been very anxious to introduce European customs and to encourage European manufactures. The fanatic clique at the court have in consequence spread all sorts of rumours of a determination to do something serious; and the Maharajah, warned of evil-disposed persons in the harem having expressed themselves in a hostile manner, has avoided the precincts of that receptacle of the royal household. The Madrissa there is drooping for want of encouragement, the Maharajah taking no interest in educational matters, although well-disposed towards Europeans. A very superior description of marble has lately been quarried here, and it is supposed that as the Maharajah is well pleased with it, we may have a duplicate of the Taj at Agra if the funds for such a building can be spared.—Lucknow Herald.

LAHORE, Feb. 15.—On Saturday evening the city of Lahore was illuminated, in honour of the arrival of the Right Honourable the Governor-general. The rendezvous was the Rutten Chund's Tank, on the southside of the city. The arrival of the Governor-general and suite was heralded by sound of trumpets and a grand display of rockets; but unfortunately the elephants would not stand fire, and the viceroy and staff were scattered in rather an undignified manner. The fireworks ceased, and the whole then proceeded through the city of Lahore; so admirable were the arrangements, that there was not the slightest crowd or pressure. Every individual inhabitant had strict orders not to leave his own house, and, strange to say, they all obeyed the order with alacrity, and ladies, accompanied by children (all on foot), passed quietly through the streets of one of the most densely populated cities of India, without the slightest inconvenience. The Governor-general passed through the city, and came out at the Musjeed square, which was one blaze of light; the effect was really magnificent; he then proceeded to Runjeet Singh's tomb, which was splendidly illuminated, and had a most imposing effect. From one of the high towers, on which I had been fortunate enough to obtain a seat, the city, towers, Musjeed square, and Runjeet Singh's tomb appeared one blaze of light; every one appeared perfectly delighted with the excellent arrangements, which reflect the highest credit on the civil authorities; not a single accident occurred. On Monday the Governor-general held a levee, which was very numerous attended, and yesterday there was a grand durbar. To-day (Wednesday) the Governor-general visits the Shalemar Gardens, and to night they are to be illuminated in something after the Vauxhall style, coloured lamps, fountains of flowers, grand fireworks, fountains playing. Bands will be in attendance, and a circular has just been issued inviting all who choose to attend at 6 P.M. His excellency leaves this for Peshawur on Sunday, and the camp is to move on to Sealkote, and there await his lordship's return from the frontier.—Delhi Gazette.

SIMLA, March 2.—The report that prevailed about Subathoo and Dugshai being turned into convalescent depots proves incorrect, for the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade are to be at the former, and I think the 92nd Highlanders at the latter station. Government have had some splendid barracks built at Subathoo, and I suppose they cost a pretty penny; they would be very foolish then not to send a whole regiment there. Kusowlie may do very well for convalescents, as the barracks there were burnt down last year, and the Government, through want of funds I suppose, have not been able to put them up again. There is accommodation, however, for a few men, and a depot would be quite sufficient for it. The Lord Bishop, we hear, intends to stop here all the season; it is to be hoped that he will take in hand the forming of the school that was proposed last year, or year before, to be founded here. The Rev. Mr. Farrer, our last chaplain, I believe on the arrival of the present bishop wrote to him on the subject. The bishop having heard of the want of such an institution promised his assistance, and we therefore look forward to something definite on the subject on his arrival. A collection was made some months ago by our chaplain on this account, and I believe all throughout these provinces, so there is something to make a beginning on.—Delhi Gazette.

INCENDIARISM AT AGRA.—A fire, attended by serious loss of property, occurred in this station, on the morning of Saturday, March 2. The house of the bazar-sergeant Thompson was destroyed, as a committee, which subsequently met to inquire into the circumstances, have decided, by the act of an incendiary. The fire was discovered about 2 A.M. by Mrs. Thompson. The family had barely time to get into the compound when the blazing roof fell in and the house was entirely consumed. Of course the whole of their property has been lost. We hope to hear that Government has awarded the sufferers some compensation for their losses, which, to them, are ruinous, and that strict inquiries will be set on foot to discover the author of this outrage, an outrage which, three years ago, was common enough, and which will become common again unless the law is made, what it is not now, a terror to evil-doers.

ACCIDENT TO LORD CANNING.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle of the 3rd of March, writing from Peshawur, notices an accident that occurred to the Viceroy and Lady Canning at that place, on the night of the 28th of February. The carriage in which they were proceeding to see the fireworks, being driven by a native instead of the gentleman who usually handles the ribands, was capsized. No bones were broken, and the viceregal party were extricated from their unpleasant situation, and proceeded to the scene of the festivities on elephants. The garrison ball was a splendid affair. Report has it that Lady Canning was particularly struck with the amount of female beauty the highly favoured station of Peshawur boasts of. To what extent the Viceroy concurred with her ladyship in this estimate our contemporary does not inform us.

MOOLTAN, March 2.—This station was visited by a terrific thunderstorm on the evening of the 23rd Feb.; the rain fell very heavily during the greater part of the night, flooding the country for miles round. A few days afterwards we had again more rain, and since then the sky has been almost unclouded, notwithstanding which the ground still remains in many places muddy and wet, the exhalations from which during the day-time, if continued for any length of time, would undoubtedly be productive of fever and ague, but happily the sun is now powerful enough to carry off the densest vapours almost imperceptibly. Major-general Mansfield was here on the 20th Feb., and embarked on the following day in a river steamer for Kurrachee; his destination is not known. The 11th Punjab infantry embarked on the 25th for Kurrachee en route to China. They are a brave lot of fellows, and deserve every praise for their conduct at this station in August, 1858. The 6th Irregular cavalry leaves this to-morrow for Umballa. The 9th Irregular cavalry marched in here on the 20th from Bunnoo, and this completes my detail of removals. If the sepoys had been kept busy at useful works and drill, instead of idling about the bazars, as was their custom, plotting mutiny, &c., we should never have heard of the terrible sepoy rebellion of 1857. Lieutenant-colonel Campbell, Royal Artillery, has assumed the command of the Royal Artillery in this station.—Delhi Gazette.

A TAX ON GOLD.—We seriously suggest to our financier, Mr. Wilson, the propriety of taxing gold. As there is not to be a gold currency, the precious metal will be employed in her Majesty's Indian territory on ornaments only. Our contemporaries of Bombay and Madras must have perceived ere this that there is no chance of a sovereign becoming a legal tender. The attempt of the London firms in sending to Bombay gold bars worth Rs. 500 each for circulation, as a preliminary to the introduction of a gold currency, has failed. The bars are either broken down for ornaments or sent into the Mofussil for native States. They use the metal to some extent for coin, but that matters little. A slight burden transferred from the shoulders of the overtaxed population under the British rule to their brethren in the native States will be felt as a sensible relief. Ornaments and other costly fineries are a most desirable subject of taxation. These indulgences, it is notorious, are sought, not for any pleasure, but from regard to opinion, from an idea that certain stations in society require ornaments to a certain amount. Mr. and Mrs. Ramdas think that, at the marriage of their son, so many ornaments ought to be given to their daughter-in-law: their reputation is at stake. Any economy in this matter is rarely thought of. The caste people will not salaam Mr. Ramdas according to his rank, and Mrs. Ramdas will have the mortification of appearing herself inferior to her neighbours. If such a taxation discourage to any extent the fashion of wearing massive ornaments, some good is done; if not, no harm. There is no danger of Mr. Ramdas's vanity being hurt. If he find that a gold anklet of twenty-five tolas cost as much as 26 tolas, the required weight for his respectability before the tax was introduced, he will content himself with a less heavy article, as his status in society depends on the cost, instead of on the weight, of the ornament he can procure. A tax, therefore, on gold "would really be paid by nobody; it would be a creation of public revenue by which nobody would lose." The pearls we import from Ceylon and the Persian Gulf are subject to duty, and we see no reason why gold should now be exempt. The value of annual importations in Bombay is one and three quarters of a million sterling; and more than two millions might be estimated for Bengal and Madras—making in all four millions. A duty of 5 per cent. would bring in a revenue of 25 lakhs of rupees.—The East Gleaner.

TIPPERAH, Feb. 6.—No more murders are reported in Kundul, whence the Kookees and Tipperahs have retired to their own places of resort; but yesterday morning the station of Comillah was put in a great state of alarm by the beating of the drum of the police station, and a report that the Kookees were coming to murder us all—in consequence of which the treasure was sent off to Dacca. The natives flew off in every direction, and most of the Europeans congregated in one spot and were ready to meet danger; but it soon appeared the report was utterly without foundation. However, the Tipperah hills are disturbed, and it is a pity we have not more military, and efficient soldiers. We have fifty men of the Kamroop or Munipore Levies, and we require a telegraph station here. The wire passes through this station to Chittagong.

MISS EMILY WHEELER.—We (Bombay Gazette) scarcely know whether our readers will be more pained or relieved to hear that Miss Emily Wheeler, the daughter of General Wheeler, of Cawnpore, is still alive. Captain Harvey, superintendent of the department for the abolition of Thuggee, has had communication with the unfortunate young lady, who, we understand, is so utterly broken in spirit that she entreates her friends not to seek to bring her back again, but to leave her to her wretched fate. Yet it were better surely for the poor girl herself that her request should not be complied with. Time may obliterate the remembrance of even her sorrows; and it were no real kindness to her to obey what wild wishes her present morbid nervousness of feeling may suggest. It is necessary, too, that the Government should vindicate its own dignity and justice by ascertaining the true particulars of this sad story, and punishing the guilty parties with relentless severity.

THE WESTERN JUMNA CANALS.—The Lahore Chronicle declares that the Western Jumna canals are causing a serious deterioration of the land in Rohtuck, Delhi, and Panesput. The bed of the canal is higher than the country, and the water percolates upwards, producing a saline efflorescence fatal to the fertility of the soil. The consequence is extreme poverty, and a general emigration of the people into the neighbouring State of Jheend. It would seem that at first the effect of the irrigation was most beneficial, but gradually the land became water-logged. Surely the supply must be mismanaged.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR was expected at Bareilly on the 14th of March. From Nainee Tal we hear the weather is more genial than it was, snow having disappeared. Most of the houses are let. The new dak bungalow at Bareilly will be finished shortly, so that travellers en route to the lake will be more comfortable this year than last.

COCHIN, Feb. 24.—The return visit of his Highness the Rajah to the Resident took place at Bolghatty on the 22nd., at two p.m., and everything went off as grandly as the occasion required. They had a private meeting yesterday, at about half-past seven a.m., at the Mattencherry Palace, when all the necessary arrangements were made for the future administration of Cochin, the Dewan having sent in his resignation, according to previous advice received from the Resident. Shungooney Menon, the deputy collector of Tinivelly, eldest son of the late Dewan Shungra Warriar, has been nominated his successor. He is expected here so soon as he shall be relieved from his present employment, which we believe will take place in a month. He is in every respect worthy of the high station which he has been called upon to occupy. He is known to be a good English scholar, and a man of high principle and talents. I hope his administration will be attended with happiness to the long-oppressed people of Cochin. Upwards of a hundred of the principal officers of this Sirkar, including some of the judges, have tendered their resignation, apprehensive of being brought to account for having been the vile instrument of the ambition of the ex-Dewan, Vencata Row, now that he has been hunted down to the low level whence he had risen. He leaves Cochin for Coimbatore tomorrow, with all his family and effects, and has obtained from the Resident a guard of three sepoys and a naik to conduct him as far as Paulghat, as he is afraid of being attacked by robbers on the road. I hear that he carries away with him about two lakhs of rupees in hard cash, which he has amassed by extortion and other illegal means. Mr. Maltby intends paying a visit to her Highness the Dowager (mother of the Rajah) to-morrow, at four p.m., at the Mattencherry Palace.

SIR ALEXANDER GRANT has been offered, and has accepted, the appointment of Principal of the Elphinstone Institution at Bombay, in succession to Mr. Harkness, who retires after twenty-five years' sojourn in this country, spent in the promotion of education in Western India. Mr. Harkness arrived at Bombay in 1835, having been sent out by the Hon. Mountstuart Elphinstone to fill the office of Professor in the Institution which bears his name. He has thus been engaged for a quarter of a century in the great work of education, during the whole of which period he has been distinguished for the highest qualities which characterise the scholar, the gentleman, and the Christian; and now retires in possession of the esteem and regard of all classes of the community, both European and native. Sir Alexander Grant will not do amiss to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor.—Madras Times.

JUBBULPORE, March 2.—The 3rd Madras European Regiment marched out yesterday-morn, and are encamped some two miles south of the cantonment, where they are to remain till the arrival of H.M.'s 97th Regiment, which is expected on or about the 5th instant. I believe that Government contemplates changing the site of the present military cantonment of Nagode, to a piece of table-land five or six miles south of the present locality, which is not considered healthy, to give the station a fair trial prior to abandoning it as a military cantonment. It has been determined to locate only two companies of European infantry instead of three, so that the existing buildings will conveniently accommodate the force that will now be there, without being in any way crowded. This will increase the strength of our garrison; however, we have enough spare accommodation to meet the augmentation.

SPECTACLES FOR SHORT-SIGHTED SOLDIERS.—A novel experiment, recommended by the commander-in-chief, has just been sanctioned by Government. Three infantry recruits lately arrived from England were at the usual medical examination found to be short-sighted, and in their present state useless as soldiers. The use of proper glasses, however, it was added, would make them instantly effective. The director-general observed that if the commander-in-chief did not object to the incongruity of a soldier in the ranks wearing spectacles, there could be no other objection to their being supplied to such men as might require them. A large number of officers assist their sight in this way, and it is a well known fact that many sportsmen wear glasses, some of whom are first-rate shots, and who could not see to shoot without them. Government have accordingly authorised the supply of suitable glasses to the men referred to, as an experimental measure, to be reported upon hereafter.—Times and Spectator.

OOTACAMUND, Feb. 20.—This morning at 12 o'clock his Excellency Sir Charles Trevelyan held a durbar, for the purpose of receiving the mercantile community, store-keepers and landed gentry of this place. Punctually at 12 o'clock his excellency arrived at Framjee's shop (which had been most obligingly placed at his disposal by that enterprising and courteous Parsee), attended by the Secretary to Government in the Revenue Department (J. Bourdillon, Esq.), his Military Secretary (Captain Crewe), his Chaplain, and the Collector of the District (Mr. E. B. Thomas), and the Inspector-general of prisons (J. Rohde, Esq.), &c. He was met at the conservatory portico, and staircase, which had been very tastefully decorated for the occasion, by a numerous body of Parsee gentlemen, and several of the leading European and native settlers of Ootacamund.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The most striking facts in Colonel Bell's sixty-eight pages of printed foolscap report on the operations of the department of Public Works for the official year 1858-59, lately received, are, that out of a total (in round numbers) of forty-five lakhs, upwards of nineteen lakhs were expended in the repair of existing irrigation works; that new military buildings absorbed a further sum of nearly eight lakhs; and that for the repair of "communications," within a trifle of eight lakhs of rupees were required; thus leaving about ten lakhs for the construction of new works of irrigation, the opening up of new communications, and the erection of other than military buildings. If to these facts be added two others, namely, that the restrictions imposed by the supreme government on the expenditure of the department were in full force at the commencement, and only partially relaxed towards the end of the year, and that the violent storms which occurred during its course were very disastrous in their consequences, a general result is presented which cannot be characterised as cheerful.—Athenaeum.

COLONEL YOUNGHUSBAND.—The following complimentary Division Order was issued by Brigadier-general Hale on the 2nd March:—"Colonel Younghusband being about to proceed to the presidency to officiate as Deputy-adjutant-general of the army, the Brigadier-general commanding the division cannot allow that excellent officer to leave the command without placing upon its records the expression of his high appreciation of his services as Assistant-adjutant-general, the important duties of which appointment he has so ably and zealously conducted for upwards of six years. Whilst regretting the loss of Colonel Younghusband's services from the division, the Brigadier-general congratulates him on the attainment of a position on the staff of the army which will afford him a wider field for the exercise of those qualities which have merited, and have received, the recorded approbation of every divisional officer under whom he has served. With the public expression of his high sense of Colonel Younghusband's merit the Brigadier-general bids him cordial farewell."

SIR HUOH ROSE has left Poona for Mahabeshwar, where he will remain, we believe, during the hot weather, unless Lord Clyde should resolve upon returning to England upon the completion of his present tour.

BRIGADIER HONOR leaves Nussersabad immediately, to take up his command at Mhow, vice General Michel proceeding to China. H.M.'s 28th is to proceed by Bullock train to relieve the 83rd at Nussersabad. The head quarters of the 89th regiment left Nussersabad on the 17th Feb.

THE BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—We are glad to hear that the passenger traffic of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway is answering even beyond the sanguine expectations of the company's officials. The line is still one that runs "from nowhere to nowhere," for the Taptee and Nerbudda rivers have yet to be spanned, and some 4 1/2 miles of jungle to be cut through, before direct communication is established between Surat and Broach. But the works are pushed on with energy and success, and, as soon as the company can offer their passengers the comforts and convenience which it will be in their power to do when this portion of the line is completed, there can be no doubt, to judge from present appearances, that their traffic will be a most paying one.

MRS. PANTINGTON SURPASSED.—The Sindian says of three Arab coolies who had been nearly drowned in Kurrachee harbour, "they were quite wet with shrivelled surface and tumid abdomens, there was partial unconsciousness and great collapse."

MORTALITY ON BOARD SHIP.—The ship Emma Colvin, which arrived in Kurrachee harbour Feb. 25, from London, with the families, numbering about 500 women and children, of the troops in the Punjab, lost on the passage out no less than 30 children. We believe it is in contemplation to detain these families in Kurrachee until November next, a very prudent measure, when it comes to be considered that, if despatched now they will not merely be subject to another close confinement on ship board, but also arrive at their destination, the channel-house of India, at the most trying period of the year.

THE BHOORE GHAUT RAILWAY WORKS.—The works on the railway line through the Bhoore Ghauts, which are now conducted by Mrs. Tredwell, the widow of the late lamented contractor, are progressing very rapidly. They were inspected by Mr. Berkley immediately after his return from England, and he seems to have been well satisfied with the progress. We understand that Mrs. Tredwell does not intend remaining here any longer. She goes home within a month or so, entrusting the management of the whole of the works to Messrs. Adamson and Clowser, the company's inspecting engineers, who have undertaken the completion of the contract as executors to the estate of the late Mr. Tredwell. The railway authorities have, it appears, consented to this arrangement, as being most likely to secure the speedy execution of the works.

BOURNE'S STEAM TRAIN.—The train left her moorings Feb. 24 for up river via the tidal channels. By the time the farewell buoy at the mouth of the harbour was reached, owing to the swell on the bar, which was moderate, the connecting gear of the barge working started one or two plates from the stern of the steamer, when she immediately filled and sunk. Every assistance was rendered from Munora, and the steamer Outram, which fortunately had her fires lighted at the time, went out and towed in the barges. The steamer has sunk in about twenty-four feet of water; and all that is now to be seen of her is the tops of the masts and funnel. No lives were lost, though all on board were consigned to the watery element. Mr. Wood, we understand, had a narrow escape.—Sindian.

OUR SENIOR MAGISTRATE.—It is now reported that Mr. Crawford goes to England on furlough for one year, at least, on half pay, and that Mr. Hore, first judge of the Small Cause Court, is to officiate as senior magistrate during his absence. This arrangement, though said to be temporary, will be, we believe, final. Dr. Reid is spoken of as Mr. Hore's probable successor in the Small Cause Court. These would be very popular appointments. Dr. Reid, who at present so ably fills the office of coroner, is a barrister of seven years standing, having been called to the bar in May 1853. He is, moreover, thoroughly acquainted with the manners and customs of the people of Bombay, with all classes of whom he has come in contact since his arrival in the country twelve years ago, as an officer in the educational department, in which he still holds the appointment of Law Professor.

ADDRESS TO THE SECRETARY OF THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—The following correspondence affords a gratifying proof of the estimation in which Mr. Stuart is held in Bombay for the ability and integrity with which he has managed the affairs of the bank:—"John Stuart, Esq., Secretary and Treasurer Bank of Bombay.—Dear Sir,—As you are about to leave Bombay we cannot allow you to vacate the responsible situation of secretary and treasurer to the Bank of Bombay, which you have filled with so much credit for upwards of nineteen years, without expressing to you our warmest thanks for the courtesy and kindness which we have uniformly received at your hands, in all our dealings with the bank. Frequently in the course of the large transactions in which the bank has had to engage with us and the mercantile community in general, occasions no doubt arose when the exercise of much discrimination and judgment was called for on your part. For ourselves, however, we can confidently assert that while you always kept in view the interests of the bank you were ever ready to afford us the benefit of your advice and assistance to the utmost extent consistent with your official duties. We now beg to acknowledge heartily the ever prompt desire on your part to forward our interests, as far as you were able, and, hoping that on your return to Europe you will enjoy much health and continuance of prosperity,—We remain, dear sir, your faithful and obedient friends (Signed), Premabhoj Hemchund, Dosabhoj Framjee Cama, Dhurumsee Poonjabhoy, Hulabhoj Ebrahim, Sons, and Co., Cassumbhoj Nathabhoj, Byramshaw Dhunjeebhoy, Canjee Chuttoo, Curramchund Premchund, Goolabhoj Futtaichund, Soondjee Nanjee, and Co., Mody Roopjee Dwarakias, Gungulass Vazbhoocondass, Burjee Sorabjee, and 500 others. Bombay, March 3, 1860."—Reply:—"Gentlemen,—I beg you will accept of my most sincere thanks for the very unexpected honour you have done me, and for the very flattering terms in which you are pleased to give expression to your approval of my conduct, and the manner in which I have discharged my duties in the bank for nearly twenty years past. I can assure you I most highly appreciate your kindness, and it is particularly gratifying to me now that my sojourn in India is coming to a close to receive from so large and influential a portion of the merchants and constituents of the bank so very flattering a mark of their approbation. I shall always retain a lively sense of the many kindnesses I have received since I first came amongst you, and of the valuable advice and assistance you have upon many occasions given me when experience and knowledge of the people was so necessary to enable me to introduce for the first time a paper currency on this side of India; and, although we met with some difficulties, I am glad to say that the experiment has been successful, and the issue of bank notes is now considerably upwards of twelve crores of rupees annually. You are of course aware that previous to the establishment of this bank there was no public bank in Bombay, and I think it highly creditable to the commercial community to state that while liberal accommodations have been afforded, the losses the bank has sustained are comparatively small. I now bid you farewell with feelings of regret, and I shall always look back upon the hours I have spent in India as the happiest and not least useful portion of my life, and will always feel a deep interest in all that relates to the advancement of India, and the welfare and happiness of its inhabitants, particularly those kind friends I have been so fortunate as to meet with in Bombay.—I have, &c., JOHN STUART."

THE FORT PROPRIETARY SCHOOL.—We understand that the proposal for the establishment of the Fort Proprietary School has found great favour with the natives, especially the Parsee gentry. Mr. Framjee Nesserwanjee, the Parsee gentleman, who is always a liberal supporter of the cause of native education, has evinced much interest for the welfare of the new institution, and has successfully worked his influence in obtaining the majority of the subscribers. As almost three-fourths of the shares have already been subscribed,

PROGRESS OF MEDICAL SUBORDINATES.

Dated Dec. 30, 1859. No. 185.

Para. 6.—I concur with your Govt. in considering that the annual report (for 1858) of the director gen., med. dept., on the progress of the med. subordinates educated at the Med. College, is generally satisfactory.

7. The extraordinary exigencies of the past year have occasioned unusual demands on the subordinate med. dept. of Madras, and it is very satisfactory to learn that the heavy duties which have fallen upon this branch of the service, have been well and cheerfully performed.

No. 85.—The Gov. in Council is pleased to make the following promotions:—

"OUR POSITION WITH CHINA."

THE current number of Blackwood contains an article on "Our Position with China," evidently written by one who thoroughly understands the subject of which he is treating. On one point, however, on which the writer lays great stress, we cannot fully agree with him. The delay which has occurred in avenging the disaster at the Peiho he ascribes to the adverse influence of British merchants engaged in the China trade, as though no account were to be taken of the troubled state of the political atmosphere of Europe. It would certainly betoken but little foresight in Ministers were they to involve the country in a distant war for an object of secondary importance, when at any time all its available resources may be needed for a momentous struggle at our very doors. There is also another consideration which must not be regarded so lightly as seems good to the writer of the article in question. Although it may be perfectly possible for two small steamers of the P. and O. Company to breast the monsoon, the Government would assuredly not be justified in risking a fleet of transports, gun-boats, and ships-of-war in those tempestuous seas, unless a paramount necessity sanctioned the appeal to fortune. We have the evidence of Admiral Seymour to prove the hazardous nature of the navigation off the Chinese coast during that season of the year, and the fact is sufficiently notorious to dispense with further testimony. If hostilities are inevitable, which we trust may not be the case, they need not be too rashly commenced, or pursued with blindfold impetuosity. Indeed, it were infinitely wiser to exhaust every effort of diplomacy to avert another campaign in co-operation with the arms of France. No good can come from the combined operations of the two Powers, for nothing can possibly thence result but mutual jealousies, together with the occupation of the Island of Chusan, and a vast amount of self-glorification on the part of our allies.

With this exception, the facts and views propounded in this paper are worthy of serious attention. The writer's object is to show the necessity of obtaining more ready access into the interior by multiplying the number of free ports. Of the eighteen provinces into which China is divided there are only four, situated on the south-east seaboard, accessible to Europeans. Prior to the year 1842 the entire trade between China and the Western world was confined to the port and province of Canton. Since that restriction has been partially removed and intercourse permitted with four provinces instead of one, the tea trade of Great Britain has more than tripled, and is still on the increase every year. The teas thus exported are derived from a comparatively small area on account of the expense and difficulty of transit, and yet even thus the price on the spot to the native consumer is only threepence per pound. By improving the intercommunication of the different inland provinces, and still more by facilitating intercourse with a greater number of ports on the seacoast, immense benefits would arise both to China and to our own country. The local transit duties are three times the original value of the article, in addition to the actual cost of carriage. Tea, however, is grown in almost all parts of the empire, and in such abundance as fully to meet a vastly increased demand. The same may be said with regard to the produce of silk, though not quite to the same extent; and if the Elgin treaty were faithfully carried out, the Chinese would benefit in a fourfold ratio in the matter of imports. Of these, says the writer in Blackwood, there are two sorts, which, if they could be delivered on the spot where needed, would be required in vast quantities.

"The first is British colonial produce, such as opium, rice, cotton, 'Straits produce,' and sundry Eastern luxuries. The second is British home manufacture of cotton and wool, iron, lead, and tin, wrought, or in bars and pigs. With respect to the first class of imports, the trade may be said to be steadily increasing, and they alone return nearly ten millions sterling of the great balance against us. Opium, however, figures by far the highest in that return trade. The second class of imports, those from Britain, are at a standstill, and about one and a-half millions sterling represent the annual amount of the manufactures of this country taken by China during the last five or six years."

Were it not for opium and other eastern products, British merchants would be compelled to pay in silver bullion for nearly every article they take from China. As it is, the balance is against them to an immense extent, and must continue to be so until they contrive to deliver their goods at the spot where they are required, and to purchase Chinese produce at the place where it is grown.

"At present our trading stations are situated on the remote confines of a land as large as Europe, the interior of which, beyond that we know it to be very fertile and very populous, we are supremely ignorant of. We are required to land woollens in the tropics for the use of a people living in a remote corner of the empire, where the winters are most severe. . . . We know that the inhabitants of the region in which the five ports are situated do not need our cloths; but we have to land them at Canton or Shanghai, in the hope of their reaching Peking, or the still more remote and rigorous climates of Kansoo and Shansi. As yet we have had no seaport, no access to all that portion of China, inhabited by some two hundred millions of souls, in which the severity of the winter renders it likely that they need our woollens."

The same arguments apply still more forcibly to the cheap productions of our cotton manufactories. A piece of common grey sheeting, for instance, that is sold at Shanghai after a voyage of 17,000 miles at the retail price of 12s., costs 18s. 4d. at Hankow, only 600 miles in the interior. Again, chintz which sells at 7d. a yard at Shanghai, will fetch 10½d. at Hankow, and brocades sold at the former place for 7d. a yard are worth 1s. at the latter. In other words, "the trader from the western provinces of China, who visited Hankow had to pay 40s. for a piece of English manufacture which we could have sold him at a profit in Shanghai for 24s. In short, these figures ought to satisfy us that the Chinese native monopolists at the seaports have no small interest at stake in confining us to the frontier, where our places of commerce are now situated; and we have pretty good proof that the attention and energy of our merchants have as yet been mainly directed to the exporting of Chinese products, and not to the introduction of the fruits of British labour." Lord Ellenborough, no mean authority on this or any other subject, appears to have formed an equally unfavourable estimate of the patriotism and commercial character of the British mercantile community engaged in the China trade. According to the noble earl, it is to their conduct "more than to any other cause that we have been forced into those hostilities the occurrence of which from time to time we have had to deplore. During that period," he continued, "when our merchants trading with China were under the strict control of the East India Company no wars with China took place. A single ship occasionally visiting Canton was found sufficient to preserve unimpaired our interests in that quarter. Since that time, however, there has been a continued succession of wars with China, and I know not one of them to which the misconduct of our own people and their disgraceful avarice has not materially, either directly or indirectly, contributed." How far these allegations are well founded, or otherwise, we need not pause to inquire. Let it suffice to draw attention to the fact that what is really wanted is free access into the interior of that vast and populous empire, that would have been obtained under the Elgin treaty had not the unfortunate blunder at the Peiho intervened. If the Chinese Government can be prevailed upon to tender an ample apology for firing on the British squadron, our wisest policy will be to forgive the repulse sustained by our arms, but not to forget the lesson then imparted. The presence of an ambassador at Peking is far more likely to lead to future complications and embarrassment than to any substantial advantage. Rather let there be carefully-selected consuls at the chief ports, vested with a large discretionary power over their own countrymen, and supported by the frequent appearance of ships of war. Self-interest will soon convince the Chinese of the expediency of treating the foreign traders with respect and civility, and in a short time the fruits of mutual forbearance will be seen in an immense trade highly beneficial to both countries. If we must have an ally in the eastern seas, let it rather be Russia than France. With the former Power there need be no difference of interests, with the latter there can be nothing in common, for France seeks political influence, and not an extension of commerce. But if an ambassador be stationed at Peking there will be no end to the rivalries of the respective Ministers, each bent on exhibiting his diplomatic talents in the hope of being promoted to a more conspicuous and congenial sphere.*

RE-ORGANIZATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times was clearly incorrect in ascribing to Mr. Wilson a scheme for substituting a force of 80,000 Europeans for the native armies of the three Presidencies. The statement was, indeed, contradicted at the time, with some warmth, by the Secretary of State for India, who disclaimed all intention of making any further reductions in the native troops. The rumour, however, was not altogether groundless, for Mr. Wilson, in expounding his financial panacea, spoke of the sepoy army as a thing of the past, with which we have nothing more to do than as an example and a warning for the future. It had dissolved itself, he said—it had disappeared, and was blotted out. It was a Frankenstein, to which its creators at one time only ventured to allude with bated breath and in whispers, but which had now committed suicide, and could, therefore, give no further trouble. But it is now evident that Mr. Wilson was indulging in meaningless phraseology. He fancied himself once more on the floor of the House of Commons, or in the great hall of some provincial town, rounding his periods to catch the applause "Hear! hear!" At the very moment when he was waving around his head, with gleeful yells, the scalp of the Frankenstein he imagined to be lying prostrate at his feet—at the very moment when he was throwing himself into the attitude of the archangel Michael, trampling under foot the writhing demon—the monster was again standing erect before him, defiant and conscious of his strength, and grimly watching his opportunity to renew the desperate struggle. Independently of the more or less faithful armies of the Bombay and Madras Presidencies, there were 87,000 sepoys under arms between Calcutta and Peshawur, besides a formidable police force, differing from soldiers only in name, at the very moment when he said that a sepoy army no longer existed. Nor was the right honourable gentleman more accurate in his allusions to the local European force, which he described with indecent exultation as having "also gone." Gone! Yes, ten thousand of the finest troops in the world were lost to the State through the blundering arrogance of the Government; but the local army, as an army, was not "gone"—at least, if by that colloquial phrase Mr. Wilson intended to signify its annihilation and cessation of existence. As Lord Ellenborough justly remarked, there still remained 12,000 Europeans in India, of whom 6,000 were artillerymen, as yet unsurpassed. In addition to these there were 3,500 men on their way out, so that this non-existent force still comprised upwards of 15,000 British soldiers. We can only hope that Mr. Wilson's financial measures are better founded than his statements on military matters.

* In the same number of Blackwood we also observe a paper on the services rendered to the British Government by the native princes of India during the late rebellion, and on the magnificent rewards won by their well-timed loyalty. It is not, however, one of much interest for the general reader, for whose especial benefit it has apparently been compiled.

Our object, however, is not so much to censure the carelessness of the right honourable gentleman's declamation, as to draw attention to the discussion which took place in the Lower House last Thursday night on a motion made by Colonel Sykes for the production of certain papers relating to the re-organization of the Indian army. The ablest and most comprehensive speech delivered in the course of the debate was Mr. Buxton's, who summed up the arguments on both sides bearing upon the question of a partially local or ordinary imperial army for Indian service, and then passed judgment in favour of the former. He admitted that the proposal that the Indian army should consist entirely of Queen's regiments doing duty there as in any other possession of the Crown, recommended itself by its simplicity. He also assented to the abstract proposition, that it must be "far better in a single country to have but a single army under a single head," but in practice he was not sure that a certain degree of emulation, which some people erroneously regard as jealousy, was not rather desirable than otherwise; and, moreover, "actual experience had not shown any ill effects from the combination of the local with the imperial forces." The argument, that a mutiny among the European troops could be more easily suppressed if they belonged to the regular army, he considered unworthy of notice; nor did he attach much more value to that which insisted upon the advantage of Indian wars as a military school, because now that there was not a single warlike neighbour to contend with, our soldiers would be more likely to be enervated by the climate than trained by actual warfare. And if it were generally agreed that the army of India should be one army and under one head, he believed the wisest measure would be to localise it entirely, placing it under the Governor-general, and not under the Horse Guards—one great advantage of which arrangement would be, that the native forces would not be so sharply and invidiously divided from the European. The testimony of almost every Indian statesman and officer whose opinion was worth having, was distinctly opposed to the change recommended by a few English generals unacquainted with Indian affairs. And mark the weightiness of the arguments adduced by the former:—

"It was observed, that if regiments are permanently stationed in India, instead of merely paying it flying visits, they acquired a kind of traditional knowledge of the way to encounter the climate and of the necessity for temperance and care; and in the same way they acquired an intimacy with the character of the natives, which preserved them from irritating their feelings, and further, an acquaintance with the languages of the country which, though rude, was found to be very convenient in marching and campaigning. Again, if a regiment were a mere bird of passage, the men found no lasting ties in the country, whereas, in local regiments, many of the men intermarried with the natives, and many of the invalids and pensioners settled among the hills. As regarded health, the mortality in regiments that landed fresh in India was perfectly awful; some returns given in the appendix to the Blue-book showed that in those regiments that go straight from England to India 110 men out of every 1,000 died in the first year. In connection with that, another strong argument arose in favour of a local force. To quote Lord Ellenborough's words, it was cruel to see how young men, whose constitutions had not been formed, perished on their arrival in India. Well, then, if they had a distinct army for India they might for that army put the age of admission, say three years, higher than for the regular army. By that means they would cease to compete with the home army for recruits, while they would lessen the mortality in India, with all the sorrow, suffering, and expense which it entailed. But once more we were warned, and that by men of great authority and with great emphasis, of the risk there would be that if the European force of India were merely part and parcel of the regular army, then in any stress at home, the remote interests of India, infinite as their importance was, would be forgotten, and our military force there dangerously weakened. To these secondary and yet weighty arguments he would add but one more. It was said that already the Horse Guards was overwhelmed with business, that the interests of the army suffered greatly from the impossibility of giving minute attention to such vast affairs, and that it would be a serious evil to the regular army if the Commander-in-Chief was further encumbered with the weight of the whole European force of India."

That force is estimated for the future at 80,000 men, so that if regiments are to be relieved every ten years, there would annually be 16,000 men at sea, either going out or coming home, entailing an annual expenditure of at least half a million, and incurring risk of shipwreck, and of capture by an enemy on any sudden breaking out of hostilities. Besides, if a local force were maintained, young men of good abilities and education would gladly devote themselves to an Indian career; nor is it a matter of secondary consideration that the power and prestige of the Governor-general should be lessened in the eyes of the natives by depriving him of the control over the army, and transferring it to an individual of whom they have no knowledge, and who would exercise his command at the distance of 12,000 miles.

These unanswerable arguments were met by a flippant remark from Col. P. Herbert, that, "as far as his experience in India went, and as far as he could learn from others, the discipline of the European force in India was not equal to that of her Majesty's army." Sir Charles Wood, while declining to express an opinion on either side, intimated that the disaffection of the Company's European regiments had shaken the previous convictions of "many eminent persons in India" as to the expediency of keeping up a local force. Mr. T. G. Baring followed on the same side, and in solemn tones spoke of the recent conduct of those troops as "a matter of the greatest gravity and which necessitated the greatest deliberation with regard to all future proceedings." On the other hand, Sir De Lacy Evans, Sir J. Elphinstone, and Mr. Bright stoutly vindicated the soldiers, and threw the entire blame upon the Government. It was Lord Palmerston himself who in the first instance acknowledged that the European local force would be entitled to their discharge if the Bill for the abolition of the Company were passed. What wonder then that those troops should accept the declaration of the Premier? Their demand for a small bounty was, moreover, in accordance with usage, and had it been otherwise the sum asked for was so small, and their services and sufferings had been so remarkable, that a gracious acquiescence would have been becoming in the Government, and 10,000 war-torn soldiers would not have been turned adrift at a time when every man was wanted. The most, however, will evidently be made of this miserable pretext, for the Court, the Horse Guards, and all obsequious courtiers, are bent upon keeping the enormous patronage incidental to an army of 80,000 men within easy access. Lord Palmerston's affectation of contempt for insinuations against the purity of Government is simply ridiculous, though no more than might be fairly anticipated from the noble Viscount's characteristic insolence and cynicism.

"He was almost ashamed," he said, "to advert to the clap-trap insinuations that had been indulged in that the Government were influenced by Court influences, or questions of Horse Guards patronage, or God knew what. He felt almost ashamed to reply to any such insinuations. He fancied that any Government which aspired to the confidence of the House and the country would act on higher grounds, and would not be swayed by any considerations save those of public duty."

Even assuming this to be so, to mean well is not to do well. It is just possible that Ministers may have been actuated by the highest and purest motives in concluding a commercial treaty with France, in ruining the paper manufacturers, in increasing the income-tax, in introducing a Reform Bill which will transfer the governing power to the class least competent to govern, and in truckling to Louis Napoleon. All this is quite consistent with good intentions, but what sort of judgment, what sort of administrative capacity, does it betoken? To ridicule the idea that the Court is ambitious to increase its influence, more Germanico, argues dishonesty or imbecility, or a supreme contempt for the intelligence and observation of all who stand without "the ring." It is notorious that the Court is only too anxious to enter upon a path fraught with peril to itself and to the liberties of the country. This is no new allegation, but one of which abundant proofs are extant. As for the Horse Guards, it will be time enough to augment their functions when they have learnt to discharge with impartiality, judgment, and common sense, the duties already intrusted to them.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 27.

BANKS IN INDIA.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved for copies of all correspondence between the Secretary of State for India and the Government of India touching the establishment of government banks, and also for a list of all the banks now existing in India. He took leave to warn the Government how necessary it was in the establishment of such banks as those alluded to to take care that there was an efficient, and above all a responsible management, for remote responsibility in such matters amounted to no responsibility at all. There was great danger to the currency when the Government was entrusted with the power of issuing promissory notes payable on demand, unless the greatest possible care was taken. It was upon the due use of credit that the real development of commercial affairs took place, and nothing had a greater influence upon a sound system of trade than a sound and efficient system of banking. The noble lord concluded by moving for the correspondence and returns.

The Duke of ARGYLL said he had just laid upon the table the correspondence referred to by his noble friend. The noble lord said he had not wished to enter into the question, but he had nevertheless inducted a very distinct opinion as to the issue of a paper currency. He would not attempt to anticipate a discussion until their lordships were in possession of all the documents. The question was of great importance. It was surrounded with difficulty, and whatever course was taken it would be necessary for Parliament and the legislature of India to take sufficient precaution against the possibility of abuse. He was sorry that neither Lord Grey nor Lord Overstone was in the House, for both those noble lords in 1857 laid down doctrines upon the subject of banking the very converse of those which his noble friend had to-night enunciated, for both those noble lords distinctly held and laid down that it was the especial duty of Government to issue paper money, and that that great power should be withdrawn from the hands of all private corporations. For his own part he must say he saw little or no difference between the control of the Government over the paper and over a metallic currency; both were liable to be abused, and over the issue of both the history of the country showed that all proper checks and precautions were necessary. He believed that with such checks and precautions the proposed measure in India would be productive of great benefit and great convenience in the public finances of India.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH did not presume to give any opinion upon the subject until he had read the papers, but he thought that in India those transactions would be so extremely small that there was no probability of there being an extensive issue of paper.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 29.

INDIAN FINANCE.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH asked the Duke of Argyll whether the Government were officially in possession of Mr. Wilson's speech on Indian finance. The speech of Mr. Wilson was one of singular ability, but was deficient, inasmuch as it contained no information as to the state of the receipts of the Indian Government. He could not agree with the sanguine anticipations of Mr. Wilson, neither did he consider Mr. Wilson's plan a sound basis for economical reform in India. Such a reform was only to be carried out by a thorough reconciliation between the Government and the people; and the scheme of a graduated tax upon all persons connected with trade, by bringing the people in perpetual contact with the tax-collector, was not likely to conduce to that result. He could not concur either in the tax on tobacco or the proposed Income-tax, as the latter tax would, in his opinion, excite the deepest discontent throughout the country. He strongly deprecated the censure passed by Mr. Wilson on the sepoy army, which amounted still to about 200,000 men, and thought it most impolitic to cast reflections upon men who had contributed to the political tranquillity which afforded the Government the means of pressing this very scheme of taxation upon India. In conclusion he briefly adverted to the position of the officers from the disbanded sepoy regiments who were now employed on civil duties, and strongly insisted on the necessity of putting an end to the state of uncertainty which had existed for the last eighteen months as to their future destination.

The Duke of ARGYLL did not think it expedient to lay a copy of Mr. Wilson's speech on the table of the House. In his strictures upon Mr. Wilson's scheme, Lord Ellenborough seemed to have forgotten the necessity of meeting a present deficit of £9,000,000, and a prospective one for the next year of £6,500,000, and this necessity could not be met without having recourse to some new source of revenue. He proceeded to defend the various details of Mr. Wilson's scheme which had been attacked by Lord Ellenborough, and explained that the strictures of Mr. Wilson on the sepoy army referred only to the Bengal portion of that army. The question of dealing with the local army had been already under the discussion of a committee, by whose decision it had been determined by the Government to abide. The officers to whom Lord Ellenborough had alluded could hardly be thought ill-treated, as out of 1,151 only sixty-four were unemployed in civil or military duties.

Lord LYMEDEN urged upon the Government the expediency of producing some information in regard to Mr. Wilson's proceedings. The question was one of immense importance, and ought to be fully discussed.

REORGANISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES moved for copies of papers on the subject of the reorganisation of the army of India, which, he said, were absolutely necessary to enable the House to pronounce its judgment upon the subject. In supporting his motion, he strongly urged the expediency, upon constitutional as well as economical grounds, of maintaining a local European force in India, under the control of the Indian Government.

The motion was seconded by Mr. BUXTON, who added various arguments in favour of a local army.

Colonel HERBERT said the conclusion to which he had come was that, with a European force maintained for local service only, the Indian Government would lose freedom of action, and there would be a risk of that force acting together, and becoming masters instead of servants of the State.

Sir DE LACY EVANS spoke in favour of a local force.

Sir C. WOOD declined to discuss the question, upon which, he said, the Government had not made up their mind. If they determined that there should be only a force of Queen's troops of the Line in India, it would be necessary to bring the question formally before the House, when full information would be given, and this important question might be discussed. He did not think it right at present to produce all the papers moved for.

After some observations by Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, Mr. BRIGHT considered the answer of Sir C. Wood far from satisfactory. He thought some of the papers called for would furnish very useful information. He admitted that this was not a time to discuss the question whether the army in India should be under the Horse Guards or the Indian Government; but the House, he thought, would commit a grave error if, without good reasons, it handed over 60,000, or 70,000, or 80,000 troops to the management of the Horse Guards, which would cause a rapid rise in the military expenditure in India, and an increase of the evils attending patronage.

Mr. A. MILLS expressed a hope that there would be no further delay in determining this important question.

Sir T. COLEBROOKE and Lord A. VANE TEMPEST made a few remarks.

Mr. T. G. BARING, in reply to Mr. BRIGHT, observed that, if it should be decided to dispense with a local force in India, there would be no addition to the patronage of the Horse Guards.

After some observations by Sir H. WILLOUGHBY and Sir H. VERNEY,

Lord PALMERSTON said this question did not merely regard the interests of India: it was an imperial question, and must be decided upon grounds of military and political expediency, concerning the empire at large. He noticed and replied to arguments urged in favour of a local force in India, and objected to the production of the papers moved for, as containing only partial information, tending to mislead.

The discussion was continued by Colonel NORTH, Mr. KINNAIRD, and Mr. VANSITTART, and ultimately the motion was negatived.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.

Mr. VANCE asked the Secretary of State for India when the prize money for Lucknow would be distributed, and if simultaneously to the officers entitled to it who had remained and to those who had returned home with their regiments or invalided.

Sir M. FARQUHAR said that before the right hon. baronet answered that question he wished to ask whether he could state which were the troops among whom that prize money was to be distributed.

Sir C. WOOD said he was not then prepared to answer the question which had just been put by the hon. baronet. In answer to the hon. member for Dublin he had to state that the prize money belonged in the first place to the Crown, and it was necessary that the permission of the Crown should be obtained through the Lords of the Treasury for its distribution among the troops. The question had, therefore, been referred to them, and they had given the necessary instructions for carrying out that arrangement; but they had proposed that a different scale should be adopted in the distribution from that which had usually prevailed, their suggestion being that the scale should be the same as that which had been adopted in the case of the Russian war. The effect of that proposal would be to give an additional allowance to the private soldiers, and to diminish that of the officers of high rank. The authorities at the India Board stated that they had no objection whatever to such an arrangement; and that was the state in which the matter at present stood.

DEPUTATION TO SIR CHARLES WOOD ON INDIAN FIBRES.

On Tuesday afternoon, March 27th, a deputation waited upon Sir Charles Wood, at the India House, for the purpose of procuring his assistance, as the Secretary of State for India, in obtaining a supply of Indian fibres for the staple manufactures of the United Kingdom. The deputation was understood especially to represent the Oriental and Colonial Cotton, Flax, and Fibres Company. It was introduced by Mr. W. Ewart, M.P., and comprised Mr. Wyld, M.P., Mr. Bradbury, Mr. Bashford, Mr. Bonney, Mr. Holroyd, Mr. Spensley, Captain Strickland, Mr. Arrowsmith, and Mr. Hardwick. Mr. Ewart opened the subject by remarking that he believed the reason why he had been selected for that position was, that he had been, some time ago, the chairman of a committee of the House of Commons which bestowed a great deal of attention on the question of the development of Indian resources. The principal object of the deputation was, he added, to exhibit some specimens of Indian fibres, out of which paper and various textures might be manufactured with advantage, and to obtain such assistance from Sir Charles Wood as, in the capacity of Indian minister, he could render—of course solely on public grounds—in the procuring an adequate supply of useful materials for English manufactures. Mr. Spensley then produced several specimens of Indian fibres made from the rheea, the aloe, and the pine apple, and explained their various peculiarities. Among the articles exhibited were fibres, dressed and undressed, thread for making lace, dyed thread, plush, a lace covering for the shoulders, and paper. Sir Charles examined them all very attentively, and entered freely into conversation with regard to their origin and adaptation. In reply to the right hon. baronet's inquiries, it was stated that the Punjab was a very prolific source of supply as regarded the rheea, and that jute, of which there was in this country a very great scarcity, might be obtained thence in abundance if there were but adequate facilities for its exportation. It having been stated that it was the communication by way of the Indus which especially required improvement, Sir C. Wood observed that a good harbour was already being constructed, and that everything that was practicable was being done by means of railroads, and in other ways, to facilitate the conveyance of Indian produce westward. To the remark of Mr. Spensley, that an impression prevailed that some difficulty was being interposed in England, Sir Charles replied that he was not aware that such was the case, adding that the Minister for India naturally desired to develop its resources, and thereby to improve its revenue as far as possible. A member of the deputation said the company represented had orders for 50,000 tons of Indian fibre to be supplied during the next year; and for 100,000 tons to be supplied in each of the five subsequent years—a statement which the right hon. Baronet received with satisfaction, on account, as he said, of the benefits which it promised both to India and to England. The deputation then withdrew.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

The sixth ordinary general meeting of this company took place on Thursday, the 20th March, at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street; Mr. T. A. Mitchell, M.P., in the chair.

The following report, together with a statement of accounts, was taken as read:—

"Referring to their last annual report, the directors have to inform the shareholders that the agency at Singapore is now in active operation, and that a branch of the bank has since been established at Hong Kong. The directors trust that the general balance-sheet and accounts now submitted will be satisfactory to the shareholders. It will be seen that the net profits on the banks operations, for the year ended 31st Dec. last, amount to £37,211. 7s. 5d.; and that after deduction of the interim dividend at the rate of five per cent. declared on 22nd Sept. last, there now remains an available balance at the credit of profit and loss, of £29,517. 12s. 2d. Out of this sum the directors recommend a dividend (free of income-tax), for the half-year ended 31st Dec. last, at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, on the capital paid up at the 30th of June last, and on the subsequent calls from their respective dates of payment. Of the remainder they propose transferring £5,000 to the credit of a "Reserve Fund," carrying forward the balance, of £1,490. 13s. 8d., as "Undivided Profits." When the first dividend of five per cent. per annum was declared a year ago, the shareholders cordially adopted the directors' proposal to apply the surplus profits at that period to the extinction of the whole of the preliminary expenses of the institution and its branches. The directors doubt not that the shareholders will equally approve their present proposal to appropriate £5,000 towards the commencement of a reserve fund, to be hereafter increased from time to time. The shareholders will observe by the balance-sheet, that the subscribed capital of the bank, £614,000, is now paid up in full; and the requisite certificate to that effect has been obtained from the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury."

SCINDE RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the agent and chief engineer feel assured of having the entire line opened for traffic about the expiration of the present year. More than 50,000 tons of materials and machinery conveyed in 100 ships had been landed at Kurrachee for the Scinde Railway without accident or loss in the harbour. The commerce of the port amounted for the past year to £2,584,800, showing an increase of 19½ per cent. on the previous year, which was almost entirely owing to the increased importations from England direct and from Bombay. According to the estimates of Mr. Brunton, the entire expense of the Scinde line, with the additional works necessary, would be under £1,400,000. Although the extent of the line was not more than 114 miles in length, the termini were necessarily applicable to a traffic carried over 700 miles—viz., from Mooltan to Keamaree. The average cost of the railway would be about £10,000 per mile. The capital account showed that £1,239,683 had been received to the 31st of December, and £895,128 expended, leaving a balance of £5,200 in hand, and £339,355 with the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The report respecting the Indus steam flotilla states that the six towing steamers and twenty-five cargo barges arrived at Kurrachee in November last, with the necessary artisans and appliances, and the eight remaining cargo barges left some time ago the port of Liverpool for Kurrachee. The passenger steamer drew only twenty-two inches, with a speed of thirteen miles an hour, and had space for 500 men. The towing steamer drew seventeen inches, and towed at the rate of eight and a-half miles an hour four barges, carrying together 450 tons. There was every hope of seeing at no distant period the entire flotilla of fifty-three vessels in active operation on the Indus. The native craft on that river had been increased during the past year by 3,625 boats and by 19,790 tons. The capital account showed an expenditure of £165,870.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.

The directors in their report state that the earthworks of the section between Lahore and Umritsir, thirty-two miles in length, had been finished in a satisfactory manner by the native contractors, for the small sum of £150 per mile. The permanent way necessary for this section had been placed along the line, the rolling stock had left England in January last, so that there appeared every reason to believe that the two capitals of the Punjab would be placed in railway communication before the end of the current year. The earthworks of the whole of the remaining 218 miles from Lahore to Mooltan had been let with the sanction of Government to native contractors on similar terms to those for the Lahore and Umritsir section, and the works along the line were being energetically proceeded with. The permanent way materials and rolling stock for this portion of the line were being rapidly forwarded, and there was every prospect of the whole railway being brought to an early and satisfactory completion, and at a very moderate cost. It would be necessary to make a call of £5 per share, payable in June next. The directors continued to receive every facility from the home authorities, and also from the local Government in India, for the prosecution of the works. The capital account showed that £240,219 had been expended on the works, &c., £28,369 paid as interest to the proprietors, £3,636 in hand, and £342,526 with the Secretary of State for India in Council—total £614,780.

BOOKS.

Universal Review. No. XIV. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co.

The April number of the "Universal" is, perhaps, the best that has yet appeared. The subjects are as varied as usual, but more popular, while the same scholarly earnestness pervades their treatment that has characterised this periodical from the beginning. Under the title of "The National Money-Box," we have a very readable paper on the modern mode of managing the Exchequer, and of the relations of the Government with the Bank of England. This is followed by an able and interesting sketch of the Danish poet Ewald, together with a comprehensive criticism on his poetry. The third article, avowedly founded on M. Aroux's ingenious work, "Les Mystères de la Chevalerie et de l'Amour Platonique au Moyen Age," endeavours to show that the Troubadours and Trouvères of the Middle Ages were, in fact, professors and teachers of the reformed dogmas of the Albigensian creed, who disguised a religious movement under the symbols of romance. To this succeeds a paper by Professor De Morgan on "Bernardino Baldi," the only fault of which is its brevity. "Sir Everard's Daughter" is evidently drawing to a dénouement: the present instalment is decidedly more vigorous than its predecessors. Under the pretext of reviewing a small volume of poems of considerable merit by Mr. William Stigant, a writer of manifest ability discourses pleasantly on the present condition and future prospects of poetry in this utilitarian age. A charming paper is next on the list. It is a comparison of the life of "The Country Gentleman" in the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, and is written in a good-humoured genial spirit, that does one's heart good. The only political paper is a tirade on the annexation of Savoy to France, while the usual review of the Session completes the present number of Messrs. Allen's monthly review of politics, literature, and social science.

Macmillan's Magazine. No. VI. Macmillan and Co., Cambridge and London.

Were we compelled to give an honest answer to the question, Which paper we preferred in the current number of this clever periodical? we should unhesitatingly reply, "Tom Brown at Oxford;" but as that has not the slightest reference to Indian matters, we are bound to skip what is most amusing to pass on to that which is most interesting from our special point of view. In this sense we may express our sincere admiration of Mr. Vansittart Neale's very lucid and instructive exposition of the fundamental tenets of Buddhism, which imparts in a singularly pleasing and popular style all that the million cares, or needs, to know on that somewhat abstruse subject. Those readers, however, who turn with disdain from all that pertains to Eastern literature, will find an ample variety of topics discussed in a pleasant and scholarly manner, such as one has a right to expect from the imposing names which grace the title-page.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.

INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS.—At the beginning of spring chest complaints are continually produced by the east wind and variable temperature. In all such cases early attention and effective treatment are demanded to prevent them degenerating into more serious and often fatal maladies. The invalid may rest assured that Holloway's Pills, without worrying the weakest constitution, will remove all formidable symptoms. The Ointment should be rubbed on the chest, back, and sides every night and morning for at least ten minutes, and the parts then encased in flannel. This course of treatment will lessen fever, rectify impeded congestion, relieve the oppressed lungs, and remove listlessness, hoarseness, and cough. Thorough restoration will reward diligence and attention in following this advice.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the
MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.
APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a White Powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herb. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the Teeth, and insures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and anti-scorbutic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of decay of the Teeth, induce a healthy action of the gums, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath, also, from the salubrious and disinfecting qualities of the ODONTO, attains a purity and fragrance truly grateful to its possessor.

PRICE 2s. 9d. PER BOX.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' ODONTO, &c." are on the Label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 30, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 53s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c. for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each Postage, 6d.

NEWBURY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.

"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newbury—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken." —Medical Times, 12th Feb., 1859. Eight Cakes, 1s. 9d.; Sixteen (about 1lb.), 3s.—F. NEWBURY and SONS, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established A.D. 1748.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sen-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BARCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD FRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.*MAP of INDIA; showing the British

Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

CLAPHAM COMMON.*UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

MR. WILSON'S speech on the introduction of a paper currency into India occupies no small portion of the Calcutta papers received by the Mail of March 10. As a correct and complete analysis of the proposed measure was given in our last issue, we have not thought it necessary to reproduce the right hon. gentleman's speech in extenso. It does not appear, however, to have been rightly understood by such of the native community as happen to be holders of shares in the Bank of Bengal. A panic has seized these worthies, and the price of shares fell 25 per cent., though the actual result of Mr. Wilson's Bill will be to increase the business, and consequently the profits, of all the three Presidency Banks. The privilege of issuing notes will alone be withdrawn from them.

An agrarian insurrection of a somewhat alarming nature has broken out among the ryots of Lower Bengal, who have hitherto been regarded as too tame and spiritless even to murmur against oppression. They have now signally belied their imputed character, and have shown themselves in their true colours. The cause of the outbreak is traced to the following circular to the police in Bengal, which the ignorant peasantry deemed equivalent to an order to sow no more indigo:—

"PERWANAH.

"TO THE DAROGAH OF THANNAH KALAROOAH.

"Be it known.

"A letter of the magistrate of Baraset, dated Aug. 17, 1859, has arrived, enclosing extract of a letter, No. 4,516, from the Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, dated July 21, 1859, and addressed to the Nuddea Commissioner, which, in referring to certain indigo matters, states that the ryots are to keep possession of their own lands, sowing thereon such crops as they may desire; that the police should take care that neither indigo planters nor other persons should interfere with the ryots; that indigo planters shall not be able, under pretence of the ryots having agreed to sow indigo, to cause indigo to be sown by the use of violence on the lands of those ryots; and that, if the ryots have indeed agreed to do so, the indigo planters are at liberty to sue them for the same in the civil court, the Foujdaree court having no concern at all in that matter, for the ryots can bring forward numerous objections to their cultivating the indigo and in respect of their denial of the above agreement.

"Therefore this general perwanah is addressed to you that you may act in future as stated above. The 20th August, 1859.

"(True translation.)"

The planters have been in the habit of advancing money to the ryots for the purchase of seed and the maintenance of their families, to be repaid by indigo plant at certain fixed prices. This cultivation being less profitable than that of rice and other seeds, the ryots not unfrequently fail to fulfil their part of the bargain, and the planters, having a well-founded distrust of Mofussil justice, have sometimes taken the law into their own hands. Hence has arisen a feeling of antagonism between the employers and the employed, which has now been fanned into a blaze by the ill-judged partiality of Mr. Eden, the magistrate of Baraset, a gentleman avowedly hostile to all "interlopers." Believing themselves supported by the authorities, the ryots not only refused to grow any more indigo, but proceeded to acts of violence, destroying factories, plundering the rich, and coercing the well-disposed among themselves. Two Europeans have been beaten and left for dead upon the ground; and formidable bands of armed ruffians are roaming at large in the districts of Krishnagur, Baraset, Jessore, and Moorshedabad. The Lieutenant-governor, on hearing of these outrages, instantly hurried down from Patna, and issued a notification to the ryots, in the hope of restoring tranquillity. But the tiger that has once tasted blood is not easily tamed, and there is much danger lest the scenes of the Jacquerie in France should be re-enacted in Bengal.

The Supreme Court of Madras has declared war against the Legislative Council on the subject of the debts of the Nawab of the Carnatic, which the Government had engaged to pay, but which it is now endeavouring to evade on various pretences—the total amount far exceeding its anticipations. On this the Madras Bench denounced the conduct of the Government in stronger language than is sanctioned by etiquette, and in return are informed by the Council that their remarks were "unwarranted by the facts, and the language they used wholly unwarranted and unjustifiable." The matter, however, has been referred to the Secretary of State for India, who will, no doubt, pass an equitable judgment, unbiassed by fear or favour.

At a General Court of Proprietors, held on the 11th instant, Colonel Sykes, M.P., and Major-general George Moore were re-elected directors of the East India Company; and on the following day, at a Court of Directors, Colonel Sykes was unanimously elected chairman.

BENGAL.

PENNY WISDOM.

Mr. Wilson has a great opportunity. He is about to tax all the poorer sections of the middle class two per cent. on their incomes. He can give it all back to them if he chooses, without the expenditure of a penny from the Treasury, by reforming our copper currency. At present every clerk, small trader, artisan, and ryot is docked from two to six per cent. of his earnings from the absence of sufficient copper currency. Here, within thirteen miles of Calcutta, the "batta" or agio paid on changing silver into copper is within a trifle of two per cent., or a pice in the rupee. In the interior it is a pice and a half, and once across the Kurumnassa, the loss ranges often as high as six per cent. As the poor artisan must "break" his rupees, and the dealer is compelled to insist on his batta, or lose it when he in turn changes with the money-changer, the value of an income-tax is permanently lost. The sole reason for this state of affairs is the adherence of the Treasury to routine. A hundred and fifty millions of people want every year ten times as many copper pieces as the Mint can supply. They make up the deficit in part with tokens, old native pice, Furruckabad pice, and Oude coinage, but this supply yearly decreases, while the State Mint does not enlarge its average. New machinery is about to be or has been set up, but even this only just compensates for the new provinces added to the empire. Meanwhile the Mint imports copper ready laminated from England. Why not import the coin ready struck? There are houses in Derby and Birmingham which would supply any quantity under any securities Government might fix, and with the heavy seignorage in favour of Government cost is not an element in the question.

This is not all the loss suffered by the poor. The mass of transactions are not conducted in copper at all, but in cowries. The lowest copper coin,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  farthing, is so high in denomination that on almost every transaction the artisan wants smaller change. He obtains it in cowries, the value of which varies twenty per cent. in a week. It has varied here in the past year from 100 cowries per pice to 72, which is the present rate, though three days ago it was 80. Why should there not be a cheap spelter coinage? The matter is one of pennies, not millions sterling, but it concerns the daily life of the people more than loans.—Friend of India.

THE TALOOKDAR MAGISTRACY.

The system commenced in Oude has been extended to the Punjab. At the great durbar held at Lahore on the 13th February, and attended by upwards of a thousand Sikh sirdars, Lord Canning informed his audience that a number of the sirdars before him would be invested with magisterial powers. Those powers, he added, were to be employed, not as personal privileges, but for the benefit of the State. The concession was received by the assembled magnates with extreme satisfaction, and we believe will be extended over a wider area than in Oude.

This extension of this experiment to a second province seems to indicate that a desire to use and regulate the just influence of the great proprietors of the soil is now part of the settled policy of Government. As such we hope it will be accepted by its subordinates. At present we fear the current of hostile opinion is so strong that the experiment will hardly obtain fair play. Many of the experienced officers believe it ruinous to the State. Almost all brought in direct contact with it feel that the native's power interferes annoyingly with their own. There will be probably no open resistance, but any deputy-commissioner who distrusts the plan can always impede it in his own district. It is only necessary for him to display a consistent want of confidence in the talookdar, and a readiness to prejudge appeals. The talookdars will of course blunder. The "great unpaid" in England often blunder atrociously. That is no proof that the system on the whole fails to secure substantial justice to classes who but for it would never obtain redress. Stern responsibility and not petty interference is the best corrective for the aberrations of the talookdars. If they only do little evil, much will have been gained, for they have already power, and the first maxim of politics is that all real power already in existence should be enrolled in the service of the State, not suffered to array itself against it.—Friend of India.

BEHEMOTH STIRRING.

Are the mutinies in the North-West to be followed by a jacquerie in Bengal? The recent intelligence from Krishnaghur, though not yet alarming, is sufficient to suggest some doubts as to the continued tranquillity of the Delta. The war between the ryots and the landholders which the late Mr. Lacroix, perhaps of all men best acquainted with the Bengalee peasantry, used so incessantly to predict, seems on the verge of breaking out in earnest. The immediate quarrel, so far as we can gather, seems to have occurred in this wise. The prices of all descriptions of provisions have for the last four years been steadily on the rise. Land, therefore, has acquired a new value, and the ryots are taking up every attainable square inch for rice and seeds. The prices offered for the indigo plant have not increased in an equal proportion, and the original distaste of the ryot to this cultivation has been greatly intensified. The planters, however, who cannot work without their supplies of the plant, insist either on the delivery of the stipulated quantities, or the repayment of their advances. The transaction, strictly legal, is also on most factories pretty equitable, for although the ryot does not obtain the profit on indigo he might obtain on rice, he still does obtain other advantages, especially capital at low interest, which fully compensate for the deficiency. A Bengalee ryot, however, sees only the momentary gain. He has spent his advances, and is maddened by the idea that he must devote land which would yield him 150 per cent. to a cultivation the profits of which, always low, he has already eaten up. Still he might have cultivated, as he has done for 50 years, but an idea suddenly spread through Krishnaghur that the Government was opposed to the indigo cultivation. A letter from Mr. Grant, intended only to discourage forced labour, was interpreted to mean an actual prohibition of the trade. Government might have protested against a profitable agriculture for ever without the slightest effect, but the letter chimed in strongly with the passion of the moment, and the ryot over large concerns refused to cultivate.

Thus far the action of the peasantry, however much to be deplored, as injurious to their permanent interests, and the welfare of a great manufacturer, was not without defence. The planters naturally enough think that men who have stipulated to perform a certain work, for a price paid in advance, should be compelled to do it. We are by no means certain, however, whether true justice, as administered among free men, would concede more than a summary process for the recovery of the advance. Men cannot be "held to labour" against their will in the nineteenth century, and under the British Government. They ought to be and must be compelled to pay their debts, but something more than this lies at the bottom of some proposals for summary laws.

The ryots, however, soon advanced from this position. Emboldened by what they deemed the support of Government, and seeing a way to relieve themselves from the unpleasant necessity of honesty, they have commenced a plan of systematic rioting. Whether their movements are in any degree directed from Calcutta appears doubtful. The expulsion of European landholders is, however, a favourite idea of some native patriots, and the following passage from Mr. Robertson's account of Saharunpore during the mutinies throws a curious light upon the question:—

"The Koolins, though they originally migrated from Kunouj, in the North-West Provinces, have, from finding themselves thrown amongst a much inferior race, assumed a more prominent position than their brethren in the North-West, while, in consequence of their vicinity to the fountain-head of legislation, they have always restlessly watched its progress. Had this astute body of men not initiated them into the facts, the Brahmins, Chutrees, and Rajpoots of the North-West might never have observed or troubled their heads regarding any extent of legislation carried on in Calcutta, so long, at least, as the English Government did not interfere with their land tenures, as serious a question—or more serious, perhaps—than caste itself. But the Brahmins of Calcutta, being well up in the legislation of the day which affected the free development of many of their disgraceful privileges, determined, if not to revenge themselves, at least to excite such a national feeling that the Government would be induced to pause in its course. To effect this, their Brahmin brethren in the North-West were set in motion to rouse the caste jealousies of their countrymen, more particularly of the sepoys; and all the more intelligent Brahmins of the North-West whom I had an opportunity of questioning on the subject, declared that their own caste in the North-West had been led astray by the Bengal Brahmins."

However that may be, it seems certain that the ryots, at first engaged only in a strike, rapidly proceeded to open rioting. Bands of half-armed men crossed the country, and threatened the labourers who still continued to grow indigo. In at least three concerns the cultivation seems to have been suppressed by force, and all through Krishnaghur, and part of Moorshedabad, the peasantry are for the moment masters of the situation. No planters have yet been slain, but all are menaced, the police are as useless as usual, many magistrates are secretly not sorry at such a warning to "interlopers," and the first bloodshed will probably be the signal for outrages which may recall the worst days of the mutinies. It is mere folly to believe that the movement will stop short at the planters, even if that were any consolation; the ryots like paying rent just as little as they like repaying advances, and once they know their strength are little likely to rest content with an injury to trade. Mr. Grant at least remembers the fate of the grain and money-dealers on the borders of Sonthalistan in 1855. The poor love the rich no more in Krishnaghur than in Bhagulpore, and the massacre of every man with a list of debtors is not an occurrence calculated to reflect credit on an administration. The movement should be stopped at once, before the tiger-cub has tasted blood, and the ryots compelled at once to bring their grievances and their assertion of them within the law.

The affair places in a strong light the wretched state of our internal organisation. The duty is plain and simple, but how is it to be performed? In England the country gentlemen, aided by their tenantry, would suppress the rising for themselves. So they would in Krishnaghur, but there is no law, and they would be instantly punished for an affray. Indeed they are not at liberty to defend themselves. The European might fire on an armed mob which attacked his house, because he is under English law. But his native servants are not, and if they fired the Sudder might transport them. They did it in 1853, when they transported a man for seven years for cutting down one of a gang of dacoits in the act of robbing his house, and were pronounced by Lord Dalhousie, in a formal letter on record, "unjust" Judges. In Ireland the disturbed pergunnahs would be "proclaimed," and police quartered in them at the expense of the landholders. That plan would exactly meet a case like that of Ooterparah, where the object was to put down armed men contending for private interests, but in Krishnaghur it would involve the taxation of the innocent for the offence of being assailed. In fact, there exists at present no means of preserving order in any part of Bengal except the direct employment of military force, which Government, wisely enough, will not use till the last moment. In the present instance, if this spirit spreads, there will be no remedy. Order must be maintained at all hazards, unless we want the most fearful of calamities, an intermittent agrarian war. The instant order is restored, let a mixed commission, a conseil des prud-hommes, inquire into the whole question of the complaints of the ryots, and the grievances—less talked of, but very real—of the planting interest.—Friend of India.

RYOTS AND RIOTS.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal appears to be getting up, if not a rebellion, at least an agrarian rising, on his own account, in Lower Bengal. It is now about two months since, upon a question referred to him by Mr. Eden, magistrate of Barraset, Mr. Grant decided in favour of that gentleman's law, and against that of Mr. Grote, the commissioner of the district, that police interference was justifiable to prevent the servants of an indigo factory from going upon the lands or to the house of a ryot who had taken advances from the factory for the cultivation of indigo. This decision was conveyed in a letter, characterised by an unusual amount of Mr. Grant's ingenious special pleading in support of his opinions, and in which he indulged, even to an unusual extent, in the logical intricacies in which he appears to delight. Copies of this letter, together with the orders of the magistrate in the cases from which it originated, were circulated in some unauthorised manner throughout Lower Bengal. As was to be expected, it was interpreted by the inferior officials as an expression of the wishes and views of the Lieutenant-governor to check indigo planting, and by the ryots, to whom it was industriously made known by those officials in search of Government favour, as an authority to them to resist the fulfilment of their contracts with planters. Isolated cases of complaints against factories immediately began; then followed opposition to the demands of planters to have the lands sown, for which only a few weeks before advances and seed had been given. From this an excitement sprung up in the minds of the ryots; whole villages have gone into stations, demanding that they should not be compelled to sow, and now the inhabitants of many villages, to the number of many thousands, are moving about the country, setting the police at defiance, who are utterly powerless to oppose them, compelling the inhabitants of perfectly quiet and contented villages to join them, and have begun acts of violence which in all probability will end in serious bloodshed. A European assistant of one factory has been attacked, and left for dead while riding along the high road; several native factory servants have been assaulted and so beaten that recovery is hopeless; the outbuildings of factories have been burnt and the seed destroyed, and bodies of men have approached to within a few hundred yards of the large factory houses, threatening attack, and only deterred by fear of fire-arms in the hands of Europeans. In some cases European managers of factories have been compelled to remove their wives and children for safety, and the native servants are leaving in hundreds, under the threats of the rioters. Lower Bengal is in a state of agrarian rebellion. France goes to war for "an idea," and it appears that Mr. J. P. Grant creates a rebellion for "an idea."

From the information we daily receive it is clear that, unless some stringent as well as prudent measures are immediately taken by the Government, it will not be long before we have some very serious outrages to report. Mr. Grant is returning immediately by dak, called down, it is said, by the state of the country. It will be something to know who is to blame for this most uncalled for disturbance. The responsibility is serious enough, for the country was perfectly quiet and contented only a few months ago, without any apparent cause of complaint. We have before said that if the authorities knew of any great oppression existing requiring correction, the mode taken to remedy it is an abiding disgrace to Government.

We believe there was no other necessity for interference than has long been known to exist in Bengal. We also believe that the matter will not rest here, that an impetus has been given to the budmash-ship of Bengal, which may yet add a few more serious figures to our deficit; in fact, it appears that, as fast as Mr. Wilson caulks up one leak, our able governors are causing new ones. It looks not unlike the small beginnings of the great mutinies. A Jacquerie rising in Bengal will be most deplorable; we have seen the Moulabees of Barraset and the Sonthals in the field; we may now have the Firazees and the whole budmash population of Bengal joining in such another miserable scene of plunder and massacre, ending in their destruction, and producing a crop of judicial punishments which will cover the Government with the contempt of all Europe.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SYLHET, Feb. 27.—The march across the Khasia hills from Assam to this place has scarcely a parallel in the world for fineness of climate, and beauty and variety of scenery. The road to the base of the hills winds through the same amphitheatres of hills reposing on the same lake-like plains, which I have before described. Then you ascend the lower range of hills, still in Assam, which are covered with the densest forest vegetation, and watered with hundreds of small streams of purest water, until you reach the river Burapanee, which runs at the base of the Khasia hills. This river is spanned by a suspension bridge, which would bear a comparison with the best of the kind in England. Beneath it rush the clear blue waters of the Burapanee, over a bed of rocks worn and cut into deep holes, and a thousand fantastic shapes, by the action of the immense body of water that pours over them during the periodical rains that are so heavy in this part of the world. Beneath the bridge there is a very fine waterfall, about 40 feet high, which falls into a large pool, said to be of very great depth. The falls in Scotland, that attract annually such crowds of admiring visitors, fade into perfect insignificance before this grand rocky river. From the bridge you ascend to Nanklow, a height of 3,000 feet, and there commences the journey across the Khasia hills. At this season of the year the climate is cold and exhilarating, and I am sure, if these hills were more known, the worn-out and climate-touched residents of the plains would visit them in preference to the Himalayas. From Nunklow the view of the lower hills and plains of Assam is magnificent. In the early morning the leaden-coloured clouds rest on the lower ranges, leaving the peaks of the hills cropping out like islands in a dull blue sea. As the sun rises the peaks become lighted, and the clouds boil up, in the grandest and most fantastic shapes. I have seen the rising of the sun from the Righi in Switzerland, but it is not equal to the view from Nunklow. About four hours ride from the next station, Meyrung, is one of the greatest wonders of the world, called the Kullung rock. It is one mighty mass of granite, cropping out of the spur of a mountain. On one side it is seven hundred feet high, and about five hundred on the other. It is then much higher than the highest pyramid of Egypt, and contains a mass of stone that would build half a dozen Great Pyramids. In shape it is nearly round, and it appears like a gigantic dark tower, overlooking the whole country around. Near its base fir trees grow, as high as eighty and a hundred feet; but look quite insignificant beside it. There is a sketch of it in Mr. Oldham's report on the Khasia hills, but it is most incorrect, and gives no idea of the vast magnitude of this wonderful rock. I have never seen any object in nature to be compared to it. It is not difficult to ascend, and with the assistance of four Khasias, and a rope attached to my belt, I got to the top in about half an hour. In many parts of the road I noticed a great many pieces of quartz lying scattered in the ground, exactly as I have seen the quartz at the gold diggings of Australia. It is not unlikely that there may be valuable gold diggings in these hills to be found, if some enterprising adventurers were to make the experiment. It is in the creeks and gullies of the hills of Australia that gold most abounds, and the Khasia hill formations are not unlike those of the Ovens' mining district. Iron, coal and lime are abundant in these hills, but little can be made of them, from the distance, expense of carriage and labour; for in these hills, too, the same increase in the price of labour which is puzzling us in Bengal and elsewhere has taken place to a surprising extent. At Cherrapoonjee, where the Khasias work the coal mines, the price of coal was formerly three rupees per hundred maunds; they now demand and obtain ten rupees for the same quantity.—Englishman.

THE SENATE OF THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY held a public meeting in the Town Hall, on the 6th March, for the purpose of conferring degrees. The Advocate-General, Mr. Ritchie, presided as Vice-Chancellor. In addition to the members of the Senate, he was accompanied by Mr. Wilson, Sir James Outram, and Sir Bartle Frere. There was a fair attendance of natives and of professors of the affiliated colleges. In the course of an eloquent speech, the Vice-Chancellor reviewed the history of the University and of education in India, and paid a tribute to the memory of Macaulay. Twenty-four students who had passed the examination for Bachelor of Arts in 1859 and 1860 were presented successively by the Principals of their college to the Vice-Chancellor, who conferred on them the degree, charging them in their life and conversation to prove worthy of the honour, and delivering to each a diploma sealed with the University seal. One was created also Bachelor of Law, and promised by Mr. Ritchie a warm welcome to the bar of the Supreme Court, should he wish to practise there. Of the twenty-four Bachelors, one passed with honours. The Syndicate contemplate recommending the use of Oxford gowns with the hoods, in the case of all graduates and members of the Senate. The fact that even one Bachelor of Law has passed should deter the Senate from the barbarism of instituting a lower and unrecognised degree such as L.L.

JACQUERIE IN BENGAL.—We (Englishman, March 3) have heard, on good authority, that a very serious affray took place four days ago at Kalapanee, an indigo factory belonging to the Aurungabad concern in Moorshedabad. A gomastah of the factory had, it appears, been plundering and oppressing the ryots for some time, who carried their complaints to the manager, without having any attention paid to them. Seeing that the factory people would not listen to them, they gathered in large numbers and attacked the factory. The agent and his people fled, but the obnoxious gomastah was seized and so maltreated that his life is despaired of. We are told that the unfortunate man is now in hospital, with but very poor hopes of surviving. The riotous cultivators, delighted with their success, carried their violence further; numbers flocked to the spot, and proceeded from village to village recruiting, drumming, shouting, and exulting in their victory. They called on all to follow them and drive the English out of the country. The police force was helpless; darogahs and their myrmidons collected from all quarters, but they were only derided—told to take it easily, and give themselves no trouble in the matter. The people of the villages who refused to join them were insulted and threatened. When our letter was despatched, the whole country remained in great agitation. This will cause more trouble, and the rest of the people in Bengal will have it that it arose out of resistance to the planters, a cause they are all quite ready to join, as they have been sedulously taught that the Government of Bengal approves of this course. The villagers in the Kishnaghur district have also claimed the sacred right of insurrection against the planters, backed, as they believe themselves to be, by Government. Letters have been received in town from various quarters, which have been placed at our disposal. We make up the following narrative from them. Influenced by the ryots in the Golar division, where the whole country is in a state of confusion, the ryots around Kacheegatta have begun to behave very badly. On the 29th of February about 2,000 of the Lokenathpoor, Chandpoor, Toltolla, and Kajeerah ryots crossed the river at a place named Choondungah, near Toltullahpoor, amongst the villagers of Peerpoor, and came within 300 or 400 yards of the Peerpoor Factory, shouting and intimidating the Peerpoor ryots to make them join the insurrection. The police in this part of the country have been doing their utmost lately to foment a bad spirit among the ryots. At Toltollah, the ryots, on being spoken to on the subject, said they had no wish to quarrel with the factory, but that it was "the Company's" orders that they were not to sow any more indigo. To these people "the Company" is still the Government of India; the police, they added, had told them so. On the 1st of this month there was another outbreak at Bamundee.

THE BUDGET OF PUBLIC WORKS in Bengal, for 1859-60, embraces the following:—Original works, 25,15,553; petty works, 35,000; repairs, 11,00,000; establishments, 7,00,000; total, 43,50,553. Of the 25 lakhs allotted for new works, upwards of 2½ are devoted to Fort William, 10½ to accommodation for troops, and more than 5 to roads, bridges, and canals. In the official papers just published, which contain the details, the Lieutenant Governor exercises a minute and healthy supervision over the department. He censures the careless style in which the estimates are prepared. He condemns proposals "to fritter away the small sum available in carrying on in a languid manner a number of great works, none of which will be materially advanced in consequence." He objects to sanction expenditure for a road from Sooree to Bhagulpore, "running through an uninhabited jungle teeming with tigers." He orders the speedy completion of the Burhee and Hazareebagh road, and of the Darjeeling road as great military works, and of the Bowsee and Bhagulpore line, as a feeder to the East Indian Railway. Common sense and searching inquiry, such as this, are needed in the Public Works Department.

SINGING BIRDS FOR INDIA.—The Calcutta papers advertise the importation from Hamburg of 2,000 European singing birds, by two enterprising Germans. The birds are chiefly German canaries, nightingales, skylarks, goldfinches, robin redbreasts, thrushes, and blackbirds. The experiment should succeed, although it is on so large a scale.

SALT.—At the Government of Bengal salt sale on the 1st March, 3,80,000 maunds, were assigned to the applicants. Rs. 6,000 were paid for stamps on the 3,000 tenders which were given in. A sum of forty-nine lakhs of rupees was deposited for payment of the amount of salt for which application was made. As the distribution was only 28 per cent. on the amount applied for, three-fourths of this large sum must be returned. Some of the speculators paid usurious rates of interest for the temporary loan of money, which caused a disturbance in the market. One Jew alone lent thirty lakhs—not three—at 25 per cent. per annum.

THE CALCUTTA AUCTION COMPANY, at their meeting on Tuesday, March 6, declared a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The sales for the six months amounted to Rs. 15,49,319, against 10,22,088 for the preceding half-year, a sum nearly equal to the whole of the sales in 1858. The divisible balance of profit was equal to 25 per cent. on the paid up capital. Of this part was transferred to the formation of a guarantee fund. The bad and doubtful debts for the period amounted to Rs. 15,000.

THE INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION has resolved to adopt the name of "the Agricultural and Commercial Association" and to extend its sphere so as to include all indigo planters, tea planters, proprietors of silk filatures, mines, zemindaries, government grants of land, or forest rights, railway contractors, river navigation companies, and those engaged generally in any branch of industry in the country, in fact all the non-official classes. A deputation of the association is about to wait on the lieutenant-governor of Bengal on the subject of the agrarian outrages in Krishnagur.

NATIVE HOARDS.—The Mofussilite gives an instance of the extent to which the natives of India are in the habit of hoarding gold. One native in the North-West, who had only five lakhs in Company's paper, was stripped of 10½ lakhs in personalty by the Nana and the Gwalior Contingent. The following details afford an insight into the nature of native wealth:—

Cash in company's rupees .. ..	77,009
994 gold mohurs (of Lucknow) .. ..	15,407
Gold wearing apparel .. ..	45,063
Silver ornaments, dining utensils, &c. ..	12,175
159 shawls, halfraj, jamair, &c. ..	22,562
10,550 Jeypore, Delhi and Kuldar gold mohurs .. ..	205,350
Jewels, apparel, &c., and original jewellery ..	207,250
Gold bricks .. ..	306,000
404 silver thukkah or bricks .. ..	101,000
Broad cloths, kimbabs, piece goods, &c. ..	17,000
10 horses .. ..	5,300
Ruth or up-country carriage .. ..	300
12 bullocks .. ..	500
Silver articles and toys which were exclusively made for the females of the family and had been presented to them ..	25,000
Furniture of the bungalow about .. ..	5,000
Cash in company's rupees .. ..	14,000

Total Co.'s Rs. .. 10,55,907

This sum would have yielded £5,000 a-year.

MOORSHEDABAD.—We (Englishman) have received from a friend the following account of an attack of a most violent and brutal description by some soldiers of the 73rd regiment at Moorshedabad:—"I duly received your note, but the reason I have not replied to it before is, that I have been for some days incapacitated, and my time taken up through a most shameful attack which was made on our house and myself on the night of Saturday, the 18th February, about 9.30 P.M., by a party of European soldiers. I had come home somewhat late and tired from the city, and after dinner was sitting in my wife's room when I heard a great noise in the lower part of the compound, and almost at the same time the Ayah rushed into the room, saying some soldiers were in the stable beating the horse and breaking the buggy. I went to the back of the house, and there saw the syce, who confirmed her report; this was sufficient to cause me to go out, and putting on my clothes and a fez cap I proceeded to the back of the house, where I saw five men in military undress going towards the front; one man I overtook, and asked what he did there making an uproar, and destroying property; he said, in a doubtful tone, that he had lost his way. I asked him what regiment he belonged to, he said the 73rd. My attention was now directed to the remaining four men, who were trying to break into my wife's bed-room, and using the most fearful threats and oaths. I immediately rushed forward, and threw down the first man I reached, when the others set on me and beat me most unmercifully with short heavy bludgeons, swearing they would knock my — soul out. I was obliged to run for my life, closely pursued by the ruffians, but managed to reach the back of the house; I was severely contused and bled profusely, but fortunately the fellows did not stun me, my thick fez cap having saved my head. They then left the house, and meeting the chowkeedar, beat in his skull, and he died in about three hours."

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.—The East India Railway Company, we believe, will be able to redeem their promise of opening the line to Rajmahal on 1st July next. We hear the public will not be allowed to take advantage of it till the end of the year, the need for forwarding permanent way and other materials is so great. If this is the case Government should coerce the company. According to the Engineer's Journal the railway tunnel at Monghyr is exciting great interest among the natives. Crowds flock from all parts of the country to see it. In the course of six weeks the whole will be completed. The railway between Lahore and Mooltan will be ready, the engineers expect, early in 1863. We fear there is no hope of the line from Delhi to Lahore being even begun by that date.

LUCKNOW, March 2.—Mummoo Khan, after a very long trial and a most careful investigation, during which a great number of witnesses have been examined, many of whom were evidently inclined to screen him, has at last been pronounced "guilty," that is, guilty, not merely of rebellion, but of having been an accessory to the murder of the Dourayra fugitives, as well as of Captain Patrick Orr, Sir M. Jackson, Lieut. Burnes, and Sergeant Major Norton. Colonel Abbott intimated to the prisoner that there was no chance of his escaping a felon's doom, though he would not (for what reason is unknown to me) sentence him to death himself. The proceedings and decision have been sent up to the Judicial Commissioner for confirmation; as there is no recommendation for mercy, there is no doubt that he will be hanged on the spot on which his victims met so cruel a death.

DELHI.—The order for clearing the necessary space round the fort (palace) has been passed, and in a few days the work will commence in right earnest. The inhabitants of the Duriba have sent up a petition with the view to set aside the threatened destruction of their property, but as the clearance is absolutely necessary as a measure of precaution, it is to be hoped that no petition will be permitted to interfere with the arrangements. The executive engineer, Mr. Campbell, is only waiting for the commissioner's sanction, and the houses to be made over; as soon as these difficulties are overcome, there will be no further delay. Permanent barracks on a very handsome scale are to be built in the fort. The present accommodation there is to be vacated in a few days by the 2nd Fusiliers, which regiment is to march out in progress to Roorkee. This change of station for the gallant Fusiliers has become imperative from the prevalence of Delhi sores in the regiment. It is doubtful whether the change to Roorkee will benefit them very much, but anything is better than another year in this station. They will be greatly missed, and carry with them the good wishes of all. The detachment of the 88th Connaught Rangers, at Allygurh, will rejoin head-quarters as soon as the court-martial, now sitting there, is over; three companies of the 88th will then be quartered in the fort, and the remainder continue at their quarters near the Cashmere-gate. H.M. 70th regiment passed through recently en route for Chinsurah. They will go by railroad and bullock-train from Cawnpore, and by the time they arrive at the latter place they will find the weather somewhat oppressive. The 5th Regt. P. I., on their way to Lahore and Kohat, also passed through lately, and the 21st company Royal Engineers, on their way to England; the latter are from Dugshai, and travel by bullock-train. Our cold season is over, the mornings being all that is now left us of the bracing weather we have recently enjoyed. The season has been very favourable for ice making, enough having been stored to last for two years, if necessary.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, March 10).—Rau Silk.—For native silks the demand continues dull except for fine qualities. Combs and Gonates of the November band which are fairly selling, and may be quoted at 8 annas to 1 rupee per seer higher. Other descriptions, however, remain nominally unchanged in value. Stocks are about 200 mds. In European Silks the demand continues satisfactory, and prices are well supported. Want of available stocks has, however, in a great measure tended to curtail operations. Silk Piece Goods.—In Corals a very small business has been done during the fortnight at previous prices. Transactions of any consequence are not likely to take place until prices shall have given way. In Choppas and Bandanahs there is nothing to notice. There is no Tussar in the market. Stocks of Corals are estimated at about 60,000 pieces. Cotton.—Supplies are arriving from the Upper Provinces, but very gradually; there is little doing for shipment. Salt-petre.—The market has been dull since the increase of duty; business has been limited for all places. Prices have materially declined, and a few parcels have latterly changed hands at a reduction of nearly 1 rupee per md. which makes up a portion of the present high duty. 5 per cent. Refraction is now at Rs. 9-8 per md. Lac dye.—There is a better feeling manifested; but the small stocks and high prices restrain free operation.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, March 10).—The beginning of the last fortnight showed marks of a revival in Piece Goods, but suddenly the long prevailing tightness of the money market became greater, and this checked business to a high degree. Not only the transactions have been very limited, but prices generally have receded a little. Metals steady in demand, and in prices we quote sheathing copper at 44-8. British Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings.—Owing to the tightness of the money market, business has been done on a limited scale, but at rather improved rates. 39-inches 50 reeds at Co's Rs. 4-0 to 4-1, do 54 do at 1-8; do 56 do at 5-4; do 60 do at 6-0; 45-inches at 4-12 to 7-8; 54 do at 8-0. White Pique Shirtings and Broadens.—Are to be quoted one anna per piece better than formerly. Grey Jacquets.—Low qualities are nearly the same as before, but adding and fine goods are slightly higher. 39-inches at Co's Rs. 1-9 to 2-7, 45 do at 2-11 to 3-0. Wide Jacquets.—Most descriptions of these goods have again improved in value. 38-inches at Co's Rs. 1-12 to 3-12, 45 do at 3-2 to 6-12. Grey Madapolams have risen in value, are to one and half per piece. 32-inches 42 reeds at Co's Rs. 2-3; do 50 do at 2-5; do 56 do at 2-8. White Twills.—Saleable at our quotation. 36-inches 40 yards at Co's Rs. 5-6 per piece. Lappets are in some demand for the local market. Mull Mulls.—We have no change to notice in Grey Goods, but Whites have improved one anna per piece for assorted Nos. Black Muslins are scarce and easily saleable at full prices. Coloured Yarns.—Almost all descriptions under this head are in fair demand at rather improved rates. Turkey Red English dye at Co's Rs. 1-5 to 1-6; do German do at 1-6 to 1-8; Orange at 0-18-0 to 0-18-6; Green at 0-13-0 to 0-13-6. White Mule Twist has again become dull of sale.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CIVIL SERVICE RETIRING PENSIONS.—The proceedings of the Madras Government with regard to the memorial of the Civil Service for retiring pensions, in lieu of the present system, have been published. Government agree with the memorialists as to the disadvantageous working of the annuity fund, and "its utter failure to accomplish the end for which it was established," namely, retirement on a thousand a year after twenty-five years' service. But they do not support the prayer of the memorial to its full extent. For example, the memorialists propose that twenty-two years' actual service in India should be the maximum period, and that it should entitle to a pension of £600 per annum. Instead of this, Government has strongly urged the Secretary of State to adopt the following scale of retiring pensions. After ten, fifteen, and twenty years' actual service, £150, £250, and £400 per annum respectively, to be granted to those who may be compelled to retire by certified ill health; and a pension of £600 per annum after twenty-five years' actual service, irrespective of all conditions. The memorialists propose that the money now in hand, on account of the annuity fund, should be distributed among the subscribers; and they suggest that Government paper should be used for this purpose.

THE MADRAS AUXILIARY BIBLE SOCIETY during the past year issued 56,820 of the whole and portions of the Bible in Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, and Hindustani. Of these 4,473 were sold, and 1,197 distributed among the coolies emigrating to the Mauritius and West Indies. The total income of the society was Rs. 13,306.

TANJORE.—Madras is in a ferment, and the natives have arrived at the conviction that even Lord Dalhousie was a better ruler of Asiatics than the hitherto popular Sir Charles Trevelyan. The daughter of the late Rajah of Tanjore, under fourteen years of age, has been married to Suckeram Sahib, the widower of her elder sister, and old enough to be her father. During his life the Rajah is said to have forbidden this marriage, and the Ranees have offered to it the most determined opposition. On the ground that the young princess has expressed a wish to marry Suckeram, Sir Charles Trevelyan, in spite, it is said, of the whole of his council, has determined to protect her in her choice. The Ranees assert she acted under compulsion; and the whole Hindoo community declare that the sanctity of their domestic rights has been attacked. Mr. J. B. Norton proceeds to England to raise the whole question of the lapse of the Tanjore Raj, and a public meeting of natives has been called to strengthen his hands.

THE MADRAS INAM COMMISSIONER continues to report his progress. His last statement is dated the 8th February, and from it we learn that "the total number of titles confirmed up to the 31st January was 28,153; of which 1,600 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 14,008 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdar; 7,273 were personal grants enfranchised compulsorily, and 263 personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The number of the deeds issued up to last month was 17,561. The total amount of quit rent stipulated to be paid in addition to former quit rent, is Rs. 31,828; Rs. 5,233 have been paid in redemption of quit-rent, and the proportion of persons who have declined the commutation has not varied since last report."

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—The committee of the Ootacamund Lawrence Asylum have at last agreed to make over the institution to Government, subject to the same rules as to religious teaching which prevail in the Sonawur Asylum. As subscriptions were given by the public on the understanding that Sir Henry Lawrence's wishes as to its strictly Protestant character should be adhered to, the committee are prepared to refund donations. The three Lawrence Asylums for the three presidencies, at Sonawur, Mount Aboe, and the Neigherries, are now, therefore, under similar management, and belong to the State. The children are at liberty to receive religious instruction from the ministers of their own denomination, while the Authorised Version of the Bible alone is read in the school, and the services of the Church of England are held in the chapel.

THE MYSORE.—We (Athenaeum) understand that the political relations of Mysore, which have hitherto been superintended by the Supreme Government, are now to be transferred, as they should have been long ago, to that of Madras, and that the commissioner in Mysore will henceforth be accountable to the executive of this Presidency, which has hitherto had no voice in his conduct of affairs. It is further mentioned that Sir Mark Cubbon, the present commissioner, has resigned his appointment, in consequence of the above change. We lament his vacation of the high office which he has for many years held so well, but at the same time we highly approve of the measure that has led him to vacate it. There was no good reason why Mysore should not be subordinated to the Government of Madras, equally with Travancore, while there were cogent reasons why the transfer should be accomplished. It is rather absurd that the superintendent of a province which virtually lies within the Madras Presidency should be under the orders of Bengal. But as the Mysore question is being dealt with, we trust that the Supreme Government will go a little further, and place it on a satisfactory footing by suffering the Rajah to fulfil his long cherished desire of adopting an heir to his Raj. England has lost much more than she has gained by pursuing the policy of annexation and absorption, and as she is reversing it to a great extent in the north west, and restoring rights of which she ought never to have deprived the native princes, it would be well if she gave indication of a little repentance in the south.

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—The experiment of opening the Madras Civil Engineering College to twenty men of good conduct and superior ability in the various European regiments has succeeded so well that Sir Patrick Grant recommends an increase of the number to thirty. He says, however, that there is at present a serious difficulty in securing good non-commissioned officers for regiments, as "vast numbers" of the most deserving men are taken for detached employment. Why not attach a junior department to the college, to train the sons of soldiers as practical mechanics and surveyors? The experiment has succeeded on a small scale in the Government workshops at Roorkee.

IMMIGRATION INTO PEGU.—The Rangoon Times says the stream of emigration is steadily setting into Pegu from the Shan States, the Coromandel Coast, and China. The population of Rangoon, in the absence of a correct census, is estimated at 65,000. The steady increase of settlers from year to year is one of the most favourable features of Pegu. In 1858-59 there was an increase of 50,771, and the population of the whole province was 8,90,974.

MR. BRIGHT ON THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—Mr. H. Nelson has received the following letter from Mr. John Bright, on the subject of a petition from the Anti-Licence Bill Meeting, held in Madras in the latter part of 1859:—Dear Sir, I have received your letter on the subject of your recent meeting, and informing me of the petitions which have been forwarded to my friend, Mr. John Dickenson, junior. I shall have great pleasure in presenting the petition to the House of Commons, and in giving such help as may be in my power to your views. I am not sanguine that we shall easily produce any change in the Indian Government. The whole concern is one of patronage, and those who now hold the good things will not willingly give them up. The English people, too, are very slow, and very careless about everything that does not immediately affect them. They cannot be excited to any effort for India, except under the pressure of some great calamity, and when that pressure is removed they fall back into their usual state of apathy. The English Government has always too much on its hands. To keep itself in power is considered its first duty, and there is little force or leisure to do anything else. It hands over India to Sir Jno. Hobhouse, or Mr. Herries, or Sir C. Wood, or Lord Stanley, and takes no further interest in it until an insurrection is announced, or a loan in England is necessary; and the India Minister is expected never to trouble his colleagues except in the last extremity. Parliament cares about India little more than the Cabinet—and thus the interests of your vast population are left to the tender mercies of an exclusive service, whose main object of adoration is patronage. I almost despair of anything being done here, but you may rely on my honest assistance whenever there seems a chance of doing anything. I am much obliged to Mr. Norton and to others of your friends for their too kind mention of me at the meeting, the report of which you have sent me.—I am, with great respect, yours sincerely (Signed), JOHN BRIGHT.—Rochdale, Jan. 14, 1860.

"INDIAN ECONOMY."—We see that India now possesses a "Meg Dodds," in the shape of a volume published by Dr. Riddell, of the Madras army, entitled "Indian Economy." It has run through five editions. A Bombay journal says it treats of every subject in domestic economy, from the boiling of an egg to the roasting of a sirloin. The book is great on new curries and wonderful soups.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COTTON MILLS IN BOMBAY.—Two separate projects for establishing new mills have been already started by native merchants. It may be interesting to our English readers to know what undertakings of this kind are actually in existence or in progress in Bombay. We have at present two companies, the Spinning and Weaving, whose mills are regularly at work, with what success may be inferred from the fact that the shares of both companies stand at from fifty to seventy per cent. premium. Besides these mills, and irrespective of the speculations alluded to above, a small mill for 2,500 throstle spindles is now, by way of experiment, in course of construction at Ahmedabad. The machinery and steam-engine, boiler, &c., for the mill were all shipped in October last from Liverpool on board the Duke of Wellington, which was unfortunately destroyed by fire off the coast of Portugal. The orders were immediately renewed, and the whole of the machinery left Liverpool on the 15th of January on board the Lillydale. As soon as the mill has fairly begun to work, and is found likely to answer, the intention of the proprietors is to enlarge it either for spinning alone, or for spinning and weaving combined. The Oriental Spinning and Weaving Company propose to enlarge their present works by building another mill for 12,000 throstle spindles, and 1,440 mill spindles, for which they have ample power in the splendid pair of steam-engines now in use, which far surpass any previously erected in India. These engines being made on the compound principle, that is, working the steam twice over, consume much less fuel than any other engines at work at Bombay—at least 40 per cent. less, we are told, than the engines for working the mill at Broach, or any of the engines at the mills belonging to the Bombay Spinning and Weaving Company. Fuel is almost the heaviest item in the working expenses of a cotton mill in Bombay, and therefore it is of the utmost importance to procure good and efficient steam power. By the last mail in January, orders were sent home by three enterprising Parsee merchants—Dinshaw Manockjee, his brother Nusserwanjee Manockjee, who is at present chairman of the Oriental Spinning and Weaving Company, and Merwanjee Framjee—for the steam-engine and machinery for 10,000 throstle spindles. Land has been bought for a mill, and contracts have been entered into for the building; and we understand that eventually the works will be enlarged to the extent of 10,000 mule spindles, and 420 looms for weaving all the yarn. Orders for 10,000 throstles and 10,000 mill spindles for another mill are being sent home. This mill is for a private company, in which Mr. Munguldass Nuthobhoy is the principal shareholder, and it will be made large enough to contain from 28,000 to 30,000 spindles, in case an extension of operations should seem hereafter desirable. These two mills last mentioned will also be worked by steam engines on the compound principle, and they will, moreover, be provided with patent fuel economisers, which are expected to reduce the consumption of fuel at least 20 per cent.—Bombay Gazette.

HER MAJESTY'S 83RD REGIMENT.—We have much pleasure in publishing the subjoined extract from brigade order by Brigadier R. W. Honner, C.B., commanding at Nusseerabad. It is a generous acknowledgment, fully earned, of most valuable services, and is creditable alike to the regiment and the brigadier:—"Feb. 16, 1859. 1. On the occasion of the departure of the head-quarters and right wing of Her Majesty's 83rd, or County Dublin, regiment from Rajpootana field force, for the southern division, under the command of Lieut.-colonel Austen, in course of relief, the brigadier commanding feels it to be his duty to place on the public records of the force a detail of the valuable services performed by this excellent regiment in Rajpootana during the mutinies. 2. The 83rd regiment was stationed at Deesa, 237 miles from Nusseerabad, where there were no European troops, and on the first outbreak of the mutiny in May, 1857, a wing of the regiment, under the command of Lieutenant-colonel Steele, was despatched in all haste for the protection of that cantonment, which had been ravaged by the mutineers; a month afterwards a second detachment, under the command of Lieutenant-colonel Heatly, followed in the same direction; and in July two companies, commanded by Captain Reade, proceeded to Neemuch, where they participated in the defence of Neemuch Fort, which was besieged by the rebels in November, 1857, and subsequently in the affairs of Nimbaira and Jeerum, where Captain Reade was killed. 3. Consequent on these movements Nusseerabad became the head-quarters of the regiment. 4. In September, 1857, a detachment, commanded by Lieut.-colonel Heatly, proceeded to coerce the Thakoor of Awa, who had rebelled against his chief, the rajah of Joudpoor, but their services being dispensed with, they were ordered to return to camp. Another detachment, under the same officer, was subsequently engaged at the capture of that stronghold, and many guns were taken. 5. In March, 1858, the 83rd proceeded on field service with a strong force under the command of Major-general Roberts, and were engaged at the siege and capture of Kotah, on the bank of the Chumbul; this river greatly added to the strength of its formidable position, and the difficulties of the siege, but the stupendous stone walls and imposing defences of this, the strongest and most important fort in all Rajpootana and Central India, were destined speedily to succumb to British skill and prowess. Three companies, commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Heatly, occupied the palace of the Rajah, who was friendly to the English during the siege. The 83rd greatly distinguished themselves on this service, and were subsequently engaged in the pursuit of the rebels. 6. In June, 1858, the head-quarters of the regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Steele, again took the field under Major-general Roberts, and remained employed in active operations against the insurgents until the end of August, when they returned to Nusseerabad; in this interval they successfully engaged the enemy at Sanganeer on the 8th Aug., and, following them up, a second time attacked and defeated them at Kotaria on the Bunnass, on the 14th August, with great slaughter, and dispersed them in all directions. 7. In December, 1858, the head-quarters under Lieutenant-colonel Austen, and a detachment under Lieutenant-colonel Heatly, combined with other troops commanded by Lieutenant colonel J. Homes and Brigadier Honner, C.B., respectively, were employed once more in pursuit of the rebels, led by Tantia Toppe, Feroze Shah, and other chiefs, and, after having brought them to action, and defeated them at Seekur on the 21st January, 1859, and at Kooshana on the 10th February, after long and harassing marches, drove them along the borders of the Bikaner desert, through Northern Rajpootana, and Marwar, and over the Arravilla range of hills into Meywar, thus clearing the whole of that part of the country of their presence for many hundreds of miles, and, having completed their task, returned to Nusseerabad on the 1st March, 1859. About this time also, Captain Baumgartner moved with a detachment to cover Pallee and the surrounding country. 8. The above is a summary of the field service performed by the 83rd Foot in Rajpootana, during the most eventful period of British Indian history, and how performed all the superior commanders who were engaged in the same scenes can bear ample testimony: their patience, and endurance of fatigue in all marches, their good order and discipline, were ever pre-eminent, their conduct in quarters most exemplary, their courage in the field unsurpassed. 9. In bidding these stalwart soldiers farewell, the Brigadier wishes Lieutenant-colonel Austen, and all ranks, health, happiness, and prosperity in their future career."

CANDAHAREES.—We (Sind Kossid, Feb. 24) learn that during the first week of this month no less than 1,704 camels have arrived at Kurrachee from Candahar, laden with goods, and accompanied by 894 persons. What a matter for regret it is that no inducements that have yet been held out can prevail upon these sturdy hill men to take up their residence here. Their services on our public works would be invaluable, if we could once get them to make a beginning. The example of a few taking such employment here would soon encourage others to follow, and in course of time we might have our labour market stocked with a race of hardy workmen, capable of more endurance than the biggies and other classes we are now forced to engage for unskilled labour. If this could be accomplished, and we see no insuperable difficulty in the way, the high rate of wages now existing might be reduced to an equitable scale, whilst, at the same time, we should be served better as well as cheaper. We have no desire, in throwing out this hint, to see the labour market swamped by the importation of these outsiders to such a degree as would reduce the rates of pay so low that the native labourer could not be able to supply himself with the necessities of life, as has been the case in days gone by. All we want in Kurrachee is a "fair day's work for a fair day's wages," neither of which can be secured under existing circumstances. Those who have the superintendence of large public works here, whether belonging to Government or to joint-stock companies, would do well to see to this matter, and ascertain for themselves, by personal inquiry, whether it is not possible, by holding out offers of fair remuneration, to secure the services of these people, and thus engraft on our labouring population a class of workmen inured to hardships, and possessed of great physical strength.

ADEN, March 4.—On the 27th February the French screw-steamer Yemen arrived here from Massowah, &c., bringing Le Comte Roussell, Padre Sapetto, and eleven other members of the Abyssinian Mission. It appears that the Tigre was growing too hot for these gentlemen, and they have deemed it prudent to leave it for a time. They were waited on at the beginning of last month, in their place of retreat at Halai, by two chiefs of the Emperor's party, who informed them that his Highness would soon be there, and begged that they would not stir till his arrival. True politeness demanded their assent to the proposal, and they gave it; but a latent fear that they might be treated as abettors of Dejai Negoosi led them to escape by night to Massowah, to which place they had managed to send back all their baggage and the presents intended for the chief of Tigre. There they continued to keep up a constant correspondence with Dejai, who has retreated to the Sangalla country, where it is doubtful whether Theodorus, who is still in pursuit of the rebel army, will follow him. The last reported arrangement is that Dejai Negoosi is to prepare a safe asylum for the mission in the Sangalla district, where ulterior measures are to be concocted for putting more effectual aid within his reach. The Yemen left Massowah on the night of the 17th, and took another glance at the projected French settlement in Annesley Bay before coming to Aden. She is still here, but what her next movements are to be have not transpired. The French corvette La Cordelière is the only man-of-war in our harbour. The Imperator and Imperatriz have been underrunning and repairing the cable between Aden and Perim for the last week. It is to be hoped that the line from the latter place to Sonakin will not give them so much trouble. I believe that a fault exists somewhere about Jebel Teer; as that island is purely volcanic, and occasionally shows signs of being in a state of ignition, perhaps there may be too much heat for the cable in its vicinity. This is a pure conjecture, as I have been informed that Captain Pullen found no difference in the temperature of the water when taking his deep-sea soundings in that locality. Meanwhile all telegraphic communication with Suez has ceased for the present. The line to Kurrachee works admirably.—Bombay Gazette.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Feb. 28.—The London mail of the 10th January arrived here on the 26th instant, bringing out General Montauban, the Chief of the French Expeditionary Force.

From Shanghai the most important intelligence is the departure under sealed orders of H.M.'s vessels Sampson, Acteon, Algerine, and Dove. Doubtless they have gone to survey the state of matters at the mouth of the Peiho, and we have heard it whispered that they have been sent with the special intention of taking a strip of land in the Gulf of Pecheleo and the province of Shantung, for the purpose of forming a depot. This is very probable, as a depot in the Gulf will be absolutely necessary in the event of warlike operations being entered on, and we understand there is one strip so situated that a single gunboat could guard the communication with it. Kweiliang, the chief imperial commissioner, had asked permission to retire from public service, on account of failing health, but this request had been denied to him. We hear it rumoured that the Chinese have withdrawn the guns from the Taku forts, in order to strengthen with them the fortifications of Tient-sin.

Affairs in Japan remain in an unsettled state. Mr. Alcock, H.B.M.'s plenipotentiary, has again been lecturing the British community there, on account of their preference of Yokohama as a place of settlement to Kanagawa. It is said that a Japanese servant of Mr. Alcock has been murdered at Yeddo, while playing with some children; and as a Japanese forfeits his life by leaving his own country, and the man in question had been to the United States, it was thought by some that he had been made an example of by the Japanese authorities. The Japanese authorities, however, attended his funeral, and profess themselves desirous of bringing his murderers to justice.

The Hong Kong Races have passed off this year with more than usual eclat. The weather was fine—perhaps a little too hot; the heats were all well sustained; and Stockham, a horse new to Hong Kong, belonging to Dent & Co., carried off the chief honours. Some reports have been published of Canton mandarins having engaged Chinese to burn houses in this colony, but they have not the slightest foundation, and have been already contradicted by those who unthinkingly put them in circulation.

The census of Hong Kong, taken at the close of 1859, gives only 1,034 European and American inhabitants, against 1,109 the preceding year; but we are not satisfied that complete returns have been made, or that there actually has been any decrease of this portion of the population. A great many persons, however, went home last year, others returned to Canton, and the superintendency of trade was removed to Shanghai. The Chinese population continues steadily to increase in numbers, respectability, and wealth, there being now about 85,000 of them upon the island.

The case of Tam Achoy and Captain Baker, who recently made a raid on a Chinese village, has resulted in a compromise. Certain members of the Government were mixed up in the affair, and Mr. Adams, the acting chief justice, entered into an arrangement to the effect that, if the prisoners pleaded guilty no sentence would be passed upon them, and so the matter was closed up. They pleaded guilty, and the Court bound them over for judgment should they again engage in a similar undertaking. It appeared on the trial that they had received encouragement from some officers of Government in the course they had pursued, and they alleged that they had been requested to act by some local mandarin.

The collision at Swatow between the barque Chin Chin and the Custom-house boat is being investigated before the magistrate's court in this colony, and will probably be referred to the decision of the Supreme Court. The case consists of a charge of murder brought against the captain of the Chin Chin; and there is all likelihood that it may open up several difficult questions as to the present anomalous position of Europeans on the coast of China.—Overland China Mail.

Durbar at Lahore.

Foreign Dept., Camp Lahore, Feb. 15.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India is pleased to confer the title of "Rae Bahador" on Dewan Sirdar Sing, jagdeardar of Logasse, and on Rajdhar Rudra Sing, jagdeardar of Gowrihar, in Bundelcund, for his loyal services to the Government during the rebellion.

H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India is pleased to confer the title of "Rai Bahador" on Dhurum Narain Pundit, meer moonshes of the Central India agency, for his loyal services to the Government during the rebellion.

Feb. 16.—H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a durbar at Lahore on the 14th inst., for the reception of the Rajah of Kuppoothulla and the sirdars and principal residents of the Punjab.

The Rajah of Kuppoothulla, who had been previously received by H.E. in camp, at Phugwarra, on Jan. 31, with the honours due to his rank, had a private audience of H.E., accompanied by his nearest relatives and principal officers, and received on arrival and departure a salute of eleven guns.

The Rajah of Furreedkote, accompanied by his son, had also a private audience of the Viceroy.

Afterwards, the above-mentioned Rajahs, and the other native chiefs and gentlemen, together with the principal civil and military officers of the station, having been assembled in general durbar, the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by H.E. the C. in C., and by the Hon. the Lieut. gov. of the Punjab, entered and took his seat under a royal salute.

Each native chief and gentleman present having been introduced to the Viceroy and Governor-general, and the customary tribute and offerings having been presented and accepted, his excellency addressed the assembled chiefs in the following words :—

"Sirdars of the Punjab,—I have long wished to visit your country and be amongst you.

"I need not tell you that this wish has been greatly strengthened by recent events, and by the recollection of the services which you and your fellow-countrymen have lately rendered to the British Government.

"In other parts of India I have received many distinguished chiefs of ancient lineage and large influence, who have proved themselves faithful feudatories of the Crown, and many of lower degree, who have been dutiful subjects in the midst of great discouragements and dangers. But in the Punjab I find a whole nation of brave and loyal men.

"In the name of the Queen I thank you for your fidelity and courage and true service.

"Sirdars,—I have seen with pleasure the signs of prosperity with which the Punjab abounds; cultivation extended; commerce increasing; life and property secure; the people orderly and contented.

"I know that you are not insensible of the value of these benefits to your country, and I am about to call upon you to take your part in confirming and extending them. It is not in times of war and trouble only that the Government of the Queen claims your services; and some among you will shortly be invited to assume the duties which belong to the hereditary chiefs and landholders of a loyal people in times of peace.

"For this purpose certain powers in magisterial and revenue matters will be conferred upon a limited number of you. The Lieutenant-governor will determine to whom they can be most usefully entrusted, and will explain to you their scope and purpose. In the exercise of them, your best guidance will be the wise and friendly advice which on this and on all occasions you will never fail to receive from Sir Robert Montgomery.

"But remember that those who receive these powers will receive them to be used, not carelessly or for private purposes of their own, but earnestly for the public good, and especially for the expediting of justice, and the maintenance of order among those around them.

"Sirdars,—I look forward with confidence to the proof, which by a right use of these powers you will give to India and to England that the chiefs of the Punjab are not more conspicuous for their fidelity and bravery in danger, than for their intelligence, sense of justice, and respect for the law, when quiet and prosperity are undisturbed."

Suitable khillats were bestowed on all according to their rank, and after the concluding ceremonies, the Viceroy and Governor-general left his seat under a royal salute. The Rajah of Kuppoothulla was then conducted from the tent and the durbar broke up.

This day the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by the Sec. to the Government of India and by the officers of H.E.'s personal staff, paid a return visit to the Rajah of Kuppoothulla, at his encampment.

H.E. was met by the rajah himself, and by the relatives and principal ministers of his highness, in accordance with established customs, and received, both on arrival and departure, a royal salute.

The usual offerings were presented and accepted, and the concluding ceremonies having been observed H.E. retired.

By order of H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India.

CECIL BRADON,
 Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen.

Advances of Pay.

Fort William, Feb. 4.—No. 138.—Advances of pay proper to the extent of three months are authorised to be issued to officers of H.M.'s forces on their quitting India to join regiments or battalions to which they may be posted at home or elsewhere.

Such advances to be noted on the last pay certificates furnished to officers.

The Lieutenant Governor's Tour.

Feb. 21.—The following further notice of the Lieutenant Governor's progress during his present tour is published in continuation of the Notification dated Dec. 23 last, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 24th idem :—

The Lieutenant Governor will leave the following stations on the dates here mentioned :—Tirhoot, Feb. 28; Patna, March 1.

1st Sikh Irregular Cavalry for China.

Camp Lahore, Feb. 11.—With reference to the G.O. of the 29th ultimo, the 1st regt. of Sikh irreg. cav., commanded by Major Probyn, C.B., consisting of 585 sabres of all ranks, having individually volunteered for service in China, H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to determine that this corps shall proceed to China on its present footing, instead of being formed of the same strength and on the same scale as Fane's horse, as directed in the G.O. above cited.

The corps will consist of six (6) troops, as at present.

An interp. and qmr. will be attached to the regt., and 12 officers doing du., while on foreign service.

Also twelve (12) farriers and six (6) lascars.

The pay of the Eur. officers will be the same as that authorised for the officers of Fane's horse.

H.E. the C. in C. is requested to issue such subsidiary orders relative to this regiment as may be necessary.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. Gen.,

Secy. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen.

Inspection of Arms.

Adj. gen.'s office, Simla, Feb. 13.—In accordance with the instructions contained in G. O., Horse Guards, Feb. 24, 1859, an annual inspection of the arms in possession of H.M.'s regiments in the East Indies will be made, and the proceedings forwarded to the adjutant general H.M.'s forces, for submission to the C. in C.

The inspection will be made by corps immediately after the completion of the course of musketry instruction in each year.

Travelling Allowances.

Financial Department, Fort William, Feb. 10.—The following resolution is published for general information:—

Read an extract from the proceedings of the Govt. of India in the foreign dept., No. 293, dated 27th ult., suggesting that a rule may be enacted requiring the countersignature of a superior officer upon bills for travelling allowances.

Resolution.—The Hon. the Pres. in Council is pleased to resolve that the following rule be passed and promulgated for general information:—

Every collector, deputy commissioner, assistant, extra assistant, or other subordinate officer in civil employ, who may, under existing rules, be entitled to travelling allowances while engaged on duty in the interior of the district, shall obtain the countersignature of the commissioner of the division, or of the resident agent, or other officer under whose superintendence the district to which the said officer is attached may be placed, to his bill for such allowance, previously to submitting it to the civil auditor for audit.

Want of Respect to Commanding Officers.

Public Works Department, General Establishments, Head Quarters, Camp Jullunder, Feb. 1.—Several instances having lately been brought to the notice of H. E. the Governor-general, in which officers of this department have been charged with want of respect to commanding officers, or have otherwise come into collision with the military authorities, H. E. desires to call the attention both of the officers of the department and of the local governments under which they serve, to the regulations affecting the relations between officers of the department and commanding officers, and to the necessity for their strict observance.

These relations are indeed of a somewhat delicate kind, requiring tact and good sense on both sides, as must always be the case where two departments under different authority are constantly in contact.

But every officer of the department, whether civil or military, should understand that he can do nothing more pernicious to the service than when, by any act of his, he gives just cause of offence to an officer in military command. He is bound by the regulations alluded to above, "to comply with the requisitions, and to act in conformity with the wishes of commanding officers whenever he can do so without infringing departmental rules, and he is at all times to treat commanding officers with becoming respect."

If he receives orders which do infringe departmental rules, or which, without infringing any specific rule, do unquestionably trench on his efficiency for the discharge of his general duties, he should first try the effect of personal explanation, which in nine cases out of ten would remove difficulty. If this fail, he should refer through his departmental superiors to the government under which he serves, whilst carefully abstaining meanwhile from giving offence, and above all from writing disputative letters to the military authorities.

The local governments, whilst giving to their officers, in cases where these have acted in conformity with the regulations, and with the temperate spirit thus enjoined, that support which in such circumstances justice and policy alike demand, will not fail, H.E. expects, to deal promptly and efficaciously with officers who, by the neglect of these orders and admonitions, obstruct the public service, and bring, so far as in them lies, a bad name on the department to which they belong.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. C. C. WILLOUGHBY, 3rd BATT. ROYAL RIFLES.

At a general court martial holden at Bangalore, on Monday, Jan. 23, 1860, Lieut. Charles Christopher Willoughby, of the 3rd batt. Royal Rifles, placed in arrest by order of Maj. H. F. Kennedy, comg. the same regiment, was arraigned upon the following charge:—

Charge.—"For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, in the billiard room of the mess house of the 3rd batt. 60th Royal Rifles, at Jackatallah, on Nov. 14, 1859, struck with his open hand Asst. surg. Seth Sam, of the same regt."

The above being in breach of the articles of war.
(Signed) H. F. KENNEDY, Maj.
Comg. 3rd batt. 60th Royal Rifles.
Jackatallah, Wednesday, Dec. 28, 1859.

Upon which charge the Court came to the following decision:—

Finding on the charge—Guilty.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner Lieut. C. C. Willoughby to be severely reprimanded, in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

"The Court begs most respectfully to record, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that it has been induced to award a lenient sentence, in consideration of the deep contrition expressed by the prisoner for the offence committed by him in an ungarded moment.

Approved and confirmed.

Madras, Jan. 21, 1860.

Lieut. Willoughby.—I have concurred in the merciful view the Court has taken of your unofficial conduct, under the persuasion that the contrition you have expressed arises from a just and deep sense of your offence.

"The publication in Orders of your court martial will, I trust, be felt by you as a sufficiently severe reprimand.

(Signed) PATRICK GRANT, Lieut. Gen.
Madras, Jan. 28, 1860.

Lieut. C. C. Willoughby is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty."

The Victoria Cross.

Bombay, March 10.—The C. in C. has much satisfaction in making known to the army that he has received the commands of her most gracious Majesty for the presentation of the Victoria Cross to Lieut. A. S. Cameron, H.M.'s 72nd (The Duke of Albany's Own) Highlanders, and Drummer T. Flinn, of H.M.'s 64th (the 2nd Staffordshire) regt. of foot, in commemoration of acts of bravery recorded against their names in the London Gazette of Nov. 11 and April 12, 1859, respectively, as follows:—

72nd Regt.—Lieut. A. S. Cameron: date of act of bravery March 30, 1858. For conspicuous bravery on March 30, 1858, at Kotah, in having headed a small party of men, and attacked a body of armed fanatic rebels, strongly posted in a loop-holed house, within a narrow entrance; Lieut. Cameron stormed the house, and killed three rebels in single combat. He was severely wounded, having lost half of one hand by a stroke from a tulwar.

64th Regt.—Drummer T. Flinn: date of act of bravery, Nov. 28, 1857. For conspicuous gallantry, in the charge on the enemy's guns, on Nov. 28, 1857, when, being himself wounded, he engaged in a hand to hand encounter with two of the rebel artillerymen.

As the absence from England of this officer and drummer renders it impossible for them to receive this mark of H.M.'s favour at her own hands, the Queen has been pleased to command that the decoration be bestowed on them in India in the manner best adapted to evince H.M.'s sense of the noble daring displayed by them before the enemy, and to testify her wish that a distinction, in which the officer and private soldier may equally share, may be highly prized and eagerly sought after by all, of whatever rank or degree, in H.M.'s naval and military services.

Lieut. general Sir H. Somerset is unable personally to carry out her Majesty's commands, as the regiments to which the recipients belong are absent from the Presidency, and has therefore been pleased to depute to Brigadier Honner, C.B., commanding Malwa division, and Brigadier General Hale, commanding the Scinde division, the duty of presenting the crosses to the aforesaid officer and drummer, in the most marked and public manner, omitting nothing which may tend to redound to their honour, and enhance the value of this decoration.

On the completion of this duty the brigadiers will be good enough to report the measures adopted to army head quarters, in view to H.E. representing the manner in which he has been able to give effect to the commands of her most gracious Majesty.

THE VALLEY OF MUNNIPORE.

THE higher the degree of civilisation attained by a nation the more interesting does it become to study the manners and mode of thought of a primitive people slowly and obscurely groping its way towards a consistent polity and a social system. From this point of view it is difficult to speak too highly of the valuable report on the Valley of Munnipore and the adjacent Hill Tribes submitted to the Indian Government by Major W. McCulloch, Political Agent at Munnipore. From this able and elaborate paper we shall now proceed, without further preamble, to select such details as are likely to possess the greatest attraction for general readers.

The Valley of Munnipore is situated between the British provinces of Assam and Cachar, and the North-Western part of Burmah. Three wintry torrents flow through the vale,—the Kongba, the Eeril, and the Thobal; but in the dry season they contain scarce water enough to float the lightest boats. Although the valley lies 2,500 feet above the level of the sea the temperature is higher than might be expected, owing to the reflection from the lofty mountains on either side. During the three months of December, January, and February hoar frosts are frequent, and vegetation suffers in consequence. "The leaves of the plantain wither and become brown as if scorched with fire." Thunderstorms are very rare, but sheet-lightning and meteoric phenomena are common in the mild autumnal months. Until a recent date the Munniporees are described as in the enjoyment of excellent health, but since intercourse with the west has increased, various diseases have been introduced, or become more virulent. There is little forest land, but considerable tracts of dense grass and reed jungle. The soil, however, is generally fertile, and capable of producing a great variety of crops, though the cultivation is chiefly confined to a long-grained species of rice. "Tobacco and sugar-cane grow luxuriantly," but the fruits are generally sour, with the exception of pine-apple, mango, and guava, and are eaten with salt and red pepper.

It is needless to devote either space or time to the consideration of the origin of the Munniporees. If tradition be relied upon, the valley was in the earliest times peopled by tribes coming from different directions, but who were gradually subdued by the Meithei, and received the name of their conquerors. The latter subsequently professed Hindooism, though they still adhere in many respects to their ancient ceremonies, and propitiate upwards of three hundred deities "by appropriate sacrifices of things abhorrent to real Hindoos." They retain also their Maibees, or priestesses, to whom they have recourse in times of sickness or adversity. The Raja venerates a god peculiar to the royal family, in the form of a small snake, which is coaxed on to a cushion by the priestess and gratified by certain ceremonies. When this serpentine deity is displeased it assumes a terrible magnitude. Other families have likewise their own household gods, whom at stated periods they worship or "make happy."

"This worship consists in a number of married women and unmarried girls led by priestesses, accompanied by a party of men and boys all in dresses of a former time, dancing and singing, and performing various evolutions in the holy presence. The women carry in their hands fruits, &c., part of which is presented to the deity and part scrambled for by the girls. In some instances, the god is represented by an image, but often there is no such representation, and a place is merely prepared in which he is supposed to be during the worship. The presence of the god, however, in either way impresses the worshippers with no awe; on the contrary, it appears to be a cause of fun and jollity."

Up to the age of ten or twelve, children are permitted to partake of any and every sort of food, without reference to its being clean or unclean according to Hindoo notions, and elderly people openly renounce all Hindoo observances. Widows, too, are at liberty to marry a second time, and eat and dress as they please. Polygamy is common, but not early marriages, and suttee is unknown. In short, "Hindooism with the Munniporees is but a fashion," not a conviction.

The history of Munnipore is nothing more than a barren record of Burmese invasions and barbarous civil wars, but in 1823 the Raja sought and obtained the protection of the British Government. In consequence, however, of the frequent inroads of the Burmese the larger portion of the inhabitants was carried away into captivity, or driven into exile, so that the present population, probably, does not exceed 50,000 souls, divided into various classes. The highest is the Meithei, which is subdivided into four parts, or "Punnahs," each Punnah performing "laloop," or service to the State for ten days in rotation. The family of the "Peepa," or head of each tribe, is exempt from every duty but that of personal attendance on the Raja. The other families have each their own functions to perform, for which they receive no remuneration—the Brahmins even having "their laloop, during which they cook for the Raja and their idol Govindjee." Certain officers however, derive a small emolument from the pecuniary compositions of those who prefer the payment of money to any positive service. Another family class attends to the Raja's hooka, spreads the cloth he sits upon, and performs many other domestic offices. A third is occupied with gardening, the hewing of stones, and the manufacture of stone vessels, while a fourth provides and prepares rice and grain for the use of the Raja's household. There is a fifth class yet lower in the scale than the preceding, who are not recognised as at all belonging to the Meithei, but are called by the distinctive name of Loes. This tribe pays tribute, and is actually the most useful one in the State, for it comprises "the silk manufacturers, the smelters of iron, the distillers of spirits, the makers of earthen vessels for containing water, or for cooking in, the cutters of posts, and beams, and canoes, manufacturers of salt, fishers, cutters of grass for the Raja's ponies, the payers of tribute in 'Sel,' the coin of the country," &c., &c. In addition to these classes there is also a hybrid Mussulman population, who employ themselves as sepoy, gardeners, turners, and potters, and are said to be the most industrious inhabitants of the valley. Not so much so, indeed, as the women, for the Munniporees are not gallant. Those who have lands usually dwell in the capital, and are maintained by the labour of their wives.

"There is a market daily, attended only by women. Every woman carries a basket, containing something not immediately required for the consumption of her household; this she barter for something, immediately wanted, or she sells it, and purchases what she wants with the proceeds. After market she returns, and prepares the dinner for the family. This done, she will prepare her cotton for spinning the thread with which she will afterwards make cloth for her husband, herself, and family. Though thus useful and laborious, women are but indifferently treated. Considering this, the many temptations they are exposed to, and the unbounded opportunities they have for any bad end, I must say they appear to me to be more virtuous than under the circumstances would have been expected. . . . A man can put away his wife without any fault on her part, and if a person of influence he may do so without its being noticed. The rule, however, is, that if a man puts away his wife without any fault on her part, she takes possession of all his property, except a drinking vessel and the cloth round his loins. A man and wife may separate by mutual consent, and a wife may quit her husband on giving the value of a slave. Women are really the slaves of their husbands; they are sold in satisfaction of their debts, and I have heard of men pawning their wives for money to purchase some office, or even a pony. There is a separate court for the judgment of matters between man and wife."

Strictly speaking, there is no such thing as law in Munnipore. Treason is the highest form of crime, and next to it murder, though money will generally avert capital punishment. A Brahmin murderer is simply expelled from the country, and one of the female sex is exposed in the Bazaar with her head shaved. In all cases, however, the will of the Raja is paramount to every other consideration.

The houses of rich and poor are alike in form, but in those of the former the posts and beams are made of wood instead of bamboo. The walls are constructed of reeds plastered with earth and cow dung, and the roofs are thatched with grass. No dwelling-house is complete without a verandah facing the east, in which the family live and carry on their different pursuits during the day, except cooking. Many superstitious ceremonies are connected with housebuilding.

"First, the house must be constructed on a lucky day, and that day having been fixed by the astrologer, on it (it makes no difference whether the other materials are ready or not) the first post is erected. The post is bound towards the top with a band of cloth, over which is tied a wreath of leaves and flowers. Milk, juice of the sugar-cane, and ghee are poured upon the lower extremity, and into the hole in the ground in which it is to be fixed are put a little gold and silver. The number of bamboos forming the body of the frame for the thatch must not be equal on the north and south sides. If they were so, misfortune, they consider, would overtake the family."

Taking into account the ceremonies observed among ourselves at the laying of the first stone, we have little reason to smile at the superstitious practices of a less civilised people, nor can we fairly find fault with them for regarding odd numbers in a different light from ourselves—possibly, under the same circumstances, they would be found to agree with "bold Rory O'More."

"The men dress in the same way as they do in Hindostan; but as a people the Munniporees far surpass the people to the west in the cleanliness of their garments. The dress of the women is quite different from that worn by the women to the west. It consists of a striped cotton or silk cloth passed round the body under the armpits and over the breast, a jacket, and a sheet. Unless permitted by the Raja, various articles of dress and ornament cannot be worn, and permission to wear any of these articles is much coveted. Persons of a high rank are permitted to have carried before them a red woollen cloth; of a less rank, a green woollen cloth; and of a less still, a cloth of cotton manufacture. These they use as rugs to sit upon, and it is only for such use they are prized; as articles of dress they may be used by any who can afford to buy them. Amongst the men the forepart of the head is shaved. In the remaining part the hair is preserved in its natural state. It is combed backwards, and is sometimes coiled up in the folds of their head-dresses, but generally tied up in a knot behind. Married women, and some who are not married, comb their hair back and tie it up behind. Young women do not tie it up behind. In front they comb it straight, cutting it in a circle from ear to ear across the forehead and a little above the eyebrows. Over the ears it is allowed to grow so as to cover them. Here it is again cut the breadth of the ear, and thence in the hinder part is allowed to grow naturally. Perfectly straight hair is considered beautiful; curly locks are laughed at. The water in which rice has been steeped before cooking is used as a wash for the hair. It gives a glossy appearance, but a most disagreeable smell to the hair."

The characteristic pastime of the Munniporees is the game of hockey on horseback. Foot races are also much in vogue, and boat racing scarcely less so, though success depends rather on skill in fouling than in fair rowing. Indoor amusements are more varied, and even more refined, than is customary with barbarous tribes. Conundrums, far-fetched and implying a somewhat broad humour, exercise the ingenuity of young and old. Music, song, and recitative are likewise an inseparable accompaniment of every festival, but the favourite amusement of all is Kangsanaba, thus described by Major McCulloch:—

"It is played only in the spring, the players being generally young women and girls, with usually a sprinkling of men on each side. The game seems to cause great excitement, and there is great emulation between the sides. The kang is the seed of a creeper; it is nearly circular, about an inch and a-half in diameter, and about three-quarters of an inch thick. This is placed on the ground upright, at one time with its broadside towards the party by whom it is to be struck, at another edgewise. When the kang is placed with its broadside to the party, it is to be pitched at with an ivory disk; when it is placed edgewise, it is to be struck by the disk propelled on its flat side along the surface of the ground by the force of the middle finger of the right hand acting off the forefinger of the left. A good player can propel the disk in this way with great force and precision. The side having most hits wins. The whole is closed by a feast at the expense of the losers."

The benefits of combination are not unknown to the Munniporees. Each district is divided into neighbourhoods, and these again into "singloops" or "wood-clubs." In case of illness the elders of a neighbourhood tell off a certain number of persons to tend the patient, and on his demise the wood-club to which he belongs provides the fuel for his funeral pyre. In one respect the people of this valley too closely resemble the labouring classes in our own country. "Under the operation of the laloop a good artificer works along with a bad one, and receives no more thanks for his work than if it was as bad as that of his less skilful associate." The consequence is precisely what might be expected under such circumstances—"all are ever at the rudiments, and no progress is made."

In a future number we propose to make a few extracts in a similar manner from Major McCulloch's Report on the adjacent mountainous tribes. In the mean time we tender our thanks to that gallant officer for the very interesting paper he has drawn up on the customs and condition of the people among whom his lot has been cast.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN INDIA.

The following memorial was presented on Wednesday, the 4th, to Sir Charles Wood by the Cotton Supply Association:—

"That your memorialists are of opinion that, looking to the extensive area embraced by British India, and the enormous extent of works of public utility required to place that territory in even a proper state, in order that its resources may be fairly developed, it is manifestly impossible for the Government, by its own efforts, to effect much in that direction, while it is equally clear that the surplus capital and free enterprise of England, if made available, will with rapidity supply all those of such works as do not of necessity and exclusively belong to the operations of Government.

"That, irrespective of the stupendous benefits which a speedy and extensive construction of works of the nature referred to in various parts of India would produce to the cotton trade, and therefore to the general community of this country, it is difficult to overrate the numerous civilising influences and solid advantages which would thereby necessarily flow to the native population, and especially when accompanied by the introduction there of a large body of English civil engineers and others, of skill and education, such as would be employed by private companies.

"That it is therefore a matter of the most vital and pressing importance to the best interests of both India and England that every possible facility should be offered to those who are willing to take upon themselves the onerous task of raising capital in this country, and to apply it to purposes so pre-eminently important as those before adverted to, while, by the adoption of a liberal policy in such cases, the Government will not only relieve itself of much anxiety and trouble, but be a considerable financial gainer, and at the same time secure the affection and loyalty of its subjects.

"That your memorialists have learnt with much satisfaction that an influential joint-stock company, established in London under the name of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, have submitted to you a proposal to construct extensive works of irrigation, drainage, and navigation in Orissa, and to connect that territory with the port of Calcutta, requiring from Government no other assistance than the mere supply of all land requisite for such works. Your memorialists are assured that a company already and favourably known to the English public must necessarily possess advantages for raising capital which could not appertain to a newly-organised association, and are therefore more likely to achieve that success which is all-important in a pioneer enterprise intended to open up the way for a more general and greatly extended application of the free skill, science, and capital of Britain to the regeneration of India.

"Your memorialists therefore most respectfully pray,

"1. That the Right Hon. her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council will afford to the subject-matter of this memorial immediate and serious consideration, with a view to the adoption of prompt and energetic measures for the most complete and rapid provision of works of irrigation and means of cheap transit in India, the want whereof at present prevents that country from producing an unlimited supply of cotton to the manufacturers of Great Britain, and from relieving the latter from an uncertain and perilous dependence upon the slave States of America.

"2. That, as it is utterly impossible for Government to construct throughout British India more than a small portion of the works in question, although they are essentially necessary to devolve her agricultural and other resources, and to make her prosperous and contented, and able to bestow upon the people of this country those high commercial benefits they have the right to expect from her direct union with England; and as it is equally clear that the surplus private capital, skill, and energy of Great Britain are capable, if properly applied, of producing such works with rapidity and advantage, every possible facility and encouragement may be given by Government to all joint-stock companies formed in England who may seek to undertake the construction of well-selected, practicable, and useful projects of irrigation and navigation, &c., in British India; and

"3. That the proposal now submitted by the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company for the construction of works of irrigation, &c., in the districts of Orissa, without a Governmental guarantee, may receive the most favourable consideration, and every proper encouragement and support be given to enable that company to enter upon the contemplated undertaking with the least possible delay, and in a satisfactory manner, in order that others may, by their success, be induced to undertake other works of a like description by means of capital raised in the same way.

"And your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

"Signed at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Cotton Supply Association, held in Manchester, the 3rd of April, 1860.

"JOHN CHEETHAM, Chairman,
"G. R. HAYWOOD, Secretary."

THE INDIAN SIMOOM.

At the last meeting of the Meteorological Society a paper was read on dust-storms and dust-columns, and the Simoom, or poisonous winds of India, by H. Cook, M.D. The author remarked that there are certain days in which, however hard and violently the wind may blow, little or no dust accompanies it, whilst at other times every little puff of air or current of wind raises up and carries with it clouds of dust, and at these times the individual particles of sand appear to be in such an electrified condition that they are even ready to repel each other, and are consequently disturbed from their position and carried up into the air with the slightest current. To so great an extent does this sometimes exist, that the atmosphere is positively filled with dust, and when accompanied by a strong wind nothing is visible at a few yards, and the sun at noon-day is obscured. This condition of the atmosphere is evidently accumulative, it increases by degrees until the climax is reached, when, after a certain time, usually about twenty-four hours, the atmosphere is cleared and equanimity restored. Dust-columns appear under a similar condition of electrical disturbance or intensity. On calm quiet days, when hardly a breath of air is stirring, and the sun pours down his heating rays with full force, little circular eddies are seen to arise in the atmosphere near the surface of the ground. These increase in force and diameter, until a column is formed of great height and diameter, which usually remains stationary for some time, and then sweeps away across the country at great speed, and ultimately, losing the velocity of its circular movement, dissolves and disappears. The author had seen in the valley of Mingochoy, which is only a few miles across, and surrounded by high hills, on a day when not a breath of air stirred, twenty of these columns. These seldom changed their places, or but slowly moved across the level tract, and they never interfered with each other. The author then spoke of the Simoom, that deadly wind, which occasionally visits the deserts of Cutchee and Upper Scinde, which is sudden and singularly fatal in its occurrence, invisible, intangible, and mysterious. Its nature, alike unknown (as far as the author is aware) to the wild, untutored inhabitant of the country which it frequents, as to the European man of science, its effects only are visible—its presence made manifest in the sudden extinction of life, whether of animal or vegetable, over which its influence has extended. The author gives the results of his information respecting the Simoom as follows:—1. It is sudden in its attack. 2. It is sometimes preceded by a cold current of air. 3. It occurs in the hot months (usually June and July). 4. It takes place by night as well as by day. 5. Its course it straight and defined. 6. Its passage leaves a narrow, "knife-like" track. 7. It burns up or destroys the vitality of animal and vegetable existence in its path. 8. It is attended by a well-marked sulphurous odour. 9. It is described as being like the blast of a furnace, and the current of air in which it passes is evidently greatly heated. 10. It is not accompanied by dust, thunder, and lightning. And concludes his paper by saying—if it, then, be neither a phase of sunstroke, lightning, malaria, nor miasmata in a concentrated form, what is it; or to what is it to be referred?

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, an Oriental,
Botanical, Preparation for Improving and Beautifying the Complexion and Skin. It is distinguished for its extremely bland, purifying, and soothing effects on the skin; while, by its action on the pores and minute secretory vessels, it promotes a healthy tone, allays every tendency to inflammation, and thus effectually dissipates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, the softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, its capability of soothing irritation, and removing cutaneous defect, render it indispensable to every toilet.

It obviates all the effects of Climate on the Skin, whether with reference to cold and inclemency, or intense solar heat.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS
is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 6d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

PLASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

SURPRISING REMEDIES FOR BAD LEGS AND ALL KINDS OF WOUNDS.—The surprising sale of these invaluable medicines in every part of the civilised world is a most convincing proof of their efficacy in the cure of diseases, for it is only by their marvelous success as curatives that they could ever have obtained their popularity. Old sores and all diseases of the skin are quickly cured by these medicines. Thousands of persons suffering from dreadful maladies have been cured by their use after every other means had failed. There is no case, however obstinate, or of however long standing, that should be regarded as hopeless if the patient is willing to give a fair trial to Holloway's Ointment and Pills.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBERY

sold Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of FEVER, RHEUMATISM, VIOLENT COLIC, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name —F. NEWBERY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, London.

PULVERMACH'S GALVANIC ANTIRHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Doloré, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACH and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Seasickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient in staid unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BACLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD FRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.
At Home from Eleven till Five.

TO SUFFERERS with CORNS and

RUPTURES.—Ask for a Box of YOUNG'S CORN and RUPTURE PLASTERS, which will eradicate corns or bunions in a very short time. Be careful that you have YOUNG'S—the name is printed on the label; all others are imitations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box, or by post for thirteen postage stamps. Address H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Aldersgate-street, E.C. May be had at most chemists throughout the world. Agents wanted abroad. N.B.—A Liberal Allowance to Wholesale Dealers.

FIRE! THIEVES! FIRE!—Second-hand FIRE-PROOF SAFES, the most extensive assortment, by all the eminent makers, at HALF the PRICE of New, at C. H. GRIFFITHS, 33, Old Change, St. Paul's, E.C.—WANTED, SECOND-HAND SAFES by the following eminent makers—Milner and Son, Chubb, or Marr and Son. Apply to the above address.

BONUS YEAR. NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY ESTABLISHED 1836.

Capital, £1,259,760.

Accumulated Premium Fund, upwards of £350,000.

Office in London: 1, MOORGATE-STREET.

The next investigation, for the purpose of declaring a Bonus to the Policyholders, will take place on 31st January, 1861, and all Policies in the Participating Class, effected prior to that date, will share in the profits then to be divided.

The whole of the Profits of this branch are divisible, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, amongst the insured.

The last Bonus declared by the Company was at the rate of £1. 7s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the amount insured, a return which, when its very moderate scale of premiums is considered, has rarely been exceeded by any other Office.

As an illustration of the proportion which the additions already made to Policies bear to the sums paid by the assured in the shape of Premiums, it will be sufficient to state that a Policy for £1,000 taken out in 1836, on a life then aged 25, and upon which £503 have been received by the Office, has been increased by successive Bonus additions to the sum of £1,351. 1s. 10d., the increase being equal to SEVENTY PER CENT. on the Premiums paid by the assured.

All Policies are guaranteed by a subscribed Capital of upwards of One Million Sterling, an accumulated and invested Premium Fund of over £350,000, and the unlimited responsibility of upwards of Seven Hundred Shareholders.

A. P. FLETCHER, Secretary.

PERSONS proceeding to INDIA can effect ASSURANCES on favourable terms with the COLONIAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

LOANS given to Civil or Military Officers proceeding to India on her Majesty's Service.

Agents at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, and in all the British Colonies, where premiums can be paid and claims settled.

The Colonial was established in 1846, and its present income is upwards of £100,000 per annum.

Subscribed Capital, £1,000,000 sterling.

Constituted by Act of Parliament.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A very entertaining volume, evincing great research. It is surprising what a fund of incidents and facts the author has brought together, and placed before us in an attractive form. The work is just the one suited to a soldier, inasmuch as it may be taken up to while away an hour, and laid down at any moment, without losing its thread, or weakening its impressions."—United Service Magazine.

"Second to none of its class in merit, 'Curiosities of War' teems with authentic anecdotes of the British Army. We recommend our readers to buy the book, the perusal of which will endear yet more the British Army to every Englishman. The author has done both the service and the public a favour, by the publication of 'The Curiosities of War.'—Standard.

"Noble deeds, loyalty, and heroism, in every phase of military life, are chronicled with graphic skill, and the book will doubtless give an impetus to the spirit of the day."—Sunday Times.

"One of the most interesting chapters is 'Women in Battle.' The book abounds with interesting scraps and anecdotes; will be of great value to the military student."—Court Circular.

"Mr. Carter has a natural taste for accumulating strange or curious stories, incidents, and traits. His book will be amusing and instructive to all."—Chatham News.

"Will fully repay those who are daily becoming more and more interested in the public feeling that it is necessary to be fully prepared against any emergency that may arise against the liberties of the country."—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE intelligence received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of March is more than usually interesting, and contains much matter for grave reflection. A sensible proclamation by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal appears to have checked the ryots in their career of outrage and plunder. They are told that if they have entered into a contract to grow indigo they must fulfil the same; otherwise they are free to cultivate whatever they please. It may seem strange that such a notification should have been needed, but the ignorant peasantry had interpreted Mr. Eden's ill-judged perwannah, not only as a release from all engagements with the indigo-planters, but as a positive prohibition against cultivating the plant. The real object of the authorities was to protect the ryots from compulsory labour, but certainly not to interfere with legitimate undertakings entered into between employers and employed. The officious zeal, however, of young civilians inimical to "adventurers," thwarted the design of the Government, and threw whole districts into confusion and anarchy. The ultimate consequences of this agrarian movement may prove very serious, though for the moment it may be summarily suppressed.

The internal condition of India is that of the interior of a volcano previous to an eruption. The elements of disturbance are everywhere present, and everywhere active. From Central India come well-accredited rumours of plots and intrigues. In the Upper Provinces, again, it is a general article of belief among Mahomedans that in the year 1863 64 the Feringhees will be expelled from the Peninsula, and the supremacy of Islam re-established. A prophecy to this effect, ascribed to Neenamutoollah Shah, of Cashmere, has been sedulously distributed among the followers of the Arabian Prophet, and the commanding officer of a cavalry regiment states that every Mahomedan in his corps believes in its fulfilment at the proper time. Beyond our north-west frontiers considerable agitation pervades the counsellors of the aged ruler of Afghanistan. Of all the Afghans the most friendly to the British or the most sensible of their power, he is now in his 80th year, and sorely pressed by the forces of the Khan of Bokhara, commanded, it is said, by Russian officers. It is certain that the Ameer of Cabul has been compelled to send reinforcements to his sons on the Oxus, and it is asserted that he is at last disposed to lend a favourable ear to the counsels of his brothers, urging him to enter into an alliance with Russia. It is also affirmed that Russian emissaries, under the pretext of commercial projects, are busily intriguing throughout Central Asia, and doing their utmost to discredit the influence of Great Britain. Whatever of truth there may be in these statements, it is clear that the death of Dost Mahomed will be the signal for civil commotion throughout Afghanistan, and in the struggle for power each pretender will have recourse to neighbouring potentates. Persia will be only too glad of an opportunity to seize upon Herat, while the Khan of Bokhara, whether on his own motion or at the instigation of Russia, will scarcely fail to extend his territories at the expense of the divided and helpless Afghans. Under such circumstances, the only course open to the Indian Government is to stand aloof from the strife, taking care, however, to occupy the passes from the westward, and to maintain a strong European force ready for any contingency.

In the mean time, the Viceroy pursues his viceregal progress, and at Sealkote presented the Maharaja of Cashmere with a musical box and a handsome opera-glass. Had the Afghan chieftain proceeded to Peshawur, as was at one time expected, his royal highness would probably have been presented with an accordion and a box at Her Majesty's Theatre.

Lord Elphinstone is at Mahabeshwur, whither his lordship proceeded on the 19th March. The Lord Bishop of Bombay returned to the Presidency from Kurrachee on the 16th of the same month; and on the 27th, Lieut.-general Sir Henry Somerset, K.C.B., resigned the chief command of the army into the hands of Lieut.-general Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B. Sir William Mansfield was still at Bombay.

The Bombay papers give a full report of the trial of Mr. Hunt, late sergeant-major of the 14th Dragoons, and murmur at the severity of the sentence passed upon that unfortunate man. The jury having found him guilty of doing grievous bodily injury to Cornet Browne, Sir Mathew Sause sentenced him to one year's imprisonment, one week in every quarter being passed in solitary confinement. A memorial is being got up, praying for a remission of this too severe judgment.

The native city of Dacca has been devastated by a most destructive fire. Six thousand houses are said to have been burnt to the ground, and upwards of ten thousand persons deprived of their dwellings. It is also stated that eighteen lives have been lost. A subscription for the sufferers has been opened in Calcutta.

The Governor-general has confirmed the capital sentence passed on Khan Bahadoor Khan, of Bareilly; and equal justice, it is expected, will be meted out to Mummoo Khan, who has also been proved guilty of complicity in the murder of Europeans.

LATEST CALCUTTA TELEGRAMS.

INDIA OFFICE, April, 20.

The following telegrams have been this day received from Brigadier Coghlan at Aden:—

FEROZPORE, March 25.

Quiet prevails in India.

A serious fire broke out in Dacca, which destroyed half the town. Six thousand families have been reduced to destitution. Subscriptions have been commenced to relieve the sufferers.

There have been some agrarian riots among the indigo cultivators at Vererhuago (?) and the neighbourhood.

The Governor-General was at Holy (?). He will join his camp at Hoshiarpoor, via Sijpweper (?) and Moduon (?).

Funds.—Government Five per Cent. Loan at 5 to 5½ per cent. discount. Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan at par to ¼ per cent. premium.

BEADON.

In two districts of Lower Bengal much excitement has arisen connected with the cultivation of indigo; but we apprehend no disturbances which will not be promptly suppressed by military police. The magistrates' powers have been enlarged by a temporary law, and a special commission of inquiry will be issued.

The Lieutenant-general of Bengal reports that he has every reason to believe that the excitement in the indigo districts is passing off, and that he has no apprehension of serious disturbances anywhere.

THE DUM-DUM MUSEUM.

Few of our readers are perhaps aware that within an hour's drive from Government House there is to be seen one of the pleasantest and most attractive sights that India can produce. We have seen many of the most celebrated cabinets and collections of Europe, the Louvre and the Sydenham Palace included, but we never were more agreeably surprised and delighted than on our first visit to the Museum, or rather exhibition, provided for the entertainment of the soldiers at Dum-Dum. It is not that it contains works of rare excellence, masterpieces of ancient or modern art, or splendid scientific apparatus. These were unattainable, and neither needed nor suitable for the object in view—to excite the interest and gratify the intelligent curiosity of men from the ranks.

The first sight of the larger room, apart altogether from its history and associations, is sufficient to startle one out of the habitual Anglo-Indian apathy, from the number and variety of the objects with which every available foot of space is covered, the ingenuity and excellent taste with which they are grouped, and the tact displayed in selecting them. There are models (from the size of life down to the size of a doll) of many of the tribes and peoples of India, China, and Burmah, Lepchas from the Hills,—Todars from Southern India—Cingalese men and women of all grades, in their national costumes, all life-like and natural. There is a French tent scene from the Crimea (immensely popular) with Turcos, Zouaves, and infantry soldiers, in appropriate uniforms and employment. There are weapons of every oriental fashion, matchlocks from Afghanistan, wall pieces from China, shields, helmets, swords, spears, pistols, daggers, the Malay kris, the mountaineer's knife, bows and arrows, and other wicked and dangerous looking things, offensive and defensive. Nearly opposite the entrance is a large Davramvilles organ, playing 20 or 30 popular airs and pieces of music; at other tables models in wood or pith, looking like ivory, delicately carved and finished, of the Taj, and other celebrated buildings, specimens of the rarer productions of Indian skill—shawls, cloth of gold dresses, utensils, ornaments, furniture.

Those that like them may look at a large collection of stereoscopic pictures; may examine models of telegraphs, locomotives, and the newest improvements in machinery, including a bit of the celebrated Atlantic cable.

There are stuffed beasts, too, and birds and snakes, the saw of the saw fish, the horn of the sword fish, with a plank from a ship which it had pierced through; pictures, too; in short, an assemblage of curiosities that would fill a respectable catalogue, and not one (that we saw) out of place or uninteresting. They have been bought, borrowed, begged, gathered, everything but stolen, from every part of Bengal; and (what is scarcely credible) in a few months, and by the energy of one man. This is not all that Mr. Norman has done for the soldiers. Himself and a few other zealous friends are always present when the Museum is open, ready to explain in familiar language, and to tell them about all they see. He has provided also during the cold weather a series of lectures on popular subjects, of a more elaborate character, which have drawn large audiences, although the musical evenings are decidedly the most attractive.

After all, the most surprising feature of this remarkable movement is its unequivocal success. When the novelty is over, when two months have passed away, there are seldom less than 250 men present at every opening of the museum; and during these months not the slightest injury has been done, not a single article has been missing. Showing that they fully appreciate and understand the privileges they enjoy; showing, too, what can be made of the leisure hours of one of the busiest and most conscientious men in India. Leave the soldier idle, you drive him to drunkenness; appeal to his higher nature, and nowhere will you find more promising or more attentive listeners.—Friend of India.

THE CURRENCY BILL.

Mr. Wilson's currency measure, though it will excite less interest than his financial scheme, is perhaps equally important. A sound currency system is at least as essential to national prosperity as an equilibrium between revenue and expenditure. Indeed, it is more so, for bankruptcy is the misfortune of a generation, rotten currency a poison affecting all the generations through which it lasts. The bankruptcy of France in 1789 produced no evils to be compared with the effects of the subsequent over issue of assignats.

Mr. Wilson commenced his speech by a clear exposition of economical principles, which, though interesting or essential in England, was scarcely necessary in India. Anglo-Indians are quite prepared to accept Mr. Wilson himself as the best authority they can reach on political economy. The fact that his reasons satisfy his own mind will do far more to content them than the reasons themselves. He rejected the proposal for a gold currency at once. All arrangements, public and private, were based upon a silver currency, and violently to change the standard would be a breach of faith. The advantages of a gold coinage were moreover greatly overrated. It was not much, if at all, more easy of remittance than silver. The difficulty of remittance consisted not in the bulk of the metal to be transported, but in the cost of the necessary precautions for its safety, which precautions varied not as the bulk but as the value of the treasure to be despatched. A double standard again was an impossibility. It would merely give every debtor the privilege of paying in the standard which might for the moment be the cheaper. The metallic currency would therefore remain as before, unaffected by his operations. Measures, however, Mr. Wilson remarked en passant, had been taken for remedying the deficiency of the copper coinage, a just and universal subject of complaint. £100,000 in copper had been struck in England, and separate copper mints would be established at Calcutta and Bombay.

The standard being unchanged, it remained to remove the marked defects by which metallic standards were impaired. The principal of these was the loss caused by the absorption of an excessive amount of treasure, and the Government had therefore resolved on issuing a state paper currency to be declared within certain limits a legal tender. This currency would be thus regulated. India would be divided into currency circles, each with a centre at some point where a large treasury was protected by European troops. In each circle would be placed a currency commissioner or superintendent of the bank of issue. All these commissioners would be responsible to a chief commissioner seated in Calcutta, and vested with the exclusive power and responsibility of preparing and issuing the State notes. These notes, the value of which would range from Rs. 5 to Rs. 1,000, would all be simple notes printed on Bank of England paper, and therefore beyond the reach of forgery. Each note would bear besides the general impression the name of the currency circle in which it was issued, and each would be convertible into silver at the central office of its own circle, and at the Presidency offices. A provision would be made—not very clearly explained—by which the notes of any circle wanted could be obtained in any other at a percentage.

To secure this new currency against the single danger of paper currencies, over-issue, the following device would be adopted. The entire currency commission would be exempted from all responsibility save to the Legislative Council. No Governor-general, however pressed, would be able to increase the circulation without a public Act.

Meanwhile the commission itself would be bound to issue notes only for the silver paid in, of which silver one-third must be retained in cash, and two-thirds in public securities. For example, taking Allahabad as a centre, the commissioner would issue notes to all paying in silver for them. Supposing the demand to reach three million of rupees, he must keep one million in cash, but might retain the remainder in five per cent. paper purchased in open market at the rate of the day. So long as these arrangements were maintained, an over-issue of notes would be impossible. All speculation as to the quantity which would be put into circulation was of course vain. Looking, however, to the enormous masses of coin known to be in circulation, the issue, if the plan succeeded, would be very great.

So, also, would be the consequent relief. All the bullion used in any country, said Mr. Wilson, as mere circulating medium, was so much wealth rendered unproductive. Whatever of coin a man has in his strong box produces him no interest, and as productive property is worthless. The paper currency, by releasing coin nearly equal to its circulation, increased by so much the buying power of the nation, and with it the national prosperity. The increased circulation, moreover, would be followed by an exportation of silver, for said Mr. Wilson, quoting Ricardo:—

“If a mine of gold were discovered in either of these countries, the currency of that country would be lowered in value, in consequence of the increased quantity of the precious metals brought into circulation, and would therefore no longer be of the same value as that of other countries. Gold and silver, whether in coin or in bullion, obeying the law which regulates all other commodities, would immediately become articles of exportation; they would leave the country where they were cheap, for those countries where they were dear, and would continue to do so as long as the mine should prove productive, and till the proportion existing between capital and money in each country before the discovery of the mine were again established, and gold and silver restored everywhere to one value. In return for the gold exported, commodities would be imported; and though what is usually termed the balance of trade would be against the country exporting money or bullion, it would be evident that she was carrying on a most advantageous trade, exporting that which was in no way useful to her, for commodities which might be employed in the extension of her manufactures, and the increase of her wealth.

“If, instead of a mine being discovered in any country, a bank were established, such as the Bank of England, with the power of issuing its notes for a circulating medium, after a large amount had been issued either by way of loans to merchants, or by advances to Government, thereby adding considerably to the sum of the currency, the same effect would follow as in the case of the mine.”

Another effect would be the gradual but permanent rise in the price of Government securities. As the circulation of the notes increased, Government would gradually become the largest purchaser in the market, thus at once raising the price of securities, and releasing itself pro tanto from its load of debt. The extent of that release must be a matter of speculation.

The effect of these changes, Mr. Wilson said, on those “respectable institutions” the chartered banks, must be considerable. The notes of the Bengal Bank, for instance, could not in the face of the State competition continue to circulate. Power had been reserved to Government to give the banks notice of a revision of their charters. This would be acted on, and the power of issuing notes finally withdrawn. It was, however, no part of the intention of Government to injure those banks, and they would therefore be released from some unnecessary restrictions which fettered the development of their business. The restrictions Mr. Wilson hinted concerned their exchange operations. Nothing, moreover, that he had said was intended to throw discredit on the project of consolidating these banks into one grand National Bank, an object much to be desired.

It is not difficult to perceive the two weak points in this tremendous scheme. One is, we fear, wholly unavoidable, but the latter may yet be gradually remediable.

The arrangements for preventing over-issue, though the best which could be devised, strike us as in a large measure illusory. The Viceroy, it is true, cannot order a sudden extension. Nor, even if sure of his Legislative Council, could he make an extension private, the only measure to be greatly dreaded. But what binds the chief currency commissioner not to extend? Pains and penalties, from the whole of which he can be relieved by an Act of Parliament. Suppose next year a general rebellion in the north so cramps the finances, and so disorders credit, that Government must have money, and cannot obtain it by loan. And suppose the Governor-general accepts the responsibility of promising an Act of Indemnity. Would any commissioner, wild as all Anglo-Indians are to maintain the empire at all risks, and inclined as all Anglo-Indians are at such times to measures of Jacobin audacity, refuse the responsibility? You cannot threaten a man with more than the loss of his head, and the stake in 1857 was played for often enough on slighter provocations. The truth is, absolute security in such a case is impossible. All that can be done is to provide that any breach of the system adopted shall involve the necessity of an English Act of Indemnity. That is all that is attempted in England, and all that in the nature of things can be secured.

The second weak point is more practical. The new paper currency is a legal tender, localised. The note is not convertible at any office but the one at which it was issued, and the one in the Presidency town. We are willing to believe that the broader plan of making the note exchangeable at all offices, was unsafe or impossible, but we believe it only on Mr. Wilson's authority. The reason is neither patent nor explained, and the deficiency is a heavy drawback upon the general plan. The paper currency will be like that of the United States, a vexation often greater than the trouble of carrying rupees. For example, a traveller by rail from Burdwan to Lahore will pass through at least four circles. His notes of the Burdwan circle, legal tender there, will not be legal tender five hours afterwards, and will not in all probability be taken, or taken only at a discount. Surely one object of the new currency should be to make the value of notes as invariable and universal as that of rupees. The currency again will enormously facilitate the remittance of all moneys from the interior to the capital. But it does not, that we see, sufficiently facilitate the circulation between the circles, between Dacca for instance and Cawnpore. The fear of course is that a circle, if required to meet notes it did not issue, might not have the means at hand of facing an unexpected demand. But means might, we should imagine, have been found, with the aid of the splendid system of native banking, to meet so infrequent a contingency. An occasional loss on the sale of drafts would, we should have thought, have been of less moment than the immense advantages to be secured by the universality of the new currency. No doubt the matter has been fairly thought out, but we question if Mr. Wilson may not have been induced to overestimate the danger of a general instead of a local convertibility.

It is not perhaps a weak point, but it is one of the points of the new scheme, that it introduces into Government operations the dangers of all banking houses. A local disturbance will almost always be followed by a local rush for silver, a rush which must occur at the moment when securities are locally almost unsaleable.

These are evils, however, the localisation apart, which must follow any scheme for a State paper currency. If accepted by the people, and the probabilities are in its favour, the beneficial effect will be almost incalculable. When we denied the probable influence of the change on prices, we never contemplated a measure of such gigantic proportions, a currency which, if it ever expands to its possible proportion, may one day set loose two-thirds of the whole coinage of India, and render Government almost the sole Indian holder of its own debt. The result of success must be, so far as we can see, gradually so to alter prices, and therefore wages, as to change the whole surface of society, and bring the most oppressed class of the community, the working farmers, up to a high level of physical comfort. The new currency makes the income-tax in its gross incidence a trifle, in the presence of the new and unprecedented purchasing power of the whole people.

We must add one word on the new position in which a class of the community are placed. The shareholders of the banks, especially at home, will probably deem themselves sadly aggrieved. Their forebodings, however, ought to be erroneous. The Bank notes never floated well, and we believe a careful analysis of Bank profits would show a curiously small balance produced by the notes. At all events it cannot equal the profits which a bank with an empire for its principal shareholder ought to make, if once permitted to enter into exchange transactions. If the Oriental Bank without notes can divide 25 per cent., why should the Bank of Bengal remain content with twelve?—Friend of India.

THE INDIGO PLANTERS AND THE RYOTS.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

From A. R. Young, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Commissioner of Nuddea.

Fort William, March 14, 1860.

SIR,—I am directed by the Lieutenant-governor to forward to you herewith a notification which I am to request you will, as speedily as Revenue.

possible, have very carefully translated into Bengalee, and distributed extensively in those districts of your division in which misunderstanding has occurred, or is likely to occur, in connection with the cultivation of indigo.

2. You can have any number you require of these notices struck off either at the Allipore Jail Press, or in that attached to my office.

3. You will understand that the Lieutenant-governor desires that you will be careful to explain to the magistrates to whom you forward these notices, that it is not intended by this notification that the police should interfere for the purpose of enforcing any civil contract. Breaches of contracts between indigo planters and ryots can be remedied only in the manner authorised by law. The object of the notification is to do away with a false impression which there is reason to suppose exists as to the views of Government in regard to the cultivation of indigo, and which is alleged to have had its origin partly in the injudicious publication of the perwannah submitted with your letter of the 9th instant, in which perwannah an order of Government was inaccurately represented.

NOTIFICATION.

It appears from the reports of local officers, as well as from complaints which have been preferred to the Lieutenant-governor by indigo planters, that a misapprehension prevails in the minds of the ryots of some districts as to the views of Government in regard to the cultivation of indigo; and that in some places it has been falsely represented, by designing persons, that the Government is desirous to discourage the cultivation of indigo; and even that the police will protect ryots in the evasion of contracts entered into by them with indigo planters. It is surprising that such foolish reports should have obtained credence. Nevertheless it is proper that they should be authoritatively contradicted. Wherefore, it is hereby declared, that although it is always optional with ryots to take advances and to enter into contracts for indigo, or not to do so, as they may think best for their own interests—and in this matter they require no assistance beyond that of the law, which is equally fair to all parties—still if they do enter into such contracts lawfully, and of their own will, they must expect to be required to fulfil them. If they dishonestly refuse to act up to their engagements, they will be liable to the lawful consequences of such misconduct.

A. R. YOUNG,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

From A. Grote, Esq., Commissioner of the Nuddea Division, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

No. 71 Ct., dated March 13, 1860.

SIR,—I have the honour, as requested, to lay before his honor the following report on the state of things in zillah Nuddea, which has been much exaggerated in the daily and other papers published during the last fortnight.

2. Since the beginning of February the villagers in parts of Messrs. Hill's concern have been manifesting a determination to sow no more indigo. More recently this feeling has spread to the Loknathpore and to several villages of the Mulnath concern, and in some cases it has led to noisy demonstrations, which have caused alarm and given rise to the reports of outrages.

3. To be specific I will trace a few of these reports to their probable origin. They relate for the most part to occurrences in the Damoorhoodah subdivision, and my information regarding them is derived from Mr. Assistant Magistrate Maclean, who joined that station towards the end of February.

4. The story of the burning of the Loknathpore factory, alluded to by one newspaper correspondent, reduces itself, in Mr. Meares' letter to me, to the partial burning of an out-factory at Kajoorial. This act was ascribed to incendiaries, and a complaint was made accordingly to the magistrate at Kishnaghur, but none was made to the local police, and the factory did not push this charge laid before the magistrate. There is nothing, says Mr. Maclean, to show that the fire was not accidental.

5. The charge of misconduct brought by the same factory against a police darogah was not substantiated to Mr. Maclean's satisfaction, but he has sent the case to the magistrate for final orders. The best darogah in the district has since been transferred to the Damoorhoodah Thannah.

6. The demonstration against the Peerpore factory was a fact. A riotous party from Chooadangah approached this factory, but dispersed of itself, and quietly. This occurred before Mr. Maclean joined his subdivision, and was not reported to me till a day or two ago.

7. The impression which Mr. Maclean says apparently caused this and other demonstrations, was an apprehension perfectly groundless on the villagers' part that the factory would attack them.

8. The attacks on Mr. Larmour's assistants, Messrs. Hyde and Campbell, were by villagers whose lands had been measured for indigo. In both cases they were bold and unwarrantable. One man only could be identified in Mr. Campbell's case, and he has been punished.

9. The magistrates both of Nuddea and Jessore declare to the general prevalence of an impression among the villagers that Government is opposed to the cultivation of indigo. In my letter of the 10th February I reported on the subject, and laid before his honor Mr. Larmour's letters, praying for the issue of a Government notification counteracting of such a misimpression. I stated the result of my demi-official references to Mr. Reid, who had been marching through the indigo country, and to Mr. Drummond, who had at first advocated a notification. I gave my voice against the issue of one, because the Kallaroah deputy magistrate's injudicious order, to which the false impression was owing, was already some five months old, and because, supposing this order to have been the real source of the mischief, it would be difficult, after such a lapse of time, to word another which should simply have the effect of counteracting it.

10. As, however, the excitement and mutual mistrust appeared to be spreading, I took advantage of the Government order on the Joyrampore villagers' petition directly it reached me, and ordered its publication to all parties. This order was calculated at least to undeceive those ryots who had taken advances, of the impression said to have been produced on them by the deputy magistrate's order, that they were at liberty to repudiate their obligation. I have since had an interview with Mr. Herschel at Gyephattah, and have reason to think that this publication will have a good effect.

11. But I regret to have to add that Mr.

Herschel received a letter yesterday evening from Mr. Maclean, in which the occurrence of a disastrous fire in a village near Lokenathpore is reported. This is unfortunate, as it has at once been ascribed by the people to the factory underlings.

12. At the request of several planters in the Damoorhoodah subdivision, police burkundauzes have been stationed at their factories, and I have told Mr. Maclean to order down a small party of the police corps, if he thinks it necessary to strengthen the Thannah police. I quite agree, however, with him and Mr. Herschel, that no aggressive acts on the part of the villagers are at present contemplated; their object is to intimidate the planters from attempting to sow, and resist such attempts if made. Such an attitude is of course sufficient to cause deep alarm and anxiety to those who have paid out large advances.

13. In a further letter just received from Mr. Herschel, I find it admitted that Mr. Meares had cause for complaint against the conduct of the Damoorhoodah police. This has, as I have shown above, since been rectified.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NATIVE CREDULITY.—We (Hurkaru) observe in the last number of the Friend of India a statement with regard to the recent fires in Calcutta and the suburbs, that the natives "have a curious notion that the fires are the work of Government agents, who wish to burn them all out of Calcutta, and compel them to reside beyond the city. So strong is this delusion, that we have heard of servants bringing their boxes to a European because the quarter was to be burned by Government at 10 o'clock." This actually occurred in one instance with ourselves, and the box is now in safe keeping at our house. In another instance, we were told by one who might be called an intelligent and respectable man, that he believed, and it was the general impression, that the Government were burning their houses in order to clear the ground for a railway. This merely shows what a credulous and suspicious race the Government has to deal with. Every story, no matter how absurd, which discredits the Government, is listened to, every lie eagerly swallowed. Unless we understand this thoroughly we shall never get an insight into native character, or be able, even faintly, to comprehend the motives which influence their actions; who, for instance, to this day can say he understands the reasons which made the sepoys revolt? Every writer has his own version of it, and very few would be satisfied with the simple answer that an inveterate habit of suspicion and a propensity to view every act of their superiors in an unfavourable light, when skilfully worked upon by designing agents, are quite sufficient to account for the mutiny. Englishmen, when dealing with the natives, are, we fear, too prone to forget this peculiarity of the native mind, and, satisfied as to the integrity of their motives, are apt to be careless as to the interpretation which may be put upon their acts. We certainly would not argue that we should refrain from doing what is right because our motives may be misinterpreted. This was the grand mistake of the old Company. So fearful were they of exciting distrust or rousing suspicion that they pampered every native prejudice and even endeavoured to suppress the truth, and we see how utterly they failed to win the confidence of the people. But we may err in the other extreme if we should be utterly regardless as to the interpretation which may possibly be put upon our acts. While steadily pursuing the right course we should also endeavour by every means in our power to explain the motives by which we are actuated, and to remove all causes of suspicion.

PLOTTING IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The capture of the following pundits, Appah Sahib, Kashi Nath Bhaya, and Narain Rao, who deserted Sindhia's and took Tantia Topce's service on the latter occupying Gwalior, and have since been with the rebel forces and unceasingly intriguing against us, was effected on the night of the 25th February, at Aron, twenty miles south of Goona, where they were hidden by the amil of that place. Captain

H. A. Mayne, assistant political agent, secretly started off a body of his horse, which surrounded the town before dawn. The pundits, though within triple doors, were arrested in their sleep, and their plottings brought to an untimely end. The principal pundit, Ram Rao Govind, known as the "Chota Rao," could not be found, though he was there the previous evening. He has before often eluded the grasp of his would-be captors. This information, which may be depended on, is important. We (Delhi Gazette) understand that much mischief is being done by the plotting and intrigue now being secretly carried on in various parts of India. We had occasion to allude to this the other day when noticing the Indore canard; we remarked upon the fact of plotting and intrigue being the normal condition of this country, and so it is, and ever will be. We cannot expect the descendants of old and influential reigning families to subside quietly into insignificance, even though they may be allowed to retain all the outward insignia of royalty, and most of the benefits without the evils of majesty. The durbars of a native state, be it ever so well governed, must, from the nature of things, be always a hotbed of intrigue of some sort or other. As long as these intrigues are aimed only at the subversion of one minister and the elevation of another in his place, no mischief is likely to accrue, but they seldom stop here. An ambitious man who feels himself capable of doing great things and has no field for his talents will not be long in finding one out. But it is not only among the higher classes that the plotting goes on. Unquiet, restless, ambitious spirits know that they can always command attention from an ignorant and superstitious multitude like that of the lower and less informed classes of India, and they understand well how to appeal to their feelings and their fears. The ease with which the whole Bengal army was tampered with, and seduced from its allegiance, is an instance we ought not to forget of the inflammable nature of the material we are surrounded with. Prophecies and predictions and lying divinations are the dangerous instruments these enemies to the public peace wield with unerring skill; with these they mislead the ignorant and vulgar, while with the upper classes and influential men they appeal to ambition and avarice, those springs of human action never set in motion in vain. This plotting and intriguing is now, we understand, being carried on vigorously in Central India, and the Government are strangely impervious to the teachings of experience, if they do not learn to arrest the progress of the danger before it has gone too far. The authors of this mischief are in general pretty well known or guessed at by our political agents and their assistants, who should be urged to leave no stone unturned, no expedient untried, to effect their capture, and they should be supported in their efforts by the countenance and approbation of the Supreme Government. No rest should be given to the plotting pundits who are busy sowing the seeds of future disturbances, and intriguing to serve their own ends, making a cat's paw of men of influence and good family who are necessary to their purposes and foolishly allow themselves to be made use of, the dupes first and then the victims of clever conspirators, clever enough to keep out of harm's way themselves while they induce others to run the risks they themselves avoid by keeping in the background.

MUMMOO KHAN'S wife and three children arrived in Fyzabad some ten or fifteen days ago, and would have come on to Lucknow, but for a message which he sent them to remain where they were. It is said that Mummoo Khan's wife has a great deal of property, and that the most valuable portion of it, immediately on arrival in Fyzabad, she placed in the hands of one Ahmed Mirza, a resident of Fyzabad, but, suspecting his honesty or his intentions, she took it all back again from him the next day. The authorities, it is added, had not troubled her, asked her no questions, nor searched her baggage for papers or anything else; though the people about tried to frighten her by all sorts of reports, that she was to be imprisoned, and her property confiscated, &c. We (Oudh Gazette) are informed that she is a woman of good parentage, being an illegitimate daughter of a former king, by one of his thousand and one mehals, and that she had property in her own right. Accompanying the family is one Abdool Reheem. This man is said to have been the factotum and confidential adviser of Mummoo Khan throughout his rebellious career—from the first breaking out of the rebellion to the time of his capture. We are assured that Abdool Reheem had the superintendence of the whole of the domestic affairs of the household, and that it was more particularly owing to his cruelty, in withholding the regular supply of food from the English prisoners, that poor little Sophy Christian died; she was fairly starved to death. It is also said that when the captives were first brought in they were fed very decently, and even sumptuously, from the Begum's kitchen; but this continued only so long as the hope of opening negotiations with the British lasted; so soon as that faded they were put on prison rations—being consigned to the tender mercies of Mummoo Khan and his lieutenants, the said Abdool Reheem and another fellow of the name of Amaum Ali, the principal evidence now against his quondam master. This information has been tendered to the authorities, but we have not heard whether they have taken any action on it. By the same opportunity we have received some particulars of the movements of the Oude Begum. When we last heard of her, she was at Nya Kote, near Bootwul. Since then it appears Jung Bahadoor, in the course of one of his shooting excursions, or, what is more probable, on the pretence of one, encamped within three or four miles of Nya Kote, and sent to the Begum to inquire whether she would prefer going to Lucknow or remaining in Nepal—that in either case she would be provided for and protected. Without the slightest hesitation she elected a residence in Nepal. Upon this Jung Bahadoor decided that she would be removed from Nya Kote—which was not in Nepal proper—and, restricting the number of her followers to twelve, requested that she might move more into the interior, and take up her quarters at some place near Katmandoo. The Begum agreed to this, but when she was about leaving Jung Bahadoor sent to know the names and offices of the twelve followers she had chosen to take with her. On being informed, he peremptorily objected to two of them—Sahib Alli and Etmad Alli, two of her oldest and most faithful servants—accompanying her. This annoyed the lady so much that, in her rage and despair, she wept bitterly, cursing Jung Bahadoor and the Nepalese most audibly and audaciously the while. Jung Bahadoor heard of all this, but pretended to be ignorant. He, however, hurried on her departure, and about a month since she left Nya Kote, accompanied by her son, Brijis Kudder—whose experience, it is said, already surpasses the intelligence of his father, if the poor boy has one living—and twelve wretchedly filthy attendants, almost blind and decrepid from age. The remainder of her retinue were told to return to Oude, where they might go and live in perfect safety. We have heard of their arrival, also, in Fyzabad. The curse of India has proved a veritable blessing to Nepal, for the wealth that the rebels took into Nepal and never brought out of it again, must have added fourfold to the riches of the country—property everywhere taking the place of poverty. From accounts which have reached us from time to time, we hesitate not to say that the most valuable portion of the rebel wealth—the rarest and richest gems—has been added to the treasures of Jung Bahadoor himself. Jung Bahadoor, it is true, has not been the personal recipient, but his agents have been more active in receiving it for him than he would, perhaps, have been himself. The Begum took fifty lakhs' worth of jewels alone into Nepal, and we have just heard that certain ornaments which were valued in Oude at a lakh, she was obliged to dispose of at Nya Kote the other day for Rs. 10,000—a sum which she raised wherewith to pay her followers and friends on their separation from her. Our city people, who have a very shrewd idea of what each rebel chief was possessed of and carried into Nepal, say that, at a rough estimate, not less than two crores, or two millions sterling, have been the mutiny yield to Jung Bahadoor and the Nepaulese—the greater portion coming from the Nana's stores.

JHELM.—The Governor-general, the Commander-in-Chief and suite left Rawul Pinddee for Deena, eleven miles west of Jhelum, on the 4th March. The camp had been moved from Sohun, which is twenty-five miles from Jhelum on the Sohun and Peshawur road to Deena, in order to enable the viceregal party to visit the magnificent ruins at Rhotas. The deputy commissioner of Jhelum met the Viceroy, who had been accompanied by Mr. Saunders, the commissioner, in his return journey as in the advance on the confines of his district, and proceeded in the train to Deena, where his Excellency arrived shortly after sunset, and where the camp of her Majesty's 93rd Highlanders, in their march towards Rawul Pinddee, happened to be pitched. Arrangements had been made for a guard of honour from this regiment, accompanied by the band, to be in attendance in front of the reception tent, and considerable disappointment was felt by those anxious to do full honour to the Viceroy, as the guard was withdrawn a short time before his Excellency's arrival. It appears that to keep a guard of honour out after sunset is contrary to the regulations prescribed for her Majesty's army, at least so they are interpreted by the officer commanding the 93rd Highlanders. The party dined and slept at Deena, and at 7 a.m. of the 5th proceeded in their carriages, drawn by camels, to Rhotas, distant about six miles. Elephants had been provided, and carried the party about the places which were practicable for this mode of conveyance, but both Lord and Lady Canning showed their energy and enterprise in visiting, on foot, the spots more difficult of approach; and they frequently expressed their admiration at the striking monuments of a bygone dynasty, which presented themselves to view. After luncheon in the old durbar over the Soheilee gateway, the distinguished party set out for Jhelum, taking a route more easterly than the one by which they came, and striking the grand trunk road again at Booneh jungles, four miles to the Jhelum side of Deena. Both the road to Rhotas from Deena and that from Rhotas back to the grand trunk road had been improvised for the occasion by the district officials. At Jhelum the deputy commissioner, Captain Bristow, had the honour to receive the august party, consisting of his excellency the Viceroy, the Countess Canning, and the Right Hon. the Commander-in-chief, with their respective suites, in his house, where they rested for the night, and from thence set off at half-past five a.m. of the 6th, for Sealkote.—Lahore Chronicle.

SEALKOTE, March 9.—There was a grand display of troops this afternoon. The 7th dragoon guards, 7th irregulars, 52nd light infantry, Kelat-i-Ghizie regiment, the regiment of Ferozepore, and some companies of the 59th native infantry, were out. The Maharajah of Cashmere seemed very much pleased with the troops, which certainly formed a great contrast to his regiments. The durbar was held on Thursday, a private one at three, and the public one at four o'clock in the afternoon. It was very much crowded, chiefly by the long-haired chiefs from the country near Dera Ishmael Khan, all of whom were presented with necklaces; they had performed great services to the state (at least so said Mr. Aitchison, who presented them). The Governor-general smiled most graciously on them, at which they seemed highly gratified. One of them, a man of about eight-and-twenty, was presented as "a very promising young man." The Rajah of Cashmere is an exceedingly fine-looking young man about five and twenty. Among other presents which were given to him was a miniature picture of the Queen, a pair of opera glasses, a four-barrelled Lancaster rifle, a musical box, and the usual number of shawls and pieces of silk. The Maharajah gave a necklace to the Governor-general said to be worth about fifty thousand rupees, and several horses' tattoos which were given by the Rajahs further down country. He also gave the men of the 52nd light infantry three hundred rupees, while they were at rifle drill. On the whole he has made a very pleasing impression on all who saw him, and has been highly gratified with his reception. The camp is to leave Sealkote on the 10th.

MOOLTAN, March 14.—Within the fort of Mooltan are situate two shrines, called Bahawal-Huq and Rokin Alim respectively. These buildings have no architectural pretensions, but are remarkable for their antiquity. The former contains the remains of the individual whose name it bears: the latter those of his grandson. The ancestors of Bahawal Huq came originally from Bagdad, and settled here. Bahawal Huq himself flourished about 700 years ago; he was the high priest of Mooltan. Throughout the Punjab, and also in Scinde, his memory is held in great veneration by the people, and thousands of pilgrims visit these shrines. As I write, a stream of them is hastening thither to make their customary offerings, this being the season when pilgrimages are made. On the several rivers of the Punjab, the name of Bahawal Huq is familiar as a "household word." No boat leaves its moorings without his protection being invoked for its safety. Grants in land and money, amounting to some Rs. 3,000, are allowed for the maintenance of the shrines. These grants, which have been enjoyed from time immemorial, have been respected and upheld by the successive rulers of the country, and have now been confirmed by the British Government in the name of Mukdoom Shah Mahomed, a lineal descendant of the saints whom the shrines commemorate. This man possessed considerable influence among the people, and behaved with unswerving loyalty towards us during the progress of the siege of Mooltan in 1849, and more recently during the mutinies. For his services on the last-mentioned occasion he was rewarded with a present of Rs. 500, and a dress of honour.

MR. THOMAS CHISHOLM ANSTAY has been sworn in, and admitted an advocate of the Calcutta Supreme Court.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE.—The Hon. the President in Council has been pleased to resolve that the following Rule be passed and promulgated for general information:—"Every collector, deputy commissioner, assistant, extra assistant, or other subordinate officer in civil employ, who may under existing rules be entitled to travelling allowance while engaged on duty in the interior of this district, shall obtain the countersignature of the commissioner of the division, or of the resident, agent, or other officer under whose superintendence the district to which the said officer is attached may be placed, to his bill for such allowance, previously to submitting it to the civil auditor for audit."

MAHARAJA DHULEEP SING, it is reported, has expressed a wish to return to Lahore, and the State Secretary has inquired if lands can be assigned to him in the Punjab worthy of his rank, and equivalent to the pension now paid to him.

THE OUDE JEWELS.—The Calcutta papers say that the Government have resolved to return to the ex-King the state jewels taken out of the Kaisur Baugh by the British in June 1857. Their value is stated at three crores. We (Oudh Gazette), who know something about these jewels, may mention that they were never valued at more than eighty lakhs. Deduct from this such small items as a necklace, which Dr. Russell says was offered to him for Rs. 100 and a dram of rum, but which was afterwards sold in Calcutta for Rs. 75,000, and we know that there were many such items, and the balance will not reach half a crore. We should like to know, too, what means Government has had of satisfying itself that the jewels taken by the prize agents in the garrison from soldiers and others, who had helped themselves from the king's stores, were duly replaced again. We are too matter-of-fact sort of people to look upon our prize agents in the light Cæsar wished his wife to be looked upon; and as some very extraordinary secrets have oozed out about the doings of prize agents in all parts of India, during the rebellion, we are more than ever inclined to believe that, while those best entitled to the loot in the residency were deprived of it, the loot itself seldom or never went into the public prize stores—at least not such portable portions of it as enabled a man to carry the price of an earldom round his waist. There is, however, another point in connection with these jewels, which is very well worthy of attention. Is not the Lucknow garrison entitled to salvage, for saving them from falling into the hands of the enemy? Very many persons entertain the opinion that it is—just as much as a captain and his crew are for saving the cargo of a vessel in wreck. The jewels would have been totally lost to the owner, had not the forethought of Sir Henry Lawrence and the intrepidity of Major Banks caused them to be timeously taken under protection. They had barely had time to be removed into the residency—we think on the 27th June—when, on the 30th of the same month, surviving the Chinhut disaster, our locomotion was confined to the entrenchments, and the enemy were in the full occupation of the Kaisur Baugh. The King ought to be moved to grant the salvage, and, if unwilling, the Supreme Court ought to be moved to try the question. We know Government will not stir in the matter—perhaps it will only be too glad if it is spared being called upon to account for such of the jewels as the King may say are missing. That, however, has nothing to do with the cardinal rights of the garrison; its claim is to one-fourth, calculated on the market value of the articles now made good.

PESHAWUR.—It was never proposed that the Amcer should come to Peshawur, but he most probably would have sent his son had he not been suddenly threatened from the side of Bokhara (which renders it necessary for him to reinforce his sons upon the Oxus), and prevented doing so. The weather was very unfavourable, but everything went off, nevertheless, with great éclat and spirit. The durbar was acknowledged to have been one of the prettiest seen in India, and all the august visitors seemed pleased with what they saw, and anxious also to please. During their stay the Governor-general and Lady Canning visited the mission school in the city, when the first class was examined, and acquitted themselves creditably. They afterwards attended a fete given by the commissioner to the soldiers' children. The party left Peshawur for Attock on the 2nd of March, and the Viceroy was present at the first blasting of the tunnel which is to be constructed under the Indus at Attock, and which received his lordship's sanction at Peshawur. The work is the suggestion of Major Robertson, from whose practical judgment we may augur well of an undertaking which, if successful, will be one of the most useful yet entertained in India.—Lahore Chronicle.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS.—The Hurkaru understands that orders have been, or will be immediately, sent from England to suspend for a time the operation of the G. O. of 1855, that all staff appointments shall be vacated after they have been held for five years. It has been ruled that the present incumbents, whose tenure of office expired on the 23rd of March, are to be allowed to continue temporarily on the staff, but are not to be re-appointed for any further period, pending the measures now under consideration for the re-organisation of the army, which will, as a matter of course, involve great changes in the staff, and include a revision of all the offices.

NEPAUL.—The Englishman learns from Nepal that the Goorkha troops employed in the Terai campaign have had something approaching to a mutiny. On their return they demanded batta allowances from Jung Bahadoor, who has been obliged to temporise with them, giving them promises. It is said he has referred to the Governor-general on the subject. The Terai, it is said, is not to be given to the Nepaulese after all. The old boundary pillars are ordered to be repaired, which has, no doubt, led to this conclusion.

BAREILLY, March 19.—On the morning of the 14th, the Lieut.-governor, escorted by a portion of the 42nd Royal Highlanders, arrived here, and encamped about a mile from the Kotwallah, on the Pillibheet road. He entered the city at Inglis Gunj, and rode through the main street, which, thanks to the mutiny and the zeal of our magistrate, has a uniform range of buildings on either side. At the Kotwallah, which he passed en route to his camp, the formidable police was drawn out to receive him. It is stated that owing to the heat, which the Lieutenant-governor felt much, he was obliged to encamp out of the station, under a magnificent tope which was sufficiently large to shelter so large a camp as his. The distance of the camp from the station and from cantonments, though great, was certainly not inconveniently so; and as there was a metal road all the way, and as there were temporary lamps at night, a drive down, whether during the day, or at night, was pleasant. The station, of course, was in a state of commotion, and vehicles of all kinds were to be seen rolling all day backwards and forwards. There were two durbars; at the first, the Europeans, both civil and military, were introduced to his honor, the civil by Mr. Roberts, the commissi-oner, and the military by Brigadier-General Walpole. The durbar for the natives was held on Saturday evening, at half-past five, and Mr. Inglis, the magistrate, did the work of introduction, beginning with the great banker Mr. Bijenath, who, for his services to us during the mutiny, had the title of rajah conferred on him by the Governor general at the Fattyghur durbar. The jail and the magistrate and collector's office was inspected by him, and, strange to say, the college too was honoured by his presence. Mr. H. S. Reid, the Director general of Public Instruction, came in with the Lieutenant-governor, and left on Saturday night for Pillibheet, for which the Lieutenant-governor started early this morning. Mr. James Clarke, who was recently appointed to officiate as deputy collector, has been promoted to an appointment in the secretariat. It appears that Mr. James Rebello, the unconvicted assistant secretary, is entitled, by length of service, to a superannuation pension; and as he has more than once expressed his wish to retire, the secretary has been on the look out for a qualified successor. Circumstances, which at present it would be as well not to mention, have rendered it necessary to bring in an outsider. As Mr. J. Clarke has had the support and unequalled recommendation of several officers in the Rohilund commission, he has been deemed worthy of the honour of being selected, from the large body of the unconvicted in the north-west, to fill the office of assistant to the secretary of the North-west Provinces. This is the second time that a deputy collector has been appointed to the secretariat. On Mr. Gardener's retirement, Mr. P. B. Reid, the present deputy collector of Allahabad, was nominated, and has only recently been re-transferred to the revenue department. The appointments of deputy collectors to assistantships in the secretariat, has led to the discussion as to the relative position of these appointments; and various opinions diametrically opposite have been given.—Delhi Gazette.

LAHORE, March 11.—A rather amusing case has been tried in the civil court here, and finally disposed of yesterday. There is in this station (as I suppose there is in every station in India) a pork butcher. Some time in January last our worthy pork butcher sent round a circular to the effect that he would kill two fat pigs, and requested his customers to put down their names as usual for their favourite joints. The list was taken round as usual by a chuprassie, until it arrived at the house of a member of our little community, who opened it for the purpose, we will suppose, of putting down his name for a "spare-rib," or perhaps a "pig's cheek," when, to his unmitigated horror, astonishment, and disgust, he discovered that during its transit from house to house some one had erased the name of the pork butcher and substituted, in lieu thereof, the name of himself. Fancy his indignation! he, the respected employe of a large Government office, holding a good and lucrative appointment, he, so said the circular, would kill two fat pigs, would dispose of pork to the community. He immediately instituted searching inquiries, and, from information that was received, laid an action for defamation of character against another member of our little community—damages, 500 rupees. The case, after a long and impartial investigation by our worthy deputy commissioner, was finally decided yesterday, who, though the case could not positively be brought home to the party charged with the offence, gave judgment against the defendant—damages, 10 rupees. The case and judgment are now the sole topic here. The amount of damages awarded seems ridiculously small, if the defamation of character was proved—in fact, it implies that the man's character is worth only 10 rupees. However, such is the true state of the great pig case.—Delhi Gazette.

MR. EDEN AND THE PLANTERS.—It is rumoured, says the Hurkaru, that the Government of Bengal, with its usual readiness in meeting emergencies by prompt legislation, and determined to show its impartiality in the indigo question, has instructed Mr. Seance to prepare a Bill for exempting Mr. Eden from the operation of the bonâ fide Act, under which no civilian, however stupid or malicious, can be made to answer for the consequences of his acts. The indigo planters are expected to prosecute, and Government, on the principle "qui facit per alium facit per se," will pay all that may be decreed against Mr. Eden, the damage done by that gentleman being much greater than the funds of any private individual could meet.

INCOME-TAX.—The Government of India has no intention of subjecting either privates or non-commissioned officers of the British army to the operation of the income-tax. The tax of 20 per cent. on military and other state uniforms is remitted. Officers are no longer to be compelled to wear a uniform, and then taxed for the necessity.

THE HEAD QUARTERS STAFF of the Commander-in-chief in India, both in the Governor-general's camp and at Simla are ordered to proceed immediately to Calcutta. The order had been received from home, and is connected with the amalgamation of the armies. It is, therefore, considered probable that Lord Clyde will not return to England until this important measure has been carried out to the fullest extent.

A TECHY EDITOR.—The Delhi Gazette makes the following polite remarks on Allen's Indian Mail, because we do not especially assign to it the credit of every ungrammatical paragraph we transfer from its pages to our own columns of avowed extract. In most cases we do give our authority for such intelligence as we are able to gather from one of the dullest of Indian journals, but it is quite impossible to satisfy any individual afflicted with such egregious vanity, exhibiting itself in such childish querulousness:—"It is amusing to witness the air of superiority assumed by papers and periodicals, however small, unpretending, and unimportant they may be, if only they are published in London. They are quite above anything colonial. We receive regularly Allen's Indian Mail, who, though he does not condescend to notice the source whence he derives his information, makes no scruple of extracting whole columns of news out of our paper. We hardly know which to admire most, the amazing condescension of the Leadenhall street print, or the barefacedness of such wholesale plagiarism."

TROOPS FOR CHINA.—The 8th Punjab Infantry regiment, under orders for China, left Calcutta on the 6th March, in the following transports, viz., Ship Punjab, with about 5 officers, 271 men, 36 followers, and one charger; and the ship Minden, with about 5 officers, 202 men, 46 followers, and 2 chargers. The No. 8 Battery of the 14th Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, consisting of about 8 officers, 211 men, 42 followers, and 6 horses, left on the 10th in the hired transport ship Merchantman, and the remaining detachment of the 8th Punjab Infantry on the 11th in the transport ship Lord Dalhousie. H. M. 60th Rifles, in all 12 officers and 432 rank and file, sailed on board the Aliquis, on the 18th. Lady Clara and Clarendon are taken up for H.M.'s 53rd.

SHWE DAGON PAGODA, RANGOON.—In the last number of the Asiatic Society's Journal Col. Phayre gives an account of the great golden pagoda at Rangoon, known as the Shwe Dagon. It derives its peculiar sanctity as the chief object of worship in all Indo-Chinese countries, from having inclosed in its interior shrine, below the surface of the ground on which it stands, relics of the last Boodha Gautama, and personal implements or garments used by the three preceding Boodhas. The original shrine erected over the relics in B. C. 588 did not exceed 18 cubits in height. In A. D. 1501 it was rebuilt to a height of 129 feet. Since that time it has been repeatedly enlarged. It assumed its present form in 1768, after the conquest of Alompra. It is now a majestic mass of solid masonry, springing up to the height of 320 feet. Its shape is that of a cone or circular pyramid, more or less ornamented, and crowned by a tapering spire of gilt iron net-work. It has been the policy of the Burmese kings to increase the splendour of the Shwe Dagon, that it might surpass the national temple of the Talaings.

YERECUM FIBRE.—In the Madras Times Dr. A. Hunter draws attention to the value of the fibre of the yerecum (calotropis gigantea) silk cotton. The plant thrives best in the neighbourhood of neglected rubbish heaps, whence it derives an abundant supply of nitrogen, which seems essential to its perfection. The difficulty of spinning its hairs, which do not contract in the same way as cotton, has been overcome by new machinery. A variety of fabrics of a light soft texture were lately exhibited in Madras by Messrs. Thresher and Glennie, made from the Yerecum silk cotton mixed with other fibres. The cloth is well suited as a substitute for flannel. Several large bales of the fibres have been sent to London. It is expected that with aloes and plantain fibre they will be fit for the finest descriptions of note paper. The whole plant is of commercial value. In Madras the silk cotton of the pod is collected, in Bombay the fibre of the bark is used as a substitute for flax, and in Bengal the natives collect the milky juice as a substitute for shellac and gutta percha.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY are about to extend their operations on the banks of the Godavery. They have been led to this decision by the statements of Col. A. Cotton. The Rev. Messrs. Edmunds and Ellington have been designated to this work. There is a population of 74 millions speaking the Telugu, and of 15½ millions speaking mixed dialects of Telugu, Canarese, and Marathi; 224 millions in all, among whom, says the Madras U. M. Record, there are but twenty-five European and East Indian missionaries.

CIVIL SERVICE.—We (Athenæum) understand that a memorial protesting against the extension of the period of service from 22 to 25 years' actual residence in India, as proposed by the Government in extract minutes of consultation dated 24th February, 1860, will shortly be circulated to the members of the Civil Service. The injustice, and, worse still, the impolicy of breaking faith with so large a body of influential servants, and forcing them to remain in a state of chronic discontent for three years, are so apparent that, with one exception, the service on this point at any rate will be unanimous, and their reasonable request must meet with due consideration. We cannot believe that Sir Charles Wood, after the admission in his speech in the House on Indian Finance, will venture to make the service more unpopular at home than it is at present. Whether he could legally make the proposed change compulsory, and force three years' extra labour out of a man who by his covenant was bound to serve for only 25 years, would very soon be proved by an action at law. Of this we are certain—any such "arrangement" would be most unpopular, and should not be supported by a Governor who is the champion of free labour and no impressment.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND MR. WILSON.—To the Right Hon. James Wilson, Calcutta. Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the Chamber of Commerce, to inclose copy of a letter addressed by me to the Madras Government on the 1st inst., and of the Chief Secretary's reply thereto. The correspondence, as you will observe, refers to a passage in your speech in the Legislative Council, delivered on the 18th ultimo, in which you allude to a claim to exemption from increased taxation, made by your fellow subjects in Madras and Bombay. This statement has caused great surprise at Madras; for not only was it contrary to the fact, but the very reverse of what has been publicly asserted here on two occasions. On March 25, 1859, at a meeting of the inhabitants of Madras, convened by the sheriff, to consider the New Customs Act, the chairman spoke as follows:—"They did not object to taxation, nor were they unprepared for it. All knew long ago, ever since the outbreak of the unfortunate mutinies, that taxation of some kind or another must take place—the increased calls on the Exchequer must lead to additional taxation." At another public meeting, convened by the sheriff, and held on the 22nd September, a petition against the proposed Licence Act was unanimously voted, and it contained the following paragraph:—"Further sheweth,—That the meeting being aware of the necessity which exists of increasing the public revenue, will cheerfully support any measure for the fair and equal taxation of all classes." The gentleman who proposed the resolution also said:—"I am particularly glad that it contains the last clause, for I am sure that every person here, of whatever class or colour he may be, is willing to bear his fair share of that taxation which is necessary for the support of the empire." If necessary, I could multiply the proofs which I have here adduced to show that the sentiment which has been ascribed to the people of Madras has never been publicly expressed by them, and I am assured that you will sympathise with the indignant feeling which they have shown at so unjust an accusation. The Chamber is aware that you are not responsible for this particular statement, and that, in making it, you relied on official documents then before you. It was this that induced it to make an application to the Madras Government as a preliminary measure, before it addressed itself to you. The reply is considered unsatisfactory, and I am now requested to ask you to make such a public explanation, in the Legislative Council, as will clear us and our fellow citizens from an unjust imputation, which cannot be allowed to go forth to the world without contradiction. I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant, (Signed) H. NELSON, chairman. Chamber of Commerce, Madras, 16th March, 1860.

MR. TEED, Master in Equity and Administrator, general, has been obliged to take fifteen months' leave to England on sick certificate. Mr. Dale, we understand, has been appointed master in equity. Who will be administrator-general we are unable to say, as it seems it is an appointment not much coveted, on account of there being more work than profit connected with it.

MADRAS BANK.—Mr. Wilson's Paper Currency Bill has had the effect of reducing the market value of Madras Bank shares to the extent of six per cent.

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—At a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Military Male Orphan Asylum, held on the 8th March, a letter from a legal gentleman was submitted, in which doubts regarding the legality of amalgamating the institution with the Lawrence Asylum were expressed. The board, after considering the matter, resolved:—"That Mr. Sydney Snyth be requested to give a legal opinion on the subject for submission to the whole body of governors."

JEBBULPORE, March 14.—The 3rd Madras European Regiment, having at last succeeded in procuring sufficient carriage, continued their march towards Jaulnah on the 12th. The 2nd troop 3rd brigade Bengal Horse Artillery arrived yesterday morning, but were not permitted to enter the cantonment, in consequence of smallpox and measles being very prevalent amongst them. They are encamped on the spot of ground just vacated by the Madras corps. I regret to inform you, from a private letter I received a few days ago, that cholera has broken out amongst the families of the 3rd Regiment, and at the date of my letter (which was written the day after the epidemic appeared), one man, one woman, and four children (Europeans), had succumbed to the disease, besides a number of the camp followers; and at that time there were many other hopeless cases in hospital. You will remember that these families preceded the march of the regiment. Brigadier Wheeler, commanding Saugor District, has arrived here, and I believe will commence an inspection of the troops in a day or two. Last evening we had a good fall of rain, which was sadly needed, for the weather is very sultry.

COCHIN, March 10.—Shungoony Menon, the deputy collector of Tinivelly, arrived here on the evening of the 5th. Very early next morning he proceeded to Trepoonteral, and paid his homage to his Highness the Rajah; and on his return in the afternoon saw Mr. Maltby at the Residency. We hear he will receive his "teetoorum," and take charge of the office of dewan (or prime minister) to-morrow. The Resident took charge of the Queen's treasury at Ernacollum in the evening of the 8th, after having first visited the huzzoor cutcherry, the jail, and the charity hospital there. He was conducted to these places by Dr. Ross, and the Dewan Peishcar. It appears that the Resident observed to the Peishcar that the means of ventilation in the jail was insufficient, and recommended the construction of a few additional windows to the building. We hope the Circar will take the earliest opportunity to order this to be done; for we believe the present confined state of the several apartments wherein the convicts are incarcerated is one of the chief causes of their unhealthiness. His Highness the Rajah held a private meeting with the Resident yesterday at half past three p.m., at the Mattencherry Palace, in order to confer with him on certain affairs relative to the future administration of Cochin. His Highness and Mr. Maltby appear at present to be very friendly disposed towards each other. Several important changes have taken place in this Government since the arrival of Mr. Maltby, and many more are expected to come off shortly. He will leave this for Trevandrum on Monday or Tuesday next.—Madava Row, the Dewan of Travancore, is now on circuit in the Northern districts. It would appear that he has, through his tour, detected fraudulent practices in some of the chowkaders, or customs managers, in the discharge of their public duties, and that they have been forthwith sent to Trevandrum, under arrest, to take their trial. We have no reason to doubt that condign punishment will be meted out to such men, so long as Madava Row is at the helm of affairs. Such "executions" will materially serve to raise the standard of morality in Travancore underlings, which is at present lamentably low. The ex-dewan, Venkata Row, and his patron the ex-Resident, General Cullen, are now at Paulghat, and propose, we learn, to start for Coimbatore within a fortnight.—Bombay Times.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE REV. J. H. BRUHL, who has been for nine years a missionary to the Jews in Bagdad, in connection with the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, has lately come to Bombay, at the instance of the Society, to make inquiries and report as to the desirableness of instituting a mission to the Jews of Bombay. We suppose it to be not unlikely that such a mission will be instituted in the course of the present year.

MR. LESTOCK REID received charge of the office of acting collector and magistrate of Poona, from Mr. George Inverarity, on March the 21st. Mr. Inverarity proceeded on the following day to Sattara, to take up his new appointment of collector and magistrate of that district. We regret to lose Mr. Inverarity, as he is one of the very few collectors Poona has been blessed with of late years, who looked into everything brought before him with his own eyes, and who is not above doing all his work with his own hands. Self-reliance is one of Mr. Inverarity's chief attributes, and being a man of very superior abilities, and a good linguist, everything he did was done pukka. He is, therefore, a most worthy successor to Mr. John Nugent Rose, one of the most talented and able men in a service that can boast of having in its ranks some of the brightest intellects to be found in any service in the world. Mr. Inverarity's sojourn here, though but of short—far too short—duration, has been productive of much benefit to the collectorate, and we congratulate our neighbours in Sattara on their good fortune that he has been appointed Mr. Rose's successor.—Poona Observer.

BOURNE'S SUNKEN STEAMER.—We learn that the engineers of Bourn's Company propose to recover their sunken tug by laying flats on either side of her at low water, with beams across, to which chains passed under the steamer will be attached. As the tide rises she will be lifted, and towed by a flat-bottomed steamer in attendance into shallow water, where, on the tide receding, the wreck will be left high and dry. Two Government flats and two others belonging to the Company are to be employed on the work. They are packed with sleepers to prevent injury by the beams to their rails, &c. Precautions have been taken to admit of the easing of the chains, in case it be found that the tug does not rise with the tide, so that there will be no danger of the barges sinking. A later account says that "the ill-fated Indus is now among the have-beens; notwithstanding stupendous efforts for her recovery, chains parted, beams, strong as they were supposed to be, gave way, and the steamer is irrecoverably gone."

THE RANA OF NUGGUR PARKUR.—We learn from authentic sources that the Rana of Nuggur Parkur is to accompany the Commissioner of Sind to Kurrachee, where he will be brought to trial under a competent tribunal, for disaffection to the British Government. We do not surmise that he is likely to meet with the condign punishment that has, in too few instances, been awarded to the arch-traitors of the Sepoy mutiny; but as from his obstinacy he has been the means of entailing an immense expense upon Government by the movement of a large body of troops towards his stronghold, as well as causing the sacrifice of many of her Majesty's soldiers, we doubt not that the local Government will deprive him of his hereditary property, and escheat his estates. He can expect nothing less; and if he is fortunate enough to escape with this mulct, he is one of those lucky rebels whose case has been judged with too much leniency. After all the revelations that have been made, we consider that this Rana is deserving of the severest penalty that the law can inflict; unless the absurd story be true that the deputy collector of these frontier districts has driven this native land proprietor to despair by his arbitrary measures. There have been many ugly rumours respecting this government official, which, however authentic the reports that reach us from the ryots may be, we are unwilling to give credence to unless substantiated in a full and open court; but if the one tithe of what we have heard be true, then it is high time that a public investigation was held, and that the truth or falsehood of these native assertions was for ever established.—Sind Kossid.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.—Dr. Impey, who has recently returned to the Presidency, will not resume his duties here, he having been appointed Postmaster-general of Madras, on the retirement of Mr. Williamson, C.S., who proceeds to England. Mr. Leighton, who has been officiating for Dr. Impey, is to be confirmed in the appointment. During Dr. Impey's tenure of office considerable improvements have been effected in his department, and, as often happens with a competent man at the helm, at lessened cost to the State.

THE REV. MR. COLVIN having resigned the office of Secretary to the Bombay Auxiliary Bible Society, the Rev. Mr. Carlile has been elected his successor, by a unanimous vote of the Committee.

CAPTAIN ROOME.—Few regiments have performed more meritorious services during the mutinies than the 10th Regiment N. I. In Central India, especially, the detachments under Captain Roome earned great distinction, and, in conjunction with that gallant officer, received the thanks of General Napier in division orders. Captain Roome was mainly instrumental in suppressing the last embers of the revolt in Central India; and we can only hope that his services will receive a commensurate reward. He left Bombay for England by the last mail, to recruit his health, which had sustained severe injuries, both from open fighting and jungle warfare. His orders from Sir William Napier were to slay, burn, and destroy wherever he considered the country disaffected, or entertained a belief that the people were favourable to the insurgent cause. He had, however, occasion but once or twice to carry out his instructions to the letter; his firm policy being sufficient to cause the villagers generally to afford all the information and assistance he desired. In a very short time he cleared the country of insurgents, surprising them in the midst of their fastnesses, and pursuing them into the heart of the jungles. In every action the courage and endurance of his own men of the 10th Regiment N. I. were most marked and conspicuous. They rose superior to fatigue, and, in the excitement of the war-hunt after rebels, seemed to forget all their previous toils and privations.—Telegraph and Courier.

KHAN BAHADOOR KHAN, it is confidently reported in the best informed circles, has written to Mummoo Khan to inquire if it is true that he also has been sentenced to be hanged, and assuring him of his belief that it is a mere matter of form the English infidels go through by way of political amusement, but that there is no fear that they will carry the threat into execution. It is also said that Mummoo Khan replied in a very jolly spirit, saying that he might have expected advancement to one of the highest posts in this imperial city, but nothing has come of it yet. He is of opinion that to keep two such celebrated men as Khan Bahadoor Khan and himself even for an hour in suspense, is wholly inexcusable, and that the sooner the authorities bring their trials to an end and drop the subject, the better for everybody.

CIVIL SERVICE.—We (Poona Observer) observe that the following changes in the Bombay Civil Service are spoken of as being likely to take place shortly:—Mr. H. L. Anderson, to be chief secretary, vice Mr. H. Young, who goes home on furlough, on sick certificate. Mr. W. Hart, now in England, but who is expected out two months hence, to be a puisne judge of the Sudder Court, in succession to Mr. W. E. Frere, who goes into council next month, on the retirement of Mr. A. Malet. Mr. C. J. Erskine, judge and session judge of the Konkan, to be a member of the Legislative Council of India, in the room of P. W. LeGeyt, who retires from the service in April. Mr. A. Bettington, inspector of prisons, and police commissioner, has had his leave to England cancelled, and thus caused severe disappointment to several eager expectants of preferment to those important offices. We are glad to hear that Mr. Bettington has adopted this course, as the public service will be much benefited by his continuance in office. Mr. D. C. R. Leighton will, it is rumoured, be confirmed as postmaster-general at Bombay, vice Dr. Impey, who, it is said, is going to Madras as postmaster-general.

CHOLERA IN H.M.'S 56TH REGIMENT.—We regret very much to learn that cholera made its appearance amongst H.M.'s 56th regiment whilst on its march from Belgaum to Poona. There were eight cases occurred in the regiment between Belgaum and Kolapoor, four of which proved fatal; one was left behind with the detachment at Kolapoor, and the other three were brought on to Sattara, and are doing well. No cases had occurred since the 8th March, but on the morning of the 15th the disease again showed itself at the Dewa Ghaut, eight miles from Poona, when nine more cases were admitted into hospital. Of these, five proved fatal—one officer (Captain Ramsay) and four men having succumbed to the epidemic. The other men are still in hospital, but we are glad to hear that they are doing well. No fresh cases have since been reported, so we sincerely hope that the measures taken for preventing the spread of the disease will prove effectual. The regiment is now encamped out of Poona, at a short distance from their lines, for the present, as a measure of precaution; and as soon as the medical authorities give their consent, they will be removed to the New Barracks—probably the finest in India. The headquarters of the 56th regiment will be stationed at Poona; a wing at Ahmednuggur; and a detachment from that wing will be sent to garrison the fortress of Asseerghur.

CAMP BAEODA, March 12.—Two companies of H. M. 33rd, from Deesa, arrived here on Saturday morning, to relieve an equal number of the 4th (King's Own), which started this morning for Ahmedabad, to join the head-quarters. Lady Shakespear arrived here during the last week, on her way to join Sir Richmond at Indore. H.H. the Guickwar, in order to show the high sense of respect he entertains towards Sir R. Shakespear, gave a grand dinner to his lady, attended by the resident and other ladies and gentlemen in the camp, on the 8th instant. In the afternoon, at about four o'clock, the company proceeded to the city in carriages, preceded by H.H., to witness an elephant, a buffalo, and a rhinoceros fight, each in succession. After witnessing this tumasha, the company drove to the palace garden, called "Motee Bagh," where a sumptuous dinner was provided. After dinner fireworks were let off, and the whole affair did not end till nine o'clock. The Motee Bagh was splendidly lit up for the occasion, and the garden itself was tastefully laid out with festoons and evergreens covered with myriads of lights, which had a grand and imposing effect. In fact, H.H. did everything in his power to show a mark of his friendly feeling towards one who was esteemed and respected by the people here, and one who was a true friend to H.H. himself.—Bombay Times.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—A general meeting of the directors of the Bank of Bombay was held on

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, March 16.—During the past fortnight the weather has been of the true March type, excessively hot and dry, just what the preparers and shippers of coffee glory in. In fact, coffee has not come down fast enough for their wishes. Nevertheless, the export has been considerable. Six ships have sailed, all of which were bound for foreign ports, with the single exception of the Cœur de Lion, which cleared for London. Two out of the six are bound for New York, with nearly 15,000 cwt. of our native coffee. Two went to French ports, and one to Rotterdam. The addition thus made to our exports consists of 43,968 cwt. of coffee, in the proportions of 14,808 plantation and 29,160 native. Our total exports from 1st October to 12th March are 302,000 cwt., against 293,000 in the corresponding period of the previous season. In plantation there is an increase, which more than makes up for a decrease of about 24,000 cwt. in native. It seems difficult to say why native should be particularly deficient while there is an increase on plantation. A planting friend suggests that the plantation-stores have been better watched than in previous years. The exports of all our other staple exports are considerably in excess of last year.

While our export trade is thus brisk we have intelligence of a most successful commencement of the pearl fishery at Aripo, the sum realised in the first two days exceeding £5,300, while the oysters sold for the enormous sum of £15 a thousand, or more than 3½d. for each oyster. This is unprecedented. It would seem as if Sir H. Ward's good luck, financially, was to follow him to the end. No more than £10,000 was expected from the pearl fishery of 1860, and it is now pretty certain that £30,000 will be realised. Taking place as the fishery necessarily does at the hottest season of the year, we naturally feel anxious lest there should be an outbreak of disease amongst the assembled multitudes, such as brought last year's fishery to an abrupt conclusion; but as yet the sanitary reports are all that could be wished. After an interval of twenty years of unproductiveness, the pearl banks began again to yield just as Sir H. Ward became Governor of Ceylon. Already upwards of £100,000 has been added to our revenue from this source since 1835, and it is probable that before Sir H. Ward leaves us the £150,000 may be made up.

We have just obtained through the courtesy of the collector of customs a summary of the trade of Ceylon for 1859, which we are able to compare with the figures for 1857 and 1858 previously obtained.

It appears that, deducting specie and bullion, the value of our imports has risen from £1,940,339 in 1857 to £2,314,707 in 1859. In the same period the value of our exports has slightly decreased, having fallen from £2,253,381 in 1857 to £2,160,502 in 1859. The total value of goods imported and exported in 1859 was:—

Imports .. .. .	£2,314,707
Exports .. .. .	2,160,502
	£4,475,209
Add Specie Imported .. .. .	1,159,780
„ Exported .. .. .	364,249

Total .. £5,999,238

or in round numbers six millions sterling, our population being under two millions. The bulk of our import and export trade has been, of course, with Great Britain and British possessions in India; British colonies (save Australia in the matter of specie) not telling for much. To France our exports are large, the imports being trifling. In the case of French possessions in India it is the very reverse.

With Holland and the United States we have some export trade, while we import considerably from the Maldiv Islands. The value of our exports to France (chiefly native coffee) fell from £342,000 in 1857, to £143,000 in 1859. In 1857 the trade was overdone. Our commerce altogether is steadily increasing.—Ceylon Observer.

Time-expired Men in H.M.'s British Forces.

It having been brought to the notice of Lord Clyde that many time-expired men of Her Majesty's British forces have been sent away from their regts. under the operation of G. O. No. 74, of May 7 last, without any report having been made to the office of the Adjutant-general Her Majesty's Forces, the C. in C. wishes it to be distinctly understood that the directions conveyed in the above quoted order were drawn up with a view solely to save correspondence.

Time-expired soldiers may be discharged from their regiments at once, without the regular application having been sent in, but an immediate report of men so disposed of must invariably be forwarded to the Adjutant-general Her Majesty's British forces for the C. in C.'s information, according to the prescribed form.

This does not, however, apply to men obtaining their discharge as an indulgence, for whom application must uniformly be made as heretofore.

Musketry Target Platforms.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Umritsir, Feb. 8.—With the sanction of Government, the C. in C. authorises the addition of wooden platforms to the schedule of musketry instruction articles published in G. O. of July 6 last. These platforms are for the targets to rest upon: they should be twenty feet long by nine inches in width, and one will be allowed for every rifle practice butt.

Cancelling of the Order for Attendance at Hindoostanee Lectures.

Adj. gen.'s office, H.M. British forces in India, Simla, Feb. 17, 1860.—Hd. Qrs., Camp Khumna, Jan. 26.—Examination Native Languages.—The G. O. dated Oct. 23, 1857, directing the daily attendance of officers, when practicable, at Hindoostanee lectures, and calling for periodical reports of progress (see Indian Mail, No. 431, March 26), is cancelled.

The C. in C. believes that the officers of H.M.'s service are fully aware of the value of a proficiency in the native languages, and it has been gratifying to him to observe that more than thirty officers have passed at recent examinations.

The C. in C. has further to publish for general information that H.R.H. the General C. in C. has notified his concurrence with the recent announcement of the Government of India, that a knowledge of the native language, as certified by examination, will be considered an indispensable qualification for responsible employment in this country, whether the personal staff of general officers, the general staff of the army, or in other appointments.

Movements of Troops in the Hot and Rainy Seasons.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Girana, Feb. 3.—No. 20.—In consequence of the great inconvenience and risk of moving small detachments of soldiers during the hot and rainy seasons, and the difficulty of procuring passages from India, the C. in C. directs that soldiers shall not be sent from H.M.'s regiments for disch. or transf. between April 1 and September 30 of each year.

Soldiers who may be entitled to claim discharge by expiration of term of service between April 1 and May 31, are permitted to make their applications in time to be sent from their regiments before April 1.

Those entitled to discharge between June 1 and Sept. 30, will make their applications in time to be sent from their regiments immediately after Oct. 1.

In the case of regiments at or near the presidency, of soldiers who apply to be discharged at the station where serving, or of transfers in which soldiers may have but a short distance to proceed, general officers will be pleased to exercise their discretion in forwarding applications for discharge or transfer; but, the special circumstances having now ceased under which discharges have been authorised throughout the past year, the C. in C. directs that, in accordance with the custom of this command, the movements of small parties of soldiers may be confined to the season when they can be performed without risk.

This order does not apply to detachments of invalids or convalescents under special arrangements, which will proceed as before in urgent cases, as opportunities offer.

Commanding officers will be good enough to explain these instructions to their regiments, and point out that the order is not a prohibition of discharge, but a detail arrangement for the convenience of the service.

Allowances to Servants of Government under Arrest.

Home Department, Fort William, Feb. 6.—No. 309.—The following extract from a despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, is published for general information:—

"When a servant of Government is committed to prison, either for debt or on a criminal charge, he should be considered as under suspension from the date of his arrest, and not allowed to draw any pay until the termination of the proceedings against him, when an adjustment of his allowances will be made according to the circumstances of the case, the full amount being given only in the event of the officer being acquitted of blame, or (if the imprisonment was for debt) of its being proved that the officer's liability arose from circumstances beyond his control."

Specifications of Inventions.

Home Department, Fort William, March 1.—No. 448.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed under the provisions of Act No. XV. of 1859, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

A copy of each specification is open at all reasonable hours, at the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, to public inspection, upon payment of a fee of one rupee, and a certified copy of any specification will be given to any person requiring the same on payment of the expense of copying.

No. 9.—John Bourne, of No. 9, Billiter-street, London, civil engr., "for an improved steam train for navigating shallow rivers."

No. 14.—George Evans, of No. 55, Manchester-street, Manchester-square, London, surgeon, "for the manufacture of a new preparation of the 'Bael' fruit of India."

No. 22.—John White, of Finchley, in the county of Middlesex, surgeon, "for improvements in cleansing or purifying air, and in increasing or reducing the temperature thereof, and in the application of air so treated to sanitary and other uses."

No. 25.—Robert Car, contractor and builder, Allahabad, "for consolidating broken bricks, kuner, stone, khoa earth, or any other material used in making roads, railway banks, bungalow floors, pukka roofs, foundations of culverts, bridges, public and garden walks, or in filling up quagmires and marshes, &c., &c."

District Inspectors of Musketry.

Camp Lahore, Feb. 21.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to authorise the appt. of district inspectors of musketry for the European troops in India, both of the line and of H.M.'s Indian forces, under the following arrangements:—

In the pres. of Bengal there will be—

1 chief inspector, with a staff salary of Rs. 400.

4 district inspectors, with a staff salary each of Rs. 250.

In the Madras pres., including Pegu, 2 district inspectors, with a staff salary each of Rs. 250.

In the Bombay pres., including Seinde, 2 district inspectors, with a staff salary each of Rs. 250.

The chief inspector in Bengal will be attached to army head qrs., and all musketry returns in the pres. will be forwarded to him for submission to the

C. in C., and subsequent transmission to the home authorities.

The senior of the two musketry inspectors in Madras and Bombay will be attached to the army head qrs. of those presidencies, and while performing the duties of their own divisions, will also receive the reports from the other one, which will be sent home, as in the case of Bengal.

For the performance of the above duties, the senior inspectors at Madras and Bombay will receive an extra allowance of Rs. 50 per mensem each.

The inspectors when on tour of inspection will travel by post at the public expense at the usual rates, to be passed on contingent bills.

The distribution of the districts in the Bengal pres. will be as follows:—

1st District.—To include the Eur. troops stationed at Calcutta, Barrackpore, Dum-Dum, Raneeungee, Berhampore, Dacca, Hazareebagh, Benares, Dinapore, Dehree, Ghazee-pore, Goruckpore, Azimghur.

2nd District.—To include the Eur. troops stationed at Allahabad, Oorsee, Cawnpore, Futtehghur, Lucknow, Roy Bareilly, Fyzabad, Gondah, Seetapore, Shahjehanpore, Bareilly, Moradabad.

3rd District.—To include the Eur. troops at Saugor, Jubbulpore, Nagode, Nowgong, Gwalior, Jhansie, Agra, Muttra, Meerut, Delhi, Umballa, Jullunder, Ferozepore.

4th District.—To include the Eur. troops at Umritsur, Lahore, Mooltan, Sealkote, Rawul Pindee, Nowshera, Attock, Campbellpore, Peshawur.

The distribution of the districts in the Madras and Bombay presidencies will be determined on by the govts. of those presidencies in communication with the comds. in chief.

The office estab. of the district inspectors of musketry will be settled hereafter.

Regiments for China.

Camp Loodiana, Jan. 29.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to determine that a second regt. of irreg. cav. shall be formed for service in China, and that the 1st regt. of Sikh irreg. cav., under the com. of Major D. M. Probyn, c.n., who have volunteered for this service, shall be formed, accordingly, of the same strength and on the same scale in every respect as the regt. of irreg. cav. constituted in G.G.O. of Jan. 14, 1860.

The Rt. Hon. the C. in C. is requested to issue such subsidiary orders to Major Probyn as may be necessary.

Cureton's Mooltanee Regiment of Cavalry.

Camp Kurtarpore, Feb. 2.—With reference to G.O. by the Gov. gen., No. 56A, dated Dec. 24, 1859, H.E., in consideration of the circumstance that the Mooltanee regt. of cav., constituted by that G.O., comprises more than four hundred of the men who gained distinction by their services during the late disturbances as "Cureton's Mooltanee Regiment of Cavalry," is pleased to direct that the regt. shall bear that designation, and shall be considered as embodied from Jan. 14, 1858, the date of the original formation of Cureton's regt.

The rates of pay, however, of the European officers and of the native grades of the regt., laid down in the G.O. No. 56A of Dec. 24, 1859, will take effect fr. Nov. 1, 1859, as therein directed, and from no earlier period.

G. O. No. 963 of Dec. 5, 1859.

Services of Col. Green, Adjt. General of the Army.

Bombay, March 9.—The C. in C. desires to express to Col. Green his best thanks for the very able assistance he has afforded him in his high position of adjt. general of the army during the eventful period of the last four years, in which he has evinced an energy and devotion to the service, and an assiduous attention to the important duties of his very responsible office, that could not be surpassed, and which has been of the utmost benefit to the army and advantage to the State. After a continued and conspicuous service in India of nearly thirty-three years (much of it on active service in the field), Col. Green returns to Europe to recruit his health, with the thanks of Sir Henry Somerset for his valuable aid, and his earnest wishes for his speedy restoration to health.

Valedictory Address of the Commander in Chief.

Ind. Qrs., Bombay, March 26.—The period of the usual tenure of command having expired, I am about to take leave of the army I have had the honour to command for upwards of five years, embracing one of the most eventful periods in the annals of British India.

Since the latter part of the year 1856, the army has been engaged in a series of actions, commencing with the war in Persia, of the most arduous and glorious character.

The several and numerous actions in which the troops have been engaged under their distinguished generals have been detailed in the various public despatches, and have received the fullest encomiums from the Government of India, and the high approbation of her Majesty and Parliament.

The troops of the Bombay army, whenever they have been engaged, have overcome all opposition, have encountered dangers and difficulties of no ordinary kind, with admirable courage and devotion to the state. Peace has been perfectly established throughout the land, and the lamented defection of some misguided men during a prolonged season of distrust and excitement, fully atoned for by the loyalty, fidelity, and gallantry of the many native regiments whose loyalty has never been called in question.

In now taking leave of the army, there only remains for me the pleasing duty of expressing to the general officers commanding divisions, the officers of the head quarters, general and personal staff, the heads of all departments, especially the officers of the medical department, whose devotion and care of the wounded in the field, under great danger and exposure, was exemplary,—neither must I omit to thank those good and pious men, the ministers of religion, who so humanely administered to our soldiers in the field in their utmost need, and to the officers commanding brigades and regiments,—my obligations and thanks for the aid and support they have afforded me, and to the officers and soldiers of all arms generally, my admiration of their gallant conduct in the field upon every occasion, and my approbation of the excellent discipline that has been maintained during a series of events of great trial and difficulty.

These great events have not been achieved without severe hardships and suffering, and exposure to all the inclemency of the monsoons, followed by the terrible heat of a meridian sun, during which many noble and daring soldiers were struck down. Yet all these difficulties were overcome with the indomitable spirit of the British soldier, seconded by the devotion and gallantry of the veteran native soldiers of the army.

I cannot conclude without expressing the great pride and satisfaction I feel at having had the honour to command the Bombay army at so important a crisis, under a Government so distinguished as that of Lord Elphinstone, and the hope that the deeds and conduct of this brave army will throw a refutation on the latter days of an old soldier, whose endeavours have been for half a century honourably to serve his sovereign and his country.

The reports of the army will be made, from the 28th instant, to Lieut.-general Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., the distinguished commander of the Central India Field Force, into whose hands it affords me much gratification to hand over the chief command of the Bombay army.

H. SOMERSET, General.

RIVER AND RAIL.—The three enterprises, viz., the Scinde Railway, Indus Steam Flotilla, and Punjab Railway, are in themselves quite distinct, although under one conjoint management; under guarantee from Government of 5 per cent. for ninety-nine years, out of the revenues of India. Now that the Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Company's scheme has been proved a failure, this great undertaking, from embracing a far wider field, and being so much more extensive in its operations, must prove not only successful in itself, but a lucrative investment; from there being a complete and continuous communication established between Kurra- chee and Dadur by means of steam vessels on the Indus, and railway lines from Sukkur on one side; those great emporiums, Peshawur, Lahore, and Umritsur on the other; the extension line between the two last being now in course of completion. While beyond Umritsur the line will be extended to Delhi, on the southern portion we have the extension line from Hyderabad to Deesa, the terminus of the Surat and Baroda Railway. The connecting link in the break of the chain between Lower Scinde and the Punjab will be the steam vessels. The first, or experimental vessel, the Stanley, which will be launched by the end of this month, is a splendid vessel of her class, and admirably adapted for the Indus. She is of light draught and great capacity; she was launched in December, 1858. Her dimensions are, length 200 feet, breadth 38 feet, draught 1 foot 10 inches, speed as a passenger vessel 13 miles an hour, and with 500 tons of cargo on board, 8 miles. Three of the barges have already been launched, and the first tug will be launched in about a fortnight hence. Imports will be conveyed from this by the rail in a few hours to Kotree, whence they will be taken on to Mooltan by this flotilla (which will at present consist of some fifty-three vessels of all denominations, capable of meeting the requirements of 3,045 tons), and, there meeting the Punjab railway, will be by this means carried on to Lahore and Umritsur or Peshawur, in less time than has heretofore elapsed, before a merchant could discover whether any government steamer would be placed at the disposal of the public at all, or when his goods would reach their destination after being once shipped thereon. It is confidently expected that the whole of this magnificent flotilla will with the opening of the next N.E. monsoon be placed on the Indus; then there will be a line of first-class passenger steamers, commodious, perfect in the symmetry of their construction, and capable of carrying forty first-class passengers, with every comfort, at a more moderate rate, and without the obnoxious table money, which we hear is to be abolished, or at least in the mode which formerly prevailed; and we will not then hear the complaints innumerable, now so constant, of discomfort, detentions on passage, &c., which drove so many from this the natural highway to the Punjab and N.W., to adopt a more circuitous route, solely to escape the vexatious delays and disappointments of this direct one. The great activity that exhibits itself everywhere at Keamaree convinces us that these expectations will not be disappointed. At Kotree also they are constructing a steam ferry across the river to Hyderabad.

LIEUTENANT HILLARD, of the Indian navy, has been authorised to survey the position of the dangerous rock notified as lying at the entrance of Port Blair.

Operations against the Wuzerees.

Mily. Depart., Camp Daviepoora,
Feb. 10, 1860.

H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following despatch from the mily. secy. to the govt. of the Punjab, No. 9, dated Feb. 6, 1860, submitting a report of the operations against the Wuzerees by Brig. gen. Chamberlain, C.B., comdg. the Punjab irreg. force, and the reply thereto No. 107 of this date:—

Camp Umritsur, Feb. 6, 1860.
Mily. Depart.

Sir,—In continuation of former correspondence, I am now directed by the Lieut. gov. to forward for the perusal of H.E. the Viceroy a detailed report of the operations against the Wuzerees by Brig. gen. Chamberlain.

2. His honour has perused this lucid and succinct report with great satisfaction. The success which has attended the operations is, in the opinion of the Lieut. gov., remarkable. Indeed, the insignificance of the loss sustained when compared with the results, stamps the character of the operations described as unique among expeditions of the sort. The practical and moral results excel those of any former expedition; a whole tribe has been punished and humbled; three of its leaders have fallen; a vast quantity of property has been seized, and the whole encampment of the enemy has fallen into the hands of our force. Meantime, while this signal lesson was being conveyed, agency was set on foot to collect every sort of information relative to the country and its people, and a map executed which will be invaluable for any future operations.

3. Brig. gen. Chamberlain dwells with peculiar satisfaction on the friendly attitude of the other tribes. This constitutes, in the opinion of the Lieut. gov., one of the most noticeable features in the affair. It is attributable, no doubt, as stated by the Brig. gen. comdg., to the hearty aid of the Khans of our own territory who accompanied the force, and in this active sympathy the Lieut. gov. recognises the fruits of that considerate treatment which it has been the policy of the local govt. to maintain.

4. Implicit reliance was placed on the word of the British officer by the chiefs of the tribes through whose domains the avenging force had of necessity to pass, that if no opposition was attempted property would be respected, and the curious spectacle was exhibited of the women and children of various tribes, watering their flocks and herds in the same pool with the army which was passing through with the avowed object of visiting their guilty neighbours and possible relations with signal retribution.

5. The Lieut. gov. concurs with Brig. gen. Chamberlain in the political importance attached by him to the exhibition of such manifest sympathy and good will on the part of the Khans, many of whose relations have taken service in Hindustan.

6. The excellent services rendered by Capt. James, the commsr. of Peshawur, and Capt. Henderson, the deputy commsr. of Kohat, both of whom accompanied the force, will find mention in the letter from the secy. to the local govt. forwarding the report of the former officer.

7. To Brig. gen. Chamberlain himself, the Lieut. gov. expresses his great obligations. The whole of the arrangements had been left to the judgment and eminent experience of the Brig. gen. How completely his honour was justified in reposing such confidence may be gathered by a perusal of the despatch which the Lieut. gov. has now the satisfaction to forward to H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen.

No. 103.

From Brig. gen. N. Chamberlain, C.B., Comdg.

Dated Camp Kohat, Jan. 15, 1860.

Sir,—The force which has been employed against the Cabool Khail Wuzerees having yesterday returned to cantonments, I have now the honour to furnish a detailed report of its operations whilst engaged on field service.

2. As soon as it was determined to employ a force for the coercion of the tribes implicated in the murder of the late Cupt. Meoham, and for other previous acts of aggression, the necessary measures were at once taken to assemble the required amount of troops at this station; but as Abbottabad and Dera Ishmael Khan had to furnish detachments in addition to those supplied from the nearer cantonments of Peshawur, Murdan, and Campbellpore, some little delay was unavoidable.

3. However, on Dec. 15 the force marched from this; on the 19th it was at Thull (66 miles in advance of Kohat) on the left bank of the Koorum River, and the following morning crossed that stream, and encamped near the village of Billund Khail, now in the territory of his highness the Ameer of Cabool.

4. The troops in camp numbered 3,916 of all ranks. To this number have to be added 1,240 horse, and 1,216 foot levies furnished by this district for temporary employment with the expeditionary force, for the purpose of keeping up the communications, holding posts, supplying escorts, &c., so that in round numbers five thousand three hundred fighting men were employed.

5. As this number may appear large compared to the operations eventually required, I beg to observe that when the expedition was first determined upon, it was impossible to say what numbers might be opposed to us; how far it might be necessary to follow the Wuzerees into the heart of their mountains, when every additional mile would increase the difficulty of keeping open the communication with the rear; or lastly what was the nature of the difficulties to be overcome, the country there being totally unknown to us.

6. It so happened, however, that the appeals made to the neighbouring tribes by the Cabool Khail for assistance were not responded to, partly, I believe, from the measures taken by Capt. Henderson, the deputy commissioner, to keep them aloof, so that this one tribe was left to oppose us unaided from without.

7. The place selected by them to make their stand was a high range of hills called Maidanee; and to this place they had previous to our crossing the Koorum removed all their encampments, including their families, flocks, and herds, and prepared for its defence by storing grain and raising breastworks. Maidanee is about eight miles west of Billund Khail, and its general features may be described as two parallel ranges contiguous to each other, terminating at either end in a gorge, and enclosing a long narrow valley; the inward slopes of both mountains being tolerably easy and covered with grass and bushes, but the outward sides or faces rugged and precipitous. The two gorges, which are the water channels, are the means of entrance to the valley; the one facing the east being termed Guniob, and the other to the South Zukha.

8. From the information supplied by Captain Henderson, it appeared certain that the easiest and nearest approach was from the Guniob side; but there were many reasons to make it desirable to see the Zukha entrance before settling the plan of attack. Accordingly the force was halted at Billund Khail the next day (the 21st Dec.), and in company with other officers, and escorted by a strong detachment of cavalry, I carried out that intention. We found the distance to be about sixteen miles from camp, and from as much as we could see of the gorge without going under fire, not to be inviting. In returning to camp I also rode some little distance up the Guniob ravine, and was able thereby to verify the advantages to be expected by adopting that approach.

9. At six o'clock the following morning, the troops noted in the margin* marched upon Guniob, and, after winding through low hills and ravines for about seven miles, came in front of the first position occupied by the Wuzerees.

10. The guide infantry, supported by the Peshawur mountain train and the 4th Sikh inf., at once ascended the range of hills to the left, whilst the 1st Punjab inf., supported by the Huzara mountain train and 3rd Punjab inf., crowned the range to the right. The left column acted under my own orders; the command of the right column devolved upon Maj. Lambert. The orders for both were to advance along the ridges, and in doing so to keep parallel to each other. The 4th Punjab inf. acted as reserve, with orders to follow up the bed of the ravine (which ran between and separated the two ranges) so as to close that passage, and be ready to afford assistance to either side if required.

11. Maj. Lambert's column was the first in action, it having the easier hill to ascend, and the constant training of the Huzara mountain train over the mountains of Huzara rendering it much more efficient than the Peshawur train. From some cause or other, the Wuzerees had neither raised breastworks on this side nor apparently expected to be assailed from it, and, taken consequently by surprise, offered little or no resistance to his column. This enabled Maj. Lambert to outflank from his side, with the mountain guns, the breastworks held on the opposite range; and to this circumstance may, I believe, be attributed the little loss sustained by the left column.

12. On the left range breastworks had been raised at several points; and at first they were bravely defended. Indeed, the charge by a small body of Wuzerees upon the guide inf. whilst ascending to the attack of the first breastworks, was as gallant a charge as I have ever seen, and elicited the admiration of all who witnessed it. It soon, however, became apparent that they were deficient in fire-arms; and opposed to our arms and discipline, sword and shield and pistol had no chance. Threatened in flank, and pressed in front, they were driven from ridge to ridge at trifling loss to ourselves; and after two hours' tough climbing, we were in possession of the heights above their tents and property, and such of their cattle and flocks as they had not had time to get off remaining below in the valley at our mercy.†

13. It was now past noon; and in the absence of knowledge of the hills in advance, or the enemy's line of retreat, and the troops having then been six hours on foot, and having still to return some miles to camp, possibly followed the whole way, I sounded the halt, and ordered the reserve to be employed in setting fire to the encampments and property. In this work they were zealously assisted by bodies of the foot levies who had followed in rear; and in the course of two hours everything was either destroyed or carried away.

14. To have thus to carry destruction, if not destitution, into the homes of some hundreds of families, is the great drawback to border warfare; but with savage tribes to whom there is no right but might, and no law to govern them in their intercourse with the rest of mankind save that which appeals to their own interests, the only course as regards humanity as well as policy is to make all suffer, and thereby for their own interests enlist the great majority on the side of peace and safety.

† We afterwards learned that it was expected we should attack by the Zukha gorge, from our having reconnoitred in that direction, and the pioneers having been employed the same day in making a gun road below Billund Khail. The main body of the Cabool Khail were, therefore, posted at that entrance.

* Highest 5,000 feet, and about 3,000 above Billund Khail.

15. The work of destruction completed, we commenced to retrace our steps towards camp, which, for convenience, had during the day been moved to a small open space on the Guniob ravine, and about five miles in advance of its former position near Billund Khail. No attempt was made to molest us during our retirement, and we reached our tents at dark, wet through, rain having fallen during the latter part of the day.

16. Our casualties were, as I have previously stated, small, being only one killed and sixteen wounded.

17. Of the enemy's loss I cannot speak for certain, but I heard officers say they had counted fifteen bodies,* and there must have been some wounded.

18. Both the commissioner and deputy commissioner were present in the affair, Capt. James having accompanied me on the left, and Capt. Henderson Maj. Lambert's column on the right.

19. The rain having cleared during the night, it was determined to follow up the advantage of the previous day; so after the soldiers had cooked an early meal, and the tents had dried sufficiently, all the infantry (except the guides) and the two mountain trains returned to Maidanee; whilst the camp, escorted by the guide infantry, field guns, and cavalry, changed ground to Shewa on the Koorum, ten miles below Billund Khail.

20. After passing the mouldering remains of the enemy's encampments, and on nearing the Zukha exit from the valley, Capt. Henderson obtained information which made it appear probable that by crossing over the range to our right, and descending into a small valley named Durnami (which was occupied by the Hussun Khail Wuzeeres, who had declined to assist the Cabool Khail), we might be able to come up with some of the flocks and herds belonging to the latter tribe, as they had fled by that route. Capt. Henderson, therefore, pushed on with some of his levies, whilst I followed in support with a proportion of the infantry and Huzara mountain train, the remainder of the infantry and mountain guns moving straight to camp through the Zukha gorge, taking in route one of the Cabool Khail encampments which had escaped destruction the previous day, but which they had not had leisure to remove.

21. Capt. Henderson's foray proved most successful, and but for night coming on, many more flocks and herds would have fallen into our hands; throughout the day no opposition had been attempted, the few Wuzeerees we saw confining themselves to flourishing their swords from the summit of the hills.

22. That night we all bivouacked in the vale of Durnami. The next morning we commenced our return towards camp, more flocks and herds falling into our hands. Some high ranges which intervene between Durnami and Shewa rendered it necessary to make a long detour via the Rittoo or Rittie River, and it was three in the afternoon before we reached the tents. Rain fell throughout the day, accompanied by a cutting wind; but though many of the men had at last to walk barefooted from their shoes having become worn out by their two days' march over the hills, nothing could have been more cheerful than their manner.

23. Overtures having been received from the Cabool Khail for permission to come in to make terms, the force halted four days at Shewa to enable their chiefs to attend. Advantage was taken of this period to place strong escorts at the disposal of the survey and engineer officers to enable them to map the country in the neighbourhood of camp.

24. Terms having been arranged with the Cabool Khail, the next tribe that had to be settled with was the Torea Khail Wuzeerees, who border upon the Bunnoo district, as they also had harboured robbers who harried the Bunnoo border. Their lands lay to the south of the Rittoo River, and therefore a place on that stream called Speem Walm, distant about ten miles from Shewa, was the most convenient place to move the camp to for coercing them.

25. Before making this move, however, it was deemed advisable to surprise a small section of the Cabool Khail who had separated themselves from the rest of their tribe, and secreted themselves in some very steep hills a few miles to the S.W. of our camp, in the hope of evading discovery. Accordingly, some hours before daylight on the 28th, a detach. moved out under the command of Maj. Rothney, to beat up this party. The difficulty of the route caused more delay than had been anticipated, and the Wuzeerees, becoming aware of the movement, had time to get off most of their cattle. Some of their tents and property, however, were burnt; six of their men were killed or wounded; and some cattle and sheep brought away. On our side one soldier was wounded. The detach. returned to camp at dark, having been on foot almost the whole period of its absence.

26. Early the next morning (29th) the troops noted in the margin* marched under my orders to Speem Walm, the remainder of the force, under the command of Lieut.-col. Lumsden, moving up the river towards Billund Khail, partly for the purpose of securing our communication with the rear, for the sake of supplies, &c., and partly because there was little grass for horses or forage for camels on the Rittoo.

27. The Torea Khail having agreed to the terms required of them, coercion was not needed; but we halted three days at Speem Walm to enable the tribes to bring in their hostages. This time was employed by the surveyors in mapping the country; from the top of the mountain called Durweshta, a most extensive view was obtained, including parts of the Kohat and Bunnoo districts, and the valley of Dour and Khost; advantage was also taken of the opportunity for taking a closer view of Dour by crossing the high plain called Shera Tulla.

28. There being nothing more to detain us at Speem Walm, on the 2nd inst., our camp moved back to the Koorum River to a spot called Kureera, a little below Shewa. Here we were joined by Maj. Taylor, the commissioner, from Bunnoo.

29. We had now settled with the Wuzeerees located on the right bank of the Koorum, but there remained the Gunjee Khail and Omerzai, and Etee or Huttee Khail branches, inhabiting the rugged spurs of the Wullai and Kaffir Kote ranges, on the left bank of the Koorum.

30. During the 3rd instant we had to halt to give the engineers time to blast a passage through a defile, so as to admit of laden camels passing.

31. Early on the 4th I marched with the troops noted in the margin† for Chuppuree, leaving the Peshawur mountain train and 1st and 4th Punj. inf. encamped at Kureera, so as to keep the defile in our rear open. After a march of full twenty miles through defiles, and up to the bed of a large ravine called Zungurrah, we reached the high valley of Chnppuree, and pitched our tents near the only spring of water. Maj. Taylor had informed the tribes of our intention of visiting their country, and called upon the chiefs to meet him there, but promised that life and property should be respected if no opposition was offered; with the example of the Cabool Khail before them, resistance was considered inadvisable; and fully trusting to our word, their encampments remained as usual, and their women and children drove their cattle and flocks to water to the pool in front of us.

32. During the 5th and 6th we remained halted, to enable the civil officers to settle with the tribes. This afforded us ample time for visiting the remarkable group of mountains called Kaffir Kote, and other places from which the surveyors could complete their map.

33. Arrangements having been made with these tribes for the capture and surrender of the actual murderers, the object for which the expedition had been undertaken was accomplished, and the troops were therefore free to return to cantonments.

34. As the 3rd Punjab inf. had previously been under orders to relieve the 2nd Belooch regt. at Dera Ghazee Khan, and the 6th Punjab inf. had marched from Dera Ishmael Khan to join the force, it was a saving of time and money to allow these two corps to proceed to their destinations direct through the hills via Bunnoo; and this plan had the further advantage of exhibiting to the border tribes generally the complete success of the expedition, and our ability to exact reparation when it was our wish to do so; accordingly, when we struck our camp on the 7th instant, the 3rd and 6th Punjab inf., accompanied by Major Taylor, marched by the Burgho Muttuo ravine towards Bunnoo, whilst the remainder of the detachment, under myself, retraced its steps by the route we had advanced. It being late before we left, and the march being a long and tedious one over stones and boulders, we had to pass the night in the Koranga ravine, a few miles short of the Koorum.

35. Next morning we moved to Thull; and Lieut. col. Lumsden and Maj. Lambert's detachments, which had been halted respectively near Billund Khail and at Kureera, having been directed to move theirs likewise, the force again became reunited on the confines of the Kohat district.

36. On our return towards Kohat, we halted one day at Gundiawar, in Upper Meeranzai, to enable the deputy-commissnr. to settle some outstanding cases with the Zymoosht Affghan (independent) tribe. Three more marches brought us into this yesterday, when the force was at once broken up, just a month from the date of its starting.

37. Upon Capt. James, the commissnr., will devolve the duty of reporting upon the political results of the expedition, and I have therefore confined myself to a simple statement of the military details. That there was not more opposition may, I think, be attributed to two causes—first, the strength and efficiency of the force; and secondly, conviction that we merely desired to exact reparation, and not to bring under subjection. In undertaking and carrying out our object in the depth of winter, we have proved an ability to act whenever our honour or our interests may require us to do so; and this circumstance will I am sure not be without its advantage upon all the tribes in this neighbourhood, whether within or without the border. We were certainly greatly favoured as regards weather, and an unusually good fall of rain last summer caused us to find more grass and forage than might always be expected at that season.

38. The spirit and conduct of the troops has been most excellent, and we have returned without the loss of a single follower or animal carried away.

39. The map made by Capt. Johnstone and Pollard will be sent direct by those officers when completed. To have added thus much to our knowledge of this portion of the border is of itself worth the outlay involved by the expedition.

40. Upon the deputy-commissnr., Capt. Henderson, has devolved the duty of providing the carriage necessary to enable the force to move, and of keeping it supplied with provisions. Both duties have been discharged most efficiently. I have also to acknowledge the assistance rendered by him in furnishing intelligence.

41. Before concluding this report, I consider it my duty further to remark upon the cordial assistance rendered by all the Khans of the district who accompanied the camp. They have taken a keen interest in our success, and by their heartiness have doubtless raised the authority of Government in general estimation. I am the more ready to lay stress upon this point, feeling as I do assured that so long as we retain the sympathy of the chiefs and upper class Trans-Indus, so long need there be little fear of any general combination on the part of the mass of the population.

Mil. Dep.

Sir,—Having submitted to H.E. the Gov. gen. your letter, No. 9, dated the 6th inst., forwarding a detailed report of the operations against the Wuzerees by Brig. gen. Chamberlain, C.B., I am directed to state that H.E. entirely concurs with the Hon. the Lieut. gov. in the cordial approbation expressed by his honour of the service rendered by Brig. gen. Chamberlain and his appreciation of the valuable results of that service.

The Gov. gen. directs me to request that the Lieut. gov. will have the goodness to convey to Brig. gen. Chamberlain his best thanks for the promptitude and success with which these important operations have been conducted. On the 15th of Dec. last the force commanded by that officer marched from Kohat, and on the 14th Jan. it returned to that station, having in the short period of one month exacted reparation from Cabool Khail Wuzerees for the support and shelter given by them to the murderers of the late Capt. Meham, and having, while effecting that object, exhibited to the tribes of the districts through which he marched not only the power of the government to reach and punish those among them who are guilty of offence, but its careful forbearance towards all others.

I am directed to request that the Gov. gen.'s thanks may be particularly conveyed to all the officers mentioned by Brig. gen. Chamberlain, and generally to the force which was under his command.

The Gov. gen. attaches great value to the survey of the district through which Gen. Chamberlain marched.

The conduct of Capt. James, commissioner of Peshawur, and Capt. Henderson, deputy commissioner of Kohat, in co-operation with Brig. gen. Chamberlain, will be duly acknowledged by the Gov. gen. in the foreign department.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen.,
Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen.

LORD CLYDE AND H.M.'S 52ND.—After the review of the troops in garrison at Sealkote, by his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general of India, Lord Clyde addressed the 52nd Regiment in the following words:—"Fifty-second Regiment! 'tis now fifty, ay! some fifty-three summers ago, when, a boy fresh from school (I was in the brigade composed of the 9th Regiment, 2nd Battalion 43rd Light Infantry, and 2nd Battalion 52nd Light Infantry, then in Portugal), I found myself in action for the first time under the command of one whose name is familiar to the ears of the gallant regiment now before me (General Sir John Moore), who then were held up for a pattern to the British army, and in whom I now recognise the same soldier-like bearing and discipline which then were so much and justly praised. It has always been the fate of your gallant corps to uphold the honour of your Queen and country in whatever position you have been placed, and to-day I watched with a scrutinising eye your marching past, and cannot too highly compliment you; every head was to the front, and not an eye turned to glance right or left. Fifty-second! It is now many years since I have had the pleasure of seeing you, and to-day you have again truly realised the golden opinions of the olden time, and likewise the good opinion of all who see you or under whom you serve, with credit to yourselves and success to the arms of your country. If I had time to see your further movements in the field, they would, I am confidently assured, please me as well as what I have now witnessed. As I march to-morrow morning, I shall say, Good bye, God bless you all."

Dacca.—More than half of the city of Dacca has been burned down. Upwards of six thousand families have been reduced to destitution. A subscription has been commenced at Dacca, but from the sufferers themselves but little can be collected.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE ETHICS OF WAR.

MR. FRANCIS WILLIAM NEWMAN has enunciated a doctrine in the current number of the Westminster Review, which may possibly astonish the majority of our military readers. According to this talented, but eccentric writer, no soldier should obey orders that are contrary to his conscience. As a rational and responsible being he is entitled, and even bound, to act upon his own convictions. Otherwise, he is no better than a slave—or, rather, he is a mere machine constructed for the worst purposes. Of course, as is usual with dyspeptic writers of this class, England is behind all the other nations of Europe as to the ethics of war. She still clings to barbarous and antiquated practices, chiefly owing to her relations with the people of Asia, who are not only less enlightened than those of Europe, but also hold out temptations which a selfish Power, conscious of superior strength, is unable to resist. It is thus that British soldiers in the East still look for prize-money on the capture of a town, although such a claim would not for a moment be recognised in Europe.

"Our newspaper writers," he continues, "especially those of India, blow up a flame of indignation, and even of disaffection, against the Government if it dares to dispute the 'soldier's right.' A marvellous example was lately exhibited at the siege of Delhi. That city, like unhappy Genoa (in 1799-1800), had been guilty of the crime of weakness. The citizens were unarmed; we had kept them so; and if they had been our staunch and vehement friends, they had not power to resist the mutineers, whom the Hon. East India Company had failed to keep in control. This was an obvious certainty. The inhabitants first suffered taxation, or rather plunder, from our mutineers; next were made guilty by us for the fact; and in the capture were treated with a ferocity such as well vies with any deeds of Russia or Austria; finally, an immense outcry was made against Lord Canning for the injustice of depriving the army of the spoil of Delhi—our own city!"

It is needless to point out the many fallacies with which this exposition of the case abounds. Mr. Newman chooses to forget that the fugitive mutineers from Meerut could easily have been prevented from entering either the city or the palace; nor does it suit him to admit that the citizens took an active part in the murder of helpless Europeans, and in the defence of the place. The statement that the inhabitants had been previously disarmed by us only shows the ignorance or malice of the writer, who never pauses to consider the truth of his assertions, provided they be sufficiently disparaging towards the character of his fellow-countrymen. After comparing the conduct of England towards Ireland, towards her old American colonies, and more recently towards the Caffres, with that of Russia towards Poland, and of Austria towards Hungary, he thus proceeds:—

"Finally, most signally of all, though the Indian armies met us with regular war, we refused to recognise their belligerent rights, denied the possibility that men with skins so black could have a spark of patriotic feeling, or that the Great Mogul, by whose gift and signature we up to that day held our legal position in India, had any royal right to quarrel with us, or to receive the royal homage of his own countrymen. His sons freely surrendered at the smooth-toned persuasion of an English officer, who presently shot them in cold blood at his own will and motion, and was rather admired for it. The king himself was tried by court-martial, and sentenced to ignominious punishment. Captive soldiers were deliberately killed by the hundred—we fear by the thousand,—to say nothing of the unarmed population strung up in lines on suspicion, or without public trial. Regiments which desired to lay down their arms, and stipulated for nothing but their lives, were again and again refused this privilege. Finally, when all our fears were calmed, when no hot blood remained, when extravagant falsehood had been exposed, Tantia Topee, the last, perhaps the most gallant of their leaders, was betrayed to us for money, and hanged."

It will be seen that throughout this scolding about Mr. Newman affects to regard the mutinous sepoys as patriots waging a legitimate war to shake off a foreign yoke. He cares nothing for their violation of the sanctity of a military oath of allegiance—nothing for their foul and treacherous murder of their officers—nothing for their brutal outrages upon helpless women—nothing for their fiendish torture and immolation of innocent children. In his eyes these blood-stained mutineers are a gallant but unfortunate enemy, entitled to all the grim courtesies of regular warfare, and worthy of admiration for their valour, and of sympathy for their noble devotion to their country. Had the Pays, or the Patrie, or the Moniteur de l'Armée, written in this strain of the late hideous struggle in the Upper and Central Provinces of India, there would have been little cause to marvel. But that there should exist any Englishman, except Mr. Bright, so utterly wrong-headed as this article proves Mr. Newman to be, inspires us with as much astonishment at such an extraordinary aberration of judgment, as pity for the victim of such an unhappy delusion, which argues the heart to be as much at fault as the head. Neither can we compliment the editor of the Westminster Review on the taste or good feeling that has permitted him to insert an article so little creditable to its author, or to the periodical in which it is published.

THE HILL TRIBES ABOVE THE MUNNIPORE VALLEY.

WE resume our analysis of Major McCulloch's Report, passing upwards from the valley of Munnipore to the hills by which it is surrounded. The first tribe to be noticed is that of the Koupocees, who inhabit the mountainous tract stretching eastward from Cachar, a hardy, low-nosed, and diminutive race. Every village, usually composed of families connected with one another by blood ties, is surrounded by a stockade or rampart of stones, as a defence alike against their neighbours and wild beasts. Until their subjection to the people of the valley these mountaineers were ever at feud among themselves, and there are even villages which will not drink of a running stream that flows by the habitations of ancient foes. Their graveyards are an object of veneration and attachment in the eyes of the Koupocees, and if ever it is their lot to remove to other lands they continually sigh to return to the tombs of their ancestors. C'est la cendre des morts qui créa la patrie. A certain space around each village is considered the property of the inhabitants, but the soil is so poor that in the absence of manure it requires to lie fallow after each crop for ten years, in the course of which interval a perfect jungle grows up which has to be cleared away before any seed can be sown. Fortunately, wild yams are so plentiful that no man need starve. The jungle being cut down is left on the ground until it is quite dry, when it is set on fire and the ashes dug into the ground with little hoes that barely scratch the surface.

"They measure their cultivation by the number of baskets required for seed. Across the field in parallel lines, at no great distance apart, they lay the unconsumed trunks of the trees; these serve as dams to the water which comes down the face of the hill when it rains, and as preventives to the soil being carried away with it. In bamboo jungle, the bamboo stumps serve the same purpose. The field has to be constantly watched against the depredations of birds and wild beasts, and, weeds being very rapid of growth, to be frequently weeded."

The houses of the Koupooes are large and substantially built, with gable ends, having the ridge-pole sloping from the front to the rear, and the thatched roof on either side reaching the ground. Grain and food, and other movables, are stored in small outhouses raised a few feet above the ground, the walls and floors being of bamboo-matting. Of the domestic life of these mountaineers Major McCulloch draws a very striking picture.

"In the grey of the morning the females of the family are astir, and the village resounds with the blows of the long pestle in the wooden mortar beating out the rice from the husk. This finished, breakfast is cooked both for the family and the pigs—for the latter, the husk mixed with other refuse serves the purpose. Breakfast over, which is usually about sunrise, the women proceed for water, which they fill into bamboo tubes and bring in on their backs in baskets. Then they go for firewood, and, this brought, they set about the internal economy of the house—that is, to see to their husbands' drink being in proper quantity and quality, to their spinning or to their weaving, or any of the other household occupations except sweeping the house clean, an act in which they have no pride. In fact, they rather seem to glory in a dirty house, and in having the front room half covered with rice-husk, in which pigs are lying fast asleep, or grunting about, and fowls are busy seeking for food. The family, except the boys, from the time they begin to wear a cloth round their waist, sleep in the rear room of the house, and in it they also cook their meals. In the front part any one who comes in sits down. In it there is a fire-place, and along the two sides are placed boards, or bamboo platforms, for sitting or lying upon. Some of these boards are as much as twenty-four feet long by four broad. They are made with their daos and little axes, a whole tree being destroyed in getting one. If not employed in the labours of the field or the chase, the men do little more than loiter about the house during the day, drinking their peculiar drink, a harmless one, consisting of pounded rice mixed with boiling water brought into fermentation by the addition of germinated paddy. In the mornings and evenings they will generally be found sitting in groups in front of their houses on large flat stones which cover the graves of deceased relations. They then appear to be enjoying themselves greatly; they are exceedingly loquacious and speak always in a loud tone. Pipes containing green tobacco are then smoked, and at such a rate do they pull they appear to be smoking for a wager. I believe the pleasure of smoking is nothing to them compared to that of holding in the mouth a sip of the water of the bowl of the pipe which has been well impregnated with the fumes of the smoke passing through it, and that it is only for the purpose of obtaining this that they so laboriously pull at their pipes morning and evening."

Theft is punished with severity, though young unmarried men are permitted to steal grain from the fields with impunity, but not from granaries. Young men and boys live together in separate houses from their own family, young women also having their peculiar places of resort, though intercourse between the two sexes is free and unrestrained, but without exceeding the bounds of morality. Marriages are nevertheless arranged by the parents. The ordinary price of a wife is seven buffaloes, two daos, two spears, two strings of beads made of conch-shell, two ear-ornaments, two black cloths, two eating vessels, two hoes, and what is called meilón, which may be an article either of small or considerable value. Runaway matches, however, are not uncommon—the enamoured couple usually fleeing to the house of a friend in the same village, who intercedes for them and reconciles them with their parents.

"On the death of a man's wife the extraordinary practice exists of taking from her husband 'mundoo,' or the 'price of her bones.' If he be alive, this will be demanded by her father,—in fault of the father, by her nearest of kin. 'Mundoo' is also payable on the death of their children. On each demand of 'mundoo,' the demander kills a pig—the 'mundoo,' or price, is fixed at one buffalo. No 'mundoo' is payable for persons killed by enemies or wild beasts, or whose death has been caused by any swelling, or the cholera, or small-pox. Should a woman die in childbirth, her child is not permitted to live, but is buried with her. If the husband should die before the wife, the wife is taken by her husband's brother. She cannot return to her parental home as long as there are any near relations of her husband remaining. Polygamy is permitted, but not largely practised."

With the exception of the drum the Koupooes have no musical instrument, though fond of dance and song. Their singing, however, appears to consist chiefly of the repetition of the sounds hau-hau, expelled from the lungs in different notes and in a sort of tune. The women have a genuine feminine love of ornaments, but are obliged to content themselves with glass beads and brass armlets, while the men indulge in necklaces of a red pebble which is highly prized. Considerable hospitality is displayed on the occasion of the death of a relative, and sorrowing friends endeavour to assuage their grief by doing justice to the "funeral baked meats." The grave is dug by connections of the family on the female side, who receive for their labour the best dao and spear of the deceased. Some arms and a hoe are usually deposited beside the body, and the mouth of the tomb—a vault or tunnel in the mountain side—is closed with large stones, and the entrance covered with earth. One of the great festivals of the year takes place in January, when men and women eat plentifully of roast pork in their separate clubs, and fetch each the water they require for their separate use. The rejoicings last for three days, and at their termination the omens are taken for the agricultural operations of the ensuing season. In February another festival of three days' duration is held, in which the ears of children are pierced, born during the past twelvemonth. After the jungle has been cut down and the ground prepared for cultivation, the feast of "Oodoee Yung," or drinking the juice of ginger, occurs; and in July they celebrate the clearing of the paths around their villages. One night's jollity takes place in August, and another in September, after which they lead a life of tolerable sobriety until the five days' festival of the Eenghan in December, when dance and song are kept up almost without interruption. On the sixth day they set their stockade in order, and take the omens for the following year. If the watchman hear a noise like the dragging of wood, much mischief may be expected from tigers—if a sound like the falling of leaves reach his ear, sickness will be prevalent. The latter is the more serious calamity of the two, for, the practice of medicine being confined to the propitiation of certain deities, a sick man either sinks beneath the disease, or recovers only to find himself utterly ruined—even his wife and children having been sold to furnish materials for the propitiatory sacrifices. The Koupooes believe in a Supreme Being, the Creator of all things, and have some glimmering of a future state after the fashion of the Red Indians.

"Besides this Supreme Being, they believe in the existence of many other deities. To these, for residence, they assign certain localities as the highest peaks, or great crags impracticable to the climber. They propitiate these with offerings of goats, fowls, eggs, ginger, cotton, or even a twig, or a leaf plucked from any plant. Heaps of these votive leaves may be noticed by the traveller near the crests of the hills, devoutly dropped there by the hill-man with a silent prayer for the protection of the divinity."

The Koupooe is remarkable among hill-men for his comparative cleanliness: if not very regular in his ablutions, he has been known occasionally to bathe. With regard to the restrictions of caste he has no prejudices, but eats everything that comes in his way, eschewing only milk. There are two subdivisions, it should have been stated, of this tribe, the Songboos and the Pooeers, agreeing in customs and manners, but differing so widely in language as to be unintelligible to one another: in their mutual intercourse they accordingly make use of the Mumpore dialect.

Another tribe are the Khongjais or Kookies, formerly dwelling to the south of the Koupooes, but now occupying the hills of North and South Cachar, whence they have lately descended into the plains, marking their course with murder and devastation. This people has a strange tradition to the effect that their progenitors originally issued from the bowels of the earth. In pursuit of a hedgehog a dog belonging to the king's brother entered a cavern, but never came back. After waiting some time, the royal and subterranean sportsman followed the track of the animal, and suddenly found himself on the surface of the earth. Delighted with the discovery, he returned to his brother, and, relating his adventure, urged him to remove the village to this new-found land.

"To this the king agreed, and, having made their arrangements, they started on their journey. They had arrived near the surface when they found in the way a large serpent which opposed their further progress, and saw that the orifice by which they were to emerge had over it a great stone, kept open merely by the support a bird gave it with its legs. On seeing this, the people of the village began to abuse the king's brother, accusing him of having deceived them, and of having brought them from their burrow to deliver them to the serpent. Stung with their reproaches, the king's brother attacked and killed the snake, and he and the greater portion of the village emerged into the light. Meanwhile, the king, having discovered that a wooden dish, or bowl, which had the magical property of always being full of meat, and some other articles of a similar magical description, were not amongst his effects, returned to fetch them. Before he got back, the bird, having got tired of supporting the stone, had let it fall, and, unable to raise it, he and his wife had to remain below. Attributing the closing of the orifice to the ambition of her brother-in-law to become king, Nemnik, the king's wife, cursed him and those who had gone up with him, to suffer from diseases hitherto unknown to them. This curse, they say, is still upon them, and when disease presses them sorely, they sacrifice to Nemnik a methun in mitigation of her wrath. . . . In explanation of their separation into tribes with different languages, they relate that the three grandsons of the above chief, while one day all playing together in their house, were told by their father to catch a rat; that they were busy about it, when, being suddenly struck with a confusion of tongues, they were unable to effect their object. . . . Thus they broke into distinct tribes."

Among the Khongjais the Rajah is not only an hereditary chief, but also vested with real authority—which is not the case generally among the hill tribes. He receives a revenue in kind, and is entitled to certain kinds of service from his subjects, such as building or repairing his house, cultivating his land, &c., &c. Though descent is strictly in the male line, the Rajah is frequently governed by his wife, and during a minority the management of affairs is usually intrusted to the widow of the deceased chieftain. The Kookies, or Khongjais, are addicted both to war and the chase. Their favourite weapon is a poisoned arrow, about eighteen inches long, with a barbed iron point, which, though delivered with no great force, usually proves fatal—even the elephant sinking beneath the deadly touch of a spear dropped on him from an impending bough. They suffer greatly from the ravages of small-pox, on the appearance of which disease a village is immediately scattered, as no cure is known or attempted.

"The Kookies," says Lieut. Stewart—quoted by Major McCulloch—"are a short, sturdy race of men, with a goodly development of muscle. Their legs are, generally speaking, short, in comparison with the length of their bodies, and their arms long. Their complexion differs little from that of the Bengalee, and comprises various shades, but the features are most markedly dissimilar; the face is nearly as broad as long, and is generally round or square; the cheek-bones high, broad, and prominent; eyes small and almond-shaped; and the nose short and flat, with wide nostrils. The women appear more squat than the men even, but are strong and lusty, and quite as industrious and indefatigable as the Naga women, working hard all day either at home or in the fields, and accustomed to carry heavy loads. The men, like the Nagas, are inclined to be lazy, though not to such an extent as that tribe. They love to sit on high platforms, raised for the purpose in their villages, and pass the day in conversation and smoking. Men, women, and children, all smoke to the greatest excess. A Kookie is hardly ever seen without a pipe in his mouth, and one of his few means of calculating time and distance is by the number of pipes he smokes. The men smoke a pipe, the bowl of which is either made of brass, rudely ornamented, or of the end of a small bamboo tube, a reed (it is like a reed, but is a bamboo) being let in near the knot as a mouth-piece. The women have a bowl with water in it attached to their pipes, and the smoke in passing through impregnates the water with its fumes. This fumigated water is filled into little bamboo tubes and other reservoirs, in which it is carried about by the men, who occasionally sip of it, retaining it in the mouth some time before spitting it out again, and on meeting a friend hand it to him as a mark of courtesy. They also chew tobacco in great quantities. They are filthy in person to an inconceivable degree. A cloth round the waist, in the fashion of the Koupooes, is worn by individuals, but generally this is dispensed with, and the only covering of the body is a coarse sheet, in the disposing of which, for the concealment of their person, they are adepts. They all wear head-dresses or turbans of cotton cloth, or silk, in the folding of which they are very expert. The women wrap a scanty strip of cloth round their persons, sufficient to prevent them from being called naked; over their shoulders they throw a sheet, or, if young, wrap it round their bodies under the armpits. They have no head-dress, but a luxuriant crop of not coarse hair, which is parted in the middle and plaited at the sides, the plaits being passed round the back of the head and tied in front over the forehead."

There are many other tribes, but the description of one is, with very slight variations, applicable to all. The Looloopas, however, deserve to be distinctively noticed by reason of their exceeding great fierceness. They live in a normal state of active and open feud with one another. When the quarrel between two villages is of unusual bitterness, they kill man, woman, and child, wherever and however they can. In other cases they confine themselves to the slaughter of men alone, and that within certain fixed bounds. Sometimes a particular village will hold others in subjection, and exact from them a tribute in cloth, boasting the while that their own women need not to spin or weave. The Looloopas is superior in stature to the other hill-men, and, when arrayed for battle, is a very savage-looking animal indeed—the tresses of women he has murdered hanging on either side of his head-dress.

In conclusion, we may be allowed to express a regret that the very interesting Reports drawn up by Indian officials are not edited previous to publication. Though full of valuable information, they are apt to repel any ordinary reader by the minuteness of their details, which are given without reference to their relative importance. The style, also, is generally unworthy of the subject, being either inflated or meagre in the extreme, while the construction of the sentences is ungrammatical to a degree that is astonishing in any decently-educated English gentleman.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 17.

INDIAN FINANCE.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether he could explain the difference between the estimated deficiency of the Indian revenue to meet expenditure, which was stated by himself on the 1st of August at £10,250,000, and the estimate of £8,449,981 given in a financial balance-sheet drawn up by the Indian Government last September, as well as the amount of that deficiency as estimated at £9,290,129 by Mr. Wilson in his statement to the Legislative Council on the 18th of February at Calcutta?

Sir C. Wood said he had no doubt that Mr. Wilson's estimate, being the most recent, was the most correct of the three. The cause of the discrepancy he could not very exactly ascertain. He stated last summer that the revenue was £35,850,000. The Government of India in September stated it to be £37,567,000, and Mr. Wilson, in February, stated it at £37,707,000. The fact was, that there had been a very satisfactory increase of revenue over the estimate he gave to the House last August, speaking at that time from information obtained late in the spring. He was happy to say that almost every source of revenue in India showed a considerable increase for the year; the land revenue as well as the customs' revenue, and some small taxes which had been imposed, were very productive. The result was, that the Indian revenue was two millions better than had been estimated. As for the expenditure, he had stated in the summer that it was estimated at £39,380,000. The Government of India had since estimated it at forty-four millions, and Mr. Wilson now stated it at above forty-six millions. There were some items of expenditure of which the Government of India were not aware in September last, but which had since come in, amounting to a million additional; besides which, the Indian Government, in their statement of September, omitted the interest on railway capital, amounting to £800,000 or £900,000, and they underrated the home charges. There was still, however, a difference of £600,000 or £700,000 in the estimated expenditure, which he could not yet account for. It partly arose, he believed, from extra expenditure on public works, but even Mr. Wilson's statement, lucid and satisfactory as it was, did not sufficiently explain it.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.

At the annual meeting of the proprietors of this bank, held at the offices, 27, Cannon-street, on Saturday, April 14, the directors presented the following report:—

"In meeting the proprietors, on the occasion of the twenty-sixth annual general meeting of the bank, the directors have much pleasure in laying before them the usual audited accounts for the twelve months ended 31st December last. After writing off any balances which were deemed irrecoverable, and making adequate provision for doubtful accounts, the directors have been enabled, from the profits of this period, to declare (free of income-tax) two half-yearly dividends, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum each, and to add to the last a bonus of one pound per share, thus making the return equivalent to 12 per cent. per annum. There remaining an available balance of £30,302. 0s. 2d., the directors have placed £15,000 thereof to credit of the reserve fund, thus increasing that fund to £190,000, and have carried forward £12,302. 0s. 2d. to credit of the present year. With the further sum of £3,000 they have, with reference to clause 55 of the deed of settlement, opened a superannuation fund account, considering that provision for this eventual liability should be gradually made by moderate appropriations from the yearly profits. In order to provide further for the heavy and fast-increasing duties of the head office, the directors have recently nominated Mr. William Shipman, late a manager of the National Discount Company, as their London manager, and they are glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of expressing their confident belief that favourable results will follow this appointment. The directors regret to announce the deaths, at Bombay, in May last, and at Agra, in January, of Mr. J. G. H. Brown, and Mr. A. H. Matthews, respectively managers of those branches, and the resignation of Mr. David Allardice, their manager at Madras; in succession to whom Mr. Hugh Bowie Macculloch, Mr. William Birks, and Mr. Edward Morris have been named to officiate in those several charges. Mr. Alexander Rinnington, one of your directors, having in the course of last year had occasion to return to India, the board, under the 45th clause of the deed, had much pleasure in inviting Mr. John Carrington Palmer, a former colleague, to fill the vacancy, and under his re-appointment he solicits, on the present occasion, his re-election from the proprietary."

The report and accounts were adopted, and the four retiring directors re-elected. A resolution was also passed, expressing the regret of the meeting at the loss of the services of their general manager, Mr. Francis Robert Neilson, whose decease at Boulogne, within the last week, was announced.

ORIENTAL BANK.

The directors have the pleasure of presenting to the proprietors their ninth annual report, and the general statement of affairs and balance-sheet for 1859. The accounts are made up as usual to Dec. 31, and the net profit, after defraying current expenses, and writing off all bad and doubtful debts, amounts to £226,008. 2s. 1d. A dividend of five per cent. for the first half-year of 1859 has already been paid, and it is proposed now to pay a like dividend for the subsequent half-year, together with a bonus of seven per cent., making for the year a distribution of profit equal to 17 per cent. on the capital of the company. The present dividend and bonus, amounting to £3 per share, will be paid, free of income-tax, on and after the 1st proximo, at the office of the corporation; and after these payments have been provided for there will remain a balance of £11,808. 2s. 1d. to be carried forward to the credit of the next year's account. In last year's report the proprietors were informed that the Indian Government securities belonging to the corporation had been adjusted to the market price of the day. The value of these securities has since then much improved; and although, pending a settlement of Indian financial affairs, no re-adjustment of the account has been considered advisable, the directors think it will be satisfactory to the proprietors to learn that this investment stands in a favourable position. The directors whose respective terms of office expire are: Mr. Cargill, Mr. Gordon, and Mr. Bonhote; and these gentlemen, being re-eligible, offer themselves accordingly, and the court have pleasure in recommending their re-election. It will also devolve on the meeting to choose two auditors for the current year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

STEAM TRAIN FOR THE INDIAN RIVERS.—Last week we mentioned that a train of barges, built by Messrs. John Reid and Co., of Port-Glasgow, for the Oriental Inland Steam Company of London, had just been tried on the Clyde with the most satisfactory results; and as this train constitutes a composite vessel of larger dimensions than any yet constructed, and as the problem of navigating the shallow rivers of India is one of great interest and importance, it will be satisfactory if we here record some of the main particulars of the dimensions and performance. The train consists of a steamer and five barges, of the collective length of 900 feet, being nearly half as long again as the Great Eastern. The breadth of the train is 30 feet, and the depth of the hold about 7½ feet. The draught of the barges, when light, is about 10 inches, and it is reckoned that, on a draught of 2½ feet, the train will carry about 2,000 tons of cargo. The engines, which are on the high and low pressure principle, have been constructed by Messrs. Fawcett, Preston, and Co., of Liverpool; but, as the steam section of the train is not yet completed, the train was, on this first occasion, moved by two small tugs. The boilers, which are on the locomotive principle, supply steam of a pressure of 100 lbs. per square inch, and this steam, after having first produced power in two high pressure cylinders, passes into two condensing cylinders, by which expedient the power is nearly doubled without any increase in the consumption of fuel. The engines are furnished with superheaters, external condensers, and all other modern improvements. The different barges of the train are articulated to one another by means of circular joints, so as virtually to constitute a long flexible vessel presenting only one bow to the water, and by this arrangement the resistance incident to the ascent of a rapid river is greatly less than it would be if any other species of vessel were employed. The train, though so long and of such large dimensions, was found to be perfectly manageable, and capable of being steered with certainty and ease. Other trials will be made when the steam section of the train is completed, and the speed realised will then be ascertained. But, so far as the present trial goes, it has been successful and satisfactory in every respect.—Greenock Advertiser.

STEAM-VESSELS FOR THE GANGES.—The first of the steam-vessels designed by the Oriental Inland Steam Company for the navigation of the Ganges has just been tried on the Mersey. This vessel, which draws two feet of water, is 250 feet long and 30 feet beam, and is propelled by two high-pressure engines of 200 horse-power nominal, but working up to about 800 actual horse-power. The speed attained on the trial trip was about 14 miles an hour, with 31 to 32 revolutions of the wheels per minute, but as many as 30 revolutions per minute were obtained for part of the time. The engines are formed with inclined cylinders, of 26 inches diameter and 6 feet-stroke; and the pressure of the steam is 100 lbs. per square inch. The steam is supplied by four boilers on the locomotive principle of great strength. The vessel is trussed, both longitudinally and transversely, with wrought-iron pipes, which are effective in withstanding both extension and compression. As this vessel has more power and a lighter draught of water than any now upon the Ganges, and also a higher rate of speed, her establishment upon that river is looked forward to with great interest. The Jumna, a sister vessel, is also nearly ready, and these vessels, it is expected, will inaugurate a new era in the navigation of the Ganges, as combining greater power and speed, and a lighter draught of water, than any heretofore introduced upon any of the Indian rivers.—Liverpool Albion.

SIXTY YEARS OF SUCCESS HAVE PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL possesses extraordinary properties for promoting the growth and improving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of Whiskers, the Beard, and Mustachios, it is unfailling in its stimulative operation. For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR, while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the numerous Testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION.—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," &c., in white letters, and their Signature, "A. ROWLAND AND SONS," in Red Ink. Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years.

"W. J. NEWMAN.

"Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children." Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite restraining power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumstance of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

In all sores, wounds, and sprains, Holloway's Ointment is the most effectual application. It at once gives ease by allaying inflammation, and moderating the flow of blood to the part. Whenever the malady has been of long standing, the Ointment should be assisted by Holloway's purifying Pills, which act upon the stomach and liver; guarding digestion from falling into that disordered state which the pain, restlessness, and fever attending these ailments is apt to produce, and which much retards recovery, and sometimes even makes serious the slightest case. No mother or nurse should want these noble remedies, equally applicable to all ages and constitutions. They purify the blood, regulate its circulation, renew diseased structures, and invigorate the system.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBERRY

sold Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of FEVER, RHEUMATISM, VIOLENT COLDS, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name —P. NEWBERRY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, London.

Price 1s. post-free.

PULVERMACH'S MEDICO-GALVANIC Improved System of SELF-APPLICATION, of the Patent GALVANIC ANTI-RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS, demonstrating the unequalled success obtained by their use in the treatment of Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, The Morueux, Deafness, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and Loss of Nervous or Functional Force. Most interesting Book, popularising the wonderful results of Medical Galvanism, based on the soundest teachings of physiology, verified and tested by the first Authors and Physicians of the world, and stating innumerable overwhelming authentic facts of prompt cures of long-standing diseases. Price 1s. (post-free). Direct from J. L. Pulvermacher and Co., 73, Oxford-street, London (adjoining Princess's Theatre). All Booksellers, News Agents, and appointed Agents for the sale of the Chain-Bands.

N.B.—Chains, 6s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to electric power.

BLAIR'S GOUT &amp; RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per box. This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT IS

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BASCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD PRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial Teeth and Gums, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College).

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,

PURE AND MIXED,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS,

handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

POSTAGE.

Via Southampton (pre-payment compulsory), letters under

1 oz. 6s. 6d.	2 oz. 2s. 6d.	4 oz. 4s. 6d.

For all countries or places eastward of Suez, the charge is 2d., whatever the weight of the newspaper.

Books under 1 lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional 1 lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd of March is as barren of news as can well be imagined. Even the riots in Lower Bengal fail to afford matter for either brilliant editorials or indignant local correspondence. The Englishman is chiefly taken up with eulogising Mr. Wilson's measures, and evidently regards the right hon. gentleman as the most remarkable man of the times. We can only hope that, when the smoke clears away, this financial Asmodeus may not turn out to be a diable boiteux, with crotchets for crutches.

The Hurkaru, on the other hand, devotes many a column to the reprobation of the magistrates who have endeavoured to hold the balance even between the deluded ryots and the impatient planters. Mr. Herschel seems to have given especial offence, by declaring that the ryots who hold midnight meetings to concert measures of ruin and intimidation are acting as "constitutionally" as the planters who met at Shikarpore to consider what course to adopt for their self-protection. There is, however, this trifling difference between the conduct of the two parties—the former assemble for illegal purposes, and for the avowed object of evading their contracts; while the latter did so in order to protect themselves from the outrages of the peasantry. The Lieutenant-Governor, however, is admitted to have acted with firmness, promptitude, and impartiality; and Mr. Seance had undertaken to introduce a Bill in the Legislative Council, on Saturday, the 24th of March, "for the summary enforcement of indigo contracts." But the question arises—Will the rains hold off until the authorities shall have compelled the refractory ryots to sow the stipulated quantity of seed? In some districts the planters were already apprehensive that the rain would fall before the ryots could be induced to commence the cultivation of the plant. Perhaps the most serious part of the affair is that the ryots are learning the power of combination, and have found a leader in a Baboo, who pledges himself to be the Nana of Bengal, and has assumed the high-sounding title of "Mohamoheemo Neelbungsho Dunkshokaree Sreejookto Baboo Neelmar Ramrutton Mullick, Sudder Kutcherri, Joyrampore," the translation of which is "The Uprooter of the Indigo race, Baboo Indigo-destroyer Ramrutton Mullick."

Unpleasant rumours are afloat as to the fate of two British gunboats in the Gulf of Pecheli. It was reported in Canton that the Dove and Algerine had been sunk by the Chinese, but the Sampson had left them on the 4th of March in a safe position, far beyond the range of the guns on the forts. Evil tidings, however, have an unfortunate faculty for rapid flight.

The news from Japan is more certain, but not more favourable. Two Dutch skippers have been murdered in the streets of Yokohama, apparently without having afforded the slightest provocation. It is probable that as our successes in China induced the Japanese to turn a ready ear to Lord Elgin's propositions, so our late disaster before the Taku forts may have encouraged them to attempt a return to their former isolation. In this, however, they are not very likely to succeed.

BENGAL.

THE AGRARIAN OUTRAGES.

The state of the indigo districts is beginning to excite serious alarm. Whatever the cause, whether the hereditary dislike to the cultivation, or the instigation of Calcutta baboos, the ryots exhibit a novel obstinacy of purpose. The Lieutenant-governor's notification is treated as idle talk, and the peasantry openly express their determination to sow no more indigo. This resolution would in any case be fatal to a most important trade, but accompanied as it is by a refusal to refund the advances received, it threatens the planters with immediate and total ruin. It is not in human nature to endure ruin, so produced, with resignation, and the planters despairing of aid from the authorities, are falling back with the instinct of Englishmen on themselves. The consequence, unless the danger is removed by wise expedients instantly adopted, will be a repetition of the disorders for which Bengal twenty years ago was so notorious. No class of men will be cheated and despoiled by their own labourers, their stacks fired, their houses menaced, and their persons insulted, and then contentedly await the action of the worst civil courts in existence for an appearance of redress.

Our sympathies are always rather with the employed than the capitalist, but in the new phase the disturbances are assuming the ryots are hopelessly in the wrong. No legislation, not even that of England, permits a servant to fling up his work without due and sufficient notice. Still less does it permit a contractor to withdraw from his engagements, even though he has received no money in hand. Advances are not common in England except for harvest work, but the reaper who with his "earnest" paid refused to reap, would be in prison before the day had ended. In the case of a cultivation like indigo which has endured for fifty years, and in which millions have been embarked on the faith of customs as strong as laws, what does fair notice mean? Certainly not less than one season. That any man should be held to labour for an indefinite time is repugnant to our interests as well as our laws, but a hop grower who chose to grow mangel wurzel would not be held excused by that whim from delivering his tale of hops. One season's notice the ryot should be compelled to give. After that let him and the planter make the best arrangement on which they can agree. A rise in price will settle most questions with a Bengalee.

We shall be told that compulsion, except by means beyond the law, is out of the question. It is not. Let Government in the first place remove every magistrate, good, bad, and indifferent in the three zillahs, as being too deeply compromised on one side or the other. Let them replace these gentlemen by picked men, to carry out not planter or ryote notions, but the policy Government may adopt. Then fling the Contract Act, already in force in Calcutta, over the three districts for a twelve-month, and see that it is rigidly carried out. Resistance will then be resistance to the law, and can be very easily suppressed. Before the end of the year of grace both sides must have come to some agreement, more or less in accordance with common sense, and the changed circumstances of the country. That indigo will suffer is possible, but high prices, like high taxes, are very apt to elicit new energies, and enforce an unthought of economy. If the trade really cannot afford higher prices the trade must decline. Forced trades are of no benefit to a nation, and no power short of a slaveholding law will keep ryots permanently cultivating produce which brings less return than rice. But the gradual decline of a trade is a very different thing from its sudden extinction under a menace of a jacquerie.

The only other course open to Government is to maintain strict order, and do nothing.

That course is always the one pleasant to the merely official mind, which praises laissez faire because it is unable to devise new plans. But in this instance that course will involve these unpleasant results. Government will lose the greater part of their indigo revenue, or Rs. 2,50,000 a year. They will have to double their police force, and perhaps to employ European troops. They will have three of the richest districts first thrown into a state of anarchy, and then deprived of a trade which, whatever its other merits, brings into them a million sterling a year. And finally, they run the risk that the peasantry, victorious over both the planters and the State, should inquire why they, in theory owners of the soil, should continue to pay rent. The Sonthals who broke out against the Mahajuns finished by assaults upon the rent collecting machinery. And the Government will have incurred this loss, expenditure, and risk, destroyed a great trade, and pauperised a whole class of their subjects, for what? To protect a body of labourers in an attempt to swindle their employers.—Friend of India.

DEHREE—A NEW CANTONMENT.

A new station, which has scarcely attracted the attention of the public, is springing up at no very great distance from Calcutta. Its site is on the left bank of the Soane, at its junction with the Grand Trunk Road, about twelve miles east of the town of Sasseram. Judging from the extent of works in progress at the place, it appears to be the intention of Government to found a cantonment of some importance at this spot. Twenty iron-framed barracks, for a European infantry regiment, of a design superior to any yet built, are now in course of construction. Each affords accommodation for half a company: A mess-room, with broad verandahs supported by cut stone pillars, gives the barracks a really handsome appearance; the pillars are each formed of one block of close-grained sandstone, quarried from the adjacent Rhotas hills, which form a good back-ground about ten miles in rear, as viewed from the road. There are also two large hospitals of the same design as the barracks, each about three hundred feet long, and connected by a colonnade, with a dispensary thrown back a short distance in rear.

Viewed as a whole from the Soane, with half-a-dozen bungalows dotting the river bank, and the numerous out houses studded about them, and the barracks, the station already begins to assume a striking appearance, and puzzles most travellers who are unaware of its existence. Some imagine on awakening from the rest-less slumbers they have been indulging in during the night that they have arrived opposite Raj Ghat, Benares. Lying north of the Trunk Road, the lines of two native regiments, one infantry, one cavalry, are in the course of formation. Occupying the higher ground above this appears the commencement of the officers' bungalows, not yet, certainly, very far advanced towards completion, but in a progressive state. Meanwhile the unfortunate officers of the 63rd N.I. are forced to submit to expense, and to privations worse than any expense, till they can put roofs over their heads.

The new station is a military necessity. Probably many of our readers may not be able to call to mind the operations performed by Colonel Turner, C.B., commanding the Grand Trunk Road during 1858-59, and his successful pursuit after the rebels who tried to effect their escape from Mirzapore into the Rhotas hills during the early part of 1859. Up to the end of June, 1859, it was found absolutely necessary to maintain a show of force in their neighbourhood. Experience proved that troops stationed at Dehree were singularly free from illness, while those at Sasseram, twelve miles distant, were dying in numbers. This was brought to the notice of General Sir W. Mansfield on his inspection in the early part of 1859, and on visiting the locality he unhesitatingly pronounced Dehree one of the finest sites he had seen for a cantonment. The strength of the force to be quartered in Dehree is one regiment of European infantry, one regiment of Native infantry, one battery of artillery, and one wing of cavalry. Should it ever be the misfortune of Bengal to be threatened from the North West, Dehree with Benares and Dinapore will form three sides of a triangle, a strong basis on which to co-operate in resisting invasion. Shahabad was only second to Oude in supplying recruits to the Sepoy army. The new station will overawe Behar; it will form a point d'appui, useful for offence or defence, as occasion might offer.

During the six months a company of H.M.'s 77th was at Dehree not one fatal case occurred among them, although they suffered from the epidemic fever which during last cold season overspread the district from Buxar to the foot of the Rhotas range. This promises well for its sanitary state. It has been observed that fever is less fatal in its attack as it advances up the Soane valley. On his late visit Mr. Grant inspected Rhotas, with a view to ascertain its capabilities for a sanitarium. Though favourably impressed with the beauties of the old fort, and feeling well braced and refreshed after a walk over the summits of the plateau on which it is placed, we are inclined to doubt its fitness for such a purpose. It will doubtless, however, afford a desirable change of air to the residents of the new cantonment, and the works and historical associations of the old fort will attract many an indolent person to visit the place. The distance from Dehree is twenty-six miles. Having an object of some interest within so short a distance will be no small boon to the residents of the new cantonment, supplying a want doubtless felt by many at stations where no place of any interest can be reached in which they may shake off the ennui of station life.—Friend of India.

THE NEW CUSTOMS BILL.

At the ordinary meeting of the Legislative Council, held on the 3rd March, the following amended Customs Bill was read a third time and passed. It now waits the sanction of the Viceroy for its ratification:—

A Bill to Amend Act VII. of 1859 (to Alter the Duties of Customs on Goods Imported or Exported by Sea).

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law relating to Customs duties,

Preamble. it is enacted as follows:—

I. From and after the 18th day of February, 1860, in lieu of the Customs duties authorised to be charged in Acts VII. and XXIII. of 1859, there shall be levied and collected the duties as contained in the two Schedules A and B, annexed to this Act;

Proviso. provided always that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to alter the existing duties upon salt and opium, or to authorise the levy of duties in any free port, or to affect the provisions of Acts VI. and VII. of 1848.

II. In case it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the collector of Customs duties that, in respect to any cotton twist or yarn which, on the said 18th day of February, had arrived in any port in British India, but upon which the duty of Customs had not been paid, or which had, on or before that date, been shipped on board any vessel in a foreign port, and which had sailed for a port in British India, the said cotton twist or yarn had, before the said 18th day of February, been sold or contracted, to be delivered at a price including the duty payable in India, then, in every such case, such cotton twist or yarn shall be admitted at a duty of five per centum upon the value thereof.

III. If, in a matter concerning the Revenue, any dispute shall arise in respect to the construction of this Act, or of any Act relating to Customs duties, or in respect to any other matter whatever relating to the importation or exportation of goods or merchandise, or relating to the levy or collection of the duties thereon, the collector, or other chief revenue authority of the port at which the same may take place, shall settle the same, subject, however, to an appeal to the Government of India in the Revenue department.

IV. Whereas doubts have existed as to the conditions upon which goods or merchandise are bonded in any port of India, in respect to the liability of such goods or merchandise to be charged with any new rate of duty that may be imposed while yet such goods or merchandise remain in bond, be it enacted that all goods and merchandise being bonded in any port in India shall, in the event of any change of duties taking place, be considered in every respect in relation thereto as if they were new importations.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.—Since we (Englishman) went to press this morning, March 22, we have learned that the Executive of Bengal has resolved on introducing an Act on Saturday into the Legislative Council to compel the fulfilment of contracts for the cultivation of indigo by a summary and peremptory process. This Act it is determined shall be taken by the district authorities as law from the date of its notification. This will not only allay the fears of the planters, but will at once put an end to the great injustice they have been labouring under for some time; it will ensure the immediate cultivation of the lands contracted for, and if carried out, as we believe it will, must act as a real protection to the honest ryot, who will undoubtedly receive the full value of his labour under its provisions.

KASSIA HILLS.—The road through the Kassia Hills is one of the best mountain roads I have ever traversed. Well constructed in the beginning by Colonel Lyster, it is preserved in excellent order at very little expense, as there is very little animal traffic upon it. The bare-footed Kassias, who in a former generation were a warlike people, and gave us some trouble, have now subsided into hewers of wood, drawers of water, and carriers of potatoes, with their constant tread keep the road smooth as a newly made pukka road in the North West. The hills in many parts are studded with Druidical stones, exactly like those of Stonehenge; and in some places they are of far greater magnitude. At Mophlong there is a splendid group of five upright stones, and the height of the one in the centre is about twenty-five feet. At their base are two large stone tables, resting upon stone pillars, about the size of a round dining table of moderate dimensions. The Kassias have no records, no written language, no traditions, and the object of these structures cannot be ascertained from them. Some people think they are monuments to the dead, but to my mind they are Druidical stones and the people are Druids, or at least their worship is the same. Formerly they indulged in human sacrifices, and the stone tables are evidently made for the purpose of sacrifice. The British Government, however, soon put a stop to that, and they are now obliged to propitiate their gods with the blood of cattle instead of that of human beings. In several places I noticed the horns and skulls of cattle perched on the top of the central stone, for these stones are all in groups, and invariably in odd numbers, such as five, seven, nine, &c. Then, like the Druids, they worship the groves where they imagine their gods to reside. Wandering over the hills with a Kassia guide I saw him fall upon his knees and salaam to a deep cleft or gully covered with forest; a grove, in fact, such as Numa Pompilius would have envied for the seclusion of his goddess Egeria. He also begged of me not to enter it, as the Kassias would be offended if they heard of it. The religion of the Druids is the most ancient in history, and it is not impossible that some Druidical missionary, centuries ago, found his way to these hills, and made converts of the natives, for the stones bear the marks of extreme antiquity. They are generally of granite, and covered with hoary moss. I have a very faithful sketch of those at Mophlong, and you will admit when you see it that the stones at Stonehenge fade into insignificance beside them. The scenery as you approach Cherrapoonjee is very grand. The descent to the river Bogapanee occupies about two hours. From the height whence it is first descried the river looks like a silver thread. In fact, the water is of a milky colour, from the bed of the river being covered with a white mud, derived from the limestone with which these hills abound. The sides of the hills are worn into hundreds of gullies by the tremendous rains that fall every year, and the rocks are "guttered" by the incessant action of water. The Bogapanee has risen fifty feet in one night, and carried away a strong stone bridge some years ago. This has been replaced by a bamboo bridge, which spans the whole river, in the form of a large semi-circle. To prevent it swinging too much, or being blown away, the Kassias have steepled it on either side with guys attached to the land, made of a creeper as thick as a two inch rope, and quite as strong. It is a great curiosity, very fragile in appearance, but perfectly safe. During the rains I have been assured that the water-falls in these hills are the most numerous and the finest in the world. When it is remembered that six hundred and fifty inches of rain fall in a season, and that the water comes down more in sheets than in drops, the imagination can conceive the magnificent spectacle of hundreds of water-falls, gushing down the gullies, seen at one and the same time. I have heard that it is the intention of Government to locate a European regiment on the Kassia hills. If so, it may not be out of place if I point out a spot where Europeans would be advantageously situated. There is a very fine piece of table land about twenty miles from Cherrapoonjee, on the Cherra side of the Bogapanee. It is about three miles in extent, and has abundance of coal and lime in the neighbourhood. The place is marked on the map as Lailongkote, and its elevation is about five thousand seven hundred feet above the level of the sea. The soil is good, the climate most healthy, and the rains not so heavy as at Cherrapoonjee. There is also a road from Cherrapoonjee, which could be greatly improved at a small expense. There is not, I believe, in the hills a more eligible spot for Europeans than the one I have now pointed out. I arrived at Cherrapoonjee after a ride through hills which for beauty of scenery and exhilarating healthiness of climate surpass anything I have seen in Europe, America, Asia or Australia.—Correspondent of the Englishman.

OFFICIAL INFORMATION.—We (Englishman) have received a copy of Mr. Wilson's speech on the Finance of India, translated into Oordoo, by authority. This is an excellent idea, and we hope Government will take steps to circulate this translation throughout the country; it will counteract much of the nonsense disseminated by native papers and the disaffected. The foolish rumours set afloat throughout the country by interested people, as well as the idle and ignorant, are always eminently hostile to the English Government. It has frequently been suggested that if it is considered bad policy to place the native press under a censorship, that the Government should have some organ of its own to keep the native public better informed as to the objects and intentions of Government measures, as well as to correct the erroneous reports they are so ready to give credence to. There is no doubt but that a Monitor would be a most useful adjunct to the Indian Government. The Press ought to be recognised both for its usefulness to the public and to good Government; hitherto it has been ignored—at least for many years it has been considered of no weight in the State, and it is only late events which have compelled the attention of Government to this very important question. There is no necessity for having a Government organ which shall only support every thing the authorities do, and only say what the authorities wish. This would be to make the paper of no value or importance. All that is necessary to be done by the organ we would recommend is, that it should fairly and honestly canvass the measures of the Government whilst it was supplied with correct information from Government offices. In the absence of an organ of this description, the next best thing is the publication and extensive circulation of speeches, like this of Mr. Wilson's, fully explaining to the people the necessity of the State, and the methods by which that necessity is to be supplied; with this clear and authentic document properly circulated, many mistakes and erroneous impressions will be corrected, and a better feeling raised in the minds of the people, as they see and understand the anxiety of their Government to lay the whole question clearly before them, without reservation or attempts at deception.

DELHI, March 9.—Major General Bradford, C.B., is here inspecting the troops in garrison. The Fusiliers (2nd) were out in heavy marching order on the evening of the 7th, and in review order yesterday morning; everything considered, and especially their weakly state, and many invalids, they presented a goodly show, and went through their work very creditably. H.M. 88th Connaught Rangers were inspected yesterday afternoon, and passed the ordeal to the admiration of a number of spectators. Notwithstanding the absence of three companies, the regiment looked strong, and the men went through their evolutions with precision and steadiness. The three companies of the 88th, now en route from Allypore to rejoin headquarters, are expected to arrive to-morrow. The 2nd Fusiliers commence their march to Roorkee to-morrow morning. Tonnochy's regiment of Jezailchees, on their way to Peshawur, are here; also Musgrove's Hazara Horse, en route to Lahore. The 2nd company Sappers and Miners have marched for Kanoude, for the purpose of destroying the fort. The inhabitants of the Dureeba have succeeded in impressing the Commissioner with the idea that it is par excellence the most picturesque street in India, and that to destroy it would be to evince a lamentable want of taste for Oriental architecture. The consequence is that the work of clearance has been stayed, and rumour now marks the boundary at Marshall's shop.—March 12.—There is a rumour to the effect that Mr. G. H. Egerton, Deputy Commissioner, is likely to leave Delhi for Umritsur, and that Mr. Plowden, from Rohituck, will succeed him. I think this highly probable, as there can be but little doubt that the hard work imposed upon Mr. Egerton has injured his health, and a change is absolutely necessary. There was at one time a talk of his going for six months to Cashmere, as deputy commissioner, to keep the young visitors to that delightful valley in order; but now it is said General Van Cortlandt is to be the man, and a very nice appointment it is for anybody who gets it. We had the first dust-storm of the season a few nights ago. It was not very black, but coming up late in the afternoon it had the effect of drawing on night's veil an hour earlier than usual, and was consequently dismal enough. It has cooled the air considerably, and refreshed Dame Nature a bit. The work of demolishing the houses near the Jumma Masjid progresses fast; in a few days the mosque will almost stand alone in its glory. The invalids from the 88th Connaught rangers and artillery have left Delhi for Landour; they proceeded by bullock train and thence by dooly.—Englishman.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY held their half-yearly meeting in Calcutta on the 5th March. The crop of tea gathered in 1857-58 weighed, when packed, 766,988 lbs., being 1,998 lbs. in excess of the estimated out-turn, and 59,866 lbs. in excess of the produce of the previous season. The crop of 1858-59 was 810,680 lbs., and the crop of 1859-60 is estimated at 911,580 lbs., at the usual rate 1 lb. of tea to 4½ lbs. of green leaf. During the half-year 288 coolies were despatched to the plantations in Assam and 192 to Cachar. The labour question seems to have been settled since Captain Holroyd's energetic action in quelling the recent émeute. By ordinary industry the Company calculate the people may earn from Rs. 8 to 12 a month.

DARJEELING.—The Hurkaru mentions that the station on the East Indian Railway for Darjeeling will be Peer Pointee, on the Calcutta side of Caragola Ghat, and 247 miles from the Presidency. Rajmahal is 202 miles. The distance will be easily covered in twelve hours, and from the Ghat to Darjeeling 150 miles only remain to be accomplished. The sanitarium will be thus two days from Calcutta.

INSPECTORS OF MUSKETRY.—The Calcutta Gazette announces the appointment of district inspectors of musketry for the European troops of both armies in India. The whole of Bengal, Oude, the North West and the Punjab constitute four districts under inspectors, with a staff allowance of Rs. 250 a month, and under a chief inspector, with a staff allowance of Rs. 400 a month. In Madras and Bombay the senior of the two inspectors will act as chiefs, and the three heads will be attached to army head-quarters, and report direct to the Commander-in-chief.

THE COMING MAN.—Our (Hurkaru) readers who care about the Kishnaghur riots will be interested to hear something about the leader of the movement, and its organisation. The former is Ramrutton Mullick of Joyrampore, the largest village in Kishnaghur. He styles himself Mohamoheemo Neelbungsho dunkshakaree Sreejookto Baboo Neelmar Ramrutton Mullick, Sudder Katcherry Joyrampore, the translation of which is, the uprooter of the Indigo race, Baboo, Indigo destroyer, Ramrutton Mullick. The Baboo declares that what the Nana was in the North-West he is in Bengal. He receives deputations of ryots from other parts of the country, advises them how to act, collects money for the purpose of agitation, and in fact plays the same profitable part that was done some years ago by Doodoo Meeah and other leaders of the Ferazees. His situation is, however, more dangerous than theirs was. They led a crusade against rent and Bengalee zemindars, while he is attacking indigo and Anglo-Saxons. The ryots of the surrounding concerns are systematically intimidated by his followers. Those of the Carragoda concern have told the manager, and even the magistrate himself, that they have taken advances and have no complaint against the factory, and are not unwilling to sow their lands as usual, but that they dare not do so on account of the Joyrampore ryots. A slight shower of rain took place in that neighbourhood the other day, when the Joyrampore ryots turned out in thousands to prevent the Carragoda ryots from sowing.

THE KUNAWUR GRAPES.—A correspondent of the Bombay Times describes the facilities for the manufacture of wine offered by Kunawur, a district of the Bussahir territory, 80 miles beyond Simla. There are 19 varieties of grape, chiefly of small size, and most of them of a most luscious flavour. The smallest sized resemble the Constantia grapes of the Cape. The vineyards extend 90 miles along the left bank of the Sutlej, from Nachur to Pue. In September and October, the grape season, from 60 to 70 lbs weight can be purchased at from 12 annas to a rupee. The very poorest natives use the wild grapes which come from the forests beyond Simla. They are very acid, and a little larger than the black currant of England. There is everything in the neighbourhood to tempt the European capitalist. The Rajah is anxious for settlers, labour is cheap, the climate beyond the influence of the periodical rains, and building materials abundant. There is no reason why India should not produce wines of the best qualities in quantities proportionate to the out-turn of America and Australia. Attention was first paid to the culture of the grape in the former in 1826. The States now produce more than two million of gallons annually from the 6,000 acres under cultivation.

AKYAN, Feb. 28.—The civil authorities have exerted themselves to the utmost in affording every facility for the laying down of the telegraphic line from this to the River Naaf—a distance of about seventy miles in a northerly direction. The little ferry steamer, the Tek Naaf, was to be placed at the disposal of the officer who has the responsibility of constructing the line, but she has unfortunately met with a serious accident in having run on a shoal while attempting to proceed to Aeng, with passengers for the fair which was to be held on the 15th. The timber and wire lying at the Government wharf are being shipped on a private vessel, which will convey them to the Naaf, whence they will be distributed along the coast. The freight for conveying the timber and wire is a little in excess of a thousand rupees. Stringent orders have been issued to the chief men of the different villages along the coast to furnish labourers to plant these posts; the operation of laying down the posts will not, it is supposed, commence before the second week in March, and the line to the Naaf will not be completed before the middle of April. The vessel engaged to convey the posts and wires will leave about the 6th of March. Lieutenant Twynam, the executive engineer, has received instructions to proceed to Kyook Phyoo, and begin the electric telegraph line, which is ultimately to extend to Rangoon; he will probably leave this by the middle of next month. The Commissioner is expected to be here on the 1st of March, and will return to Kyook Phyoo or Sandoway after a fortnight's stay. The preparatory or preliminary Burmese examination of the Civil Authorities will be held on the 12th or 13th March. There are now lying sixteen ships in harbour, being about half the number at this time last year. The price of rice has been fluctuating during the past fortnight from Rs. 42 to 35 the hundred baskets; there will very likely be about 80 thousand tons of it left unsold at the end of the shipping season in the possession of the Mughs, who have already commenced desponding on their future prospects. H.M.'s steamer Proserpine will proceed to Chittagong to bring Dr. Mouatt to this station about the end of next month. Dr. Pettingal, of the Arracan Local Battalion, is expected here on the 7th March to resume his duties. The bachelors contemplate giving a grand party on the 8th.

OUDE CHARITABLE FUND.—Long before annexation, the late King of Oude, the father of the present ex-King Wajeeed Ally Shah, invested a large sum of money in British Indian Securities for religious and charitable purposes, and which now amounts to about 17 lakhs of rupees. Before his death, the king, by his last will and testament, appointed four efficient officers of his court, their heirs and executors in perpetuity, as managers of the said fund. The amount now becoming comparatively very heavy, and it being considered desirable to transfer the funds to other hands, the chief commissioner of Oude has recommended to the supreme Government to appoint some new managers or trustees for the management of the said fund, which, says he, the Government has every right to do under the circumstances alluded to.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, if not over-persuaded by his staff, will leave Simla for Calcutta in July next, proceeding by river from Allahabad. Having received the Maharajah of Jumoo at the Sealkote Durbar, on the 8th of March, he is now marching to Madhopore at the head of the Baree Doab Canal, which he will reach on the 19th. Thence, with a flying camp, he will visit the great tea district of Kangra. He expects to be at Roopur on the 1st of April, and finally at Simla on the 6th of April.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL have asked the Government of India to sanction the appointment of a naturalist to accompany the China force. They have recommended Mr. Blyth on Rs. 500 a month and travelling expenses. A naturalist accompanies the French expedition. No man is better fitted for the duty than Mr. Blyth. The salary recommended has been fixed so low, we presume, with the view of inducing the Government to sanction the scheme.

AN "IDEA."—The natives believe that the object of the paper currency is to drain India of all the gold and silver, which will be sent to England, and that all the loans will also be paid off by means of the paper currency, so that before long silver and gold will be as rare as precious stones!

MR. SAUNDERS, commissioner of Rawul Pindee, has been appointed commissioner of the Hyderabad assigned districts, the post vacated by Mr. Maltby, now Resident at Travancore and Cochin. The appointment is the best that could be made. Mr. Saunders did good service as commissioner of Delhi.

INVALID ESTABLISHMENT.—The Mofussilite recommends that officers on the invalid establishment, prior to its reorganisation in 1857, should be forced to retire on the pension and rank of the grade above that which they now hold. At present there are five lieutenant-colonels, 13 majors, 30 captains and surgeons, and 9 lieutenants, costing annually £30,226. Their retirement, as proposed, would save Government £12,705 a year.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The Indian Government has extended permission to the colony of Natal to import coolies from Madras, under the same rules as are applicable to the West Indies and Mauritius. Natal wants only 135 labourers to begin with. Though there is a vast native population in South Africa, physically far superior to Indian coolies, they will not take service with the colonists in large numbers, nor enter into labour contracts for definite periods. At present the total number engaged by the whites is 9,000. India and China are certainly the store-houses of humanity in the East, but the drain of coolies from the Deccan is felt by the planters of the hills, and by all railway contractors.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, March 22).—Piece Goods.—The demand and the prices, generally speaking, have remained much in the same position during the past fortnight. The consumption in our, and in the up-country markets, continues on a rather limited scale, and, in consequence, neither the total absence of arrivals, nor the limited quantity of goods now in the way, have had any beneficial effect on our markets. Even the easiness of money did not encourage buyers to enter freely into transactions. Generally speaking, things look as if likely to remain in this state for a time. Tarns are also quiet, with little alteration in price. Metals are firm, and we quote copper sheathing at 46.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, March 22).—We are again unable to report any change for the better in our export market. The scarcity of tonnage and the high rates ruling, coupled with the firmness of holders of produce, who hold out still for extreme rates, have had a most depressing effect. Our exports of almost all bulky articles show a considerable falling off. The Indigo season may be said to be over. Raw Silk in good demand, though our prices are far above London rates. Sugar in moderate demand; Jute in neglect; Saltpetre in small demand. Other articles in much about the same state as before.

MADRAS.

SUPREME COURT, TUESDAY, MARCH 6th, 1860.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

At the rising of the court on Wednesday last, the Puisne Justice intimated his intention of making some observations on a letter from the advocate-general to the authorities regarding a decision of his lordship in a certain application for administration, and in which his lordship complained that he had been misrepresented. In accordance with this intimation, Sir Adam Bittlestone, in taking his seat on the bench this morning, called the attention of the learned advocate-general to the letter alluded to, and entered into an explanation of his conduct with reference to the particular case which had given rise to the communication from Mr. Smyth, with a view of showing that he (Mr. S.) had acted on imperfect information. His lordship said that he attached the greatest importance to the existence of harmony and a good understanding between the bench and the bar, especially so in the case of the advocate-general, who occupied so important a position in the court; but this good understanding and this harmony, to be of any use at all, should be real, not superficial, and should be based on mutual confidence. Therefore it was that he took the present opportunity openly in court to explain on what grounds he took exception to the letter in question. There was not in it that careful accuracy which the judges of this court had a right to expect from members of the bar. His lordship had no knowledge that such a communication had been made; it was sent to Calcutta and returned back printed, with other papers, and it was not till then that he knew of it. He was fully persuaded that wherever the document had been read it had left an erroneous impression as to his lordship's conduct on the minds of those who were not acquainted with all the circumstances. His lordship added, that having announced his intention to enter into this explanation, he had felt it his duty to forward to the advocate-general a memorandum of his views in the matter; in reply to which Mr. Smyth made the request that it might be sent to the Government as his lordship's explanation of the subject referred to. His lordship said, that whatever Mr. Smyth's wishes on the matter might be, for himself he had no idea of pursuing the course suggested.

The advocate-general rose and said that he had listened to his lordship with the attention and respect which were due to the bench, and had but a few words to say in reply. No one could regret more than himself any interruption to the harmony between the bench and bar to which his lordship had alluded, and for many reasons he regretted that his lordship had thought fit to notice publicly from the bench a matter that had not come before him as a judge, and in which he had no judicial authority whatever. He believed that had he been allowed an opportunity elsewhere he could have explained the matter satisfactorily. His respect, however, for the bench would not allow him to take advantage of his lordship's want of authority to answer him as he might do. He should merely say, that from the manner in which his lordship noticed the matter from the bench last week, he, the advocate-general, had felt bound to lay his lordship's memorandum, and his, the advocate-general's reply to it, before Government the very day he received his lordship's memorandum. He had sent another copy to his lordship at the same time, and if the explanation did not satisfy him he could only say he much regretted it. He could not, however, admit that his letter to Government of the 11th May last was open to the charge of inaccuracy; its statements were correct, as far as they went, respecting the fact of his lordship having refused—at least not granted—several administrations applied for in chambers, and the inconvenience thence arising to the parties interested. As to the two occasions adverted to by his lordship where his lordship's views had been subsequently adopted by the full court, he, the advocate-general, regretted he had not heard of them sooner: had he done so, he should certainly have mentioned them in his letter to Government, and relied on them as an additional support to his views; but as those two occasions occurred in his absence, and had never been mentioned to him, and were out of the usual course of practice, which was to make such applications in chambers only, he must submit that there was nothing to put him upon inquiry, and that therefore he was not to blame for not knowing them, though he regretted the circumstance, especially the dissatisfaction it had occasioned to his lordship. At the same time, with every respect to his lordship, he must decline to accept him as judge in his own cause, and would refer himself to the decision of Government and the authorities, before whom he had laid the whole case.

His lordship observed, that he hoped in what he had said he had carefully guarded himself from the suspicion that he ever meant to say that the advocate-general did not believe at the time that what he wrote was true. What he desired to call attention to was, that in truth, any person not acquainted with the circumstances would receive an erroneous impression as to the course pursued by the court. He thought it a matter of considerable importance that the advocate-general, as leader of the bar, should be strictly correct in his representations to Government.—Daily Times and Spectator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE BANK OF MADRAS has declared a dividend of 9½ per cent. for 1859. The number of current accounts was 621. The receipts and payments were each 12 millions sterling. The business has increased 100 per cent. since 1849.

A SOCIABLE RELIGION.—We (Friend of India) see from the Rangoon Times that the Local Government has from 1st May next legalised the distillation of Shamsu among the Karens, Khyiens and wild tribes of the interior. These tribes are in the habit of drinking to excess, as a religious duty, on all occasions of funerals, and for this purpose keep their own stills. The custom has spread to the lower classes of the Burmese, but is condemned by all respectable Buddhists. On the annexation an attempt to put down illicit distillation was made, but from want of police supervision has hitherto failed. Henceforth the deputy commissioner of each district may allow the Karens to "distil spirits for bona fide use at funerals, Nat feasts and the like, in quantities not exceeding one gallon or thereabouts." Nothing could be more general than this, nor could Government take better means for the speedy extinction of tribes whom they have already done so much to Christianise. If to carry out the former Akbarree supervision involved an impossible expenditure, the means taken to assure the bona fide use of the legalised drink at funerals must be still more impracticable.

PENITENTIARY FOR EUROPEANS.—The following is an order of Government on this subject; it is dated the 2nd March:—"The Honourable the Governor has examined the site selected for the European Penitentiary on the Neilgherries. It is situated on a spur of Dodabett, on the right hand side of the road from Jackatalla to Utakamund. His Excellency pronounces the situation to be well suited for the purpose, both as regards climate and the immediate circumstances of the locality. Of the two spots suggested—one on the crest of the hill and the other on a lower shelf, the latter will be preferred, as it is more sheltered, and building upon it will not be so expensive as it would be higher up. The chief engineer will place himself in communication with the Inspector-general of gaols, in view to the preparation of plans and estimates for the proposed penitentiary cells, which, it will be observed, will have to be constructed for 100 convicts. It would be well, however, that the design should be such as to admit of more cells being added hereafter, if at any future time it should prove necessary."

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—At the recent examination of Arts in the Madras University, of 10 candidates who presented themselves for the degree of B.A. 5 were passed. Of these 3 were East Indians, one educated at the Presidency College, and 2 at the Doveton College. Between Madras and Calcutta there are now some 40 Bachelors of Arts, of whom 4 are East Indians, 3 native Christians, and the rest Hindoos.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The number of emigrants who left Madras for the Mauritius was 13,882, and for the West Indies 1,227 during 1859. The number of coolies that returned from the Mauritius was 1,601 and 53 children. Why does the official report not publish the amount of savings of these 1,601? They pass through the hands of Government. It is not an uncommon thing for coolies to land in Calcutta with from Rs. 1,000 to 1,500 each.

CAPTAIN C. D. GRANT.—The Rangoon Times states that the investigation into the charges preferred by certain Burmese against Captain C. D. Grant has been brought to a close. The president of the commission, Major R. S. Tickle, has left the station to rejoin his regiment at Maulmain. The Commissioner of Pegu has received instructions from the Government of Bengal to give his opinion of this extraordinary affair, and to submit the proceedings of the trial to the Governor-general for his decision.

MR. PRENDERGAST, who was dismissed the Madras Civil Service for using official information to speculate in Tanjore bonds, has forfeited his pension, under the orders of the home authorities.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYDRABAD, SCINDE.—Before leaving Scinde Sir Bartle Frere warmly recommended the local Government to apply to the home authorities for sanction to Captain Fife's scheme for the irrigation of the Hyderabad districts. At present the loss of revenue from defective irrigation is very large, while the cost of water raised from wells to the ryots is four rupees a beegah. Well-planned canals would supply the water at seven annas a beegah. After a careful survey of the districts Captain Fife estimates the cost of a canal from the Indus at twenty-eight lakhs of rupees, to be laid out in three years, and the returns seven lakhs, or upwards of 25 per cent., on the most moderate calculation.

THE "OUTRAM SHIELD."—A meeting was held on the 19th of March, in the rooms of the Asiatic Society, to consider the design for the "Outram Shield," which has been confided to Mr. Landseer, who has liberally undertaken it as a pure "labour of love." The Committee highly approved the design submitted, which is shortly to be sent to England for execution in silver, iron, Damascus work, and gold. The centre portrays the leading event in Sir James's connection with the mutiny—his delivering over the command to Havelock. Round the margin are hunting scenes (pigsticking, tiger-hunting, &c.) in which Sir James is known to have excelled, with mementos of the Sindh and Persian campaigns, the series closing with a general nuzzerana of the wealth of Ind to "our Sovereign Lady Queen Victoria." The design is comparatively simple, and yet has abundant variety; and the effect, when brought out in the metals we have mentioned, will be exceedingly rich and striking.

THE PARSEE LAW ASSOCIATION has drawn up a draft of laws for the regulation of inheritances among the parsees, to be submitted to the Legislative Council. The draft has been revised by Mr. Hall, a barrister of the Supreme Court of Bombay. The Punchayet, which a quarter of a century ago exercised an almost despotic power over the community in matters of religion, law and social usages, has now sunk into contempt, and a lex loci becomes necessary.

RIVER AND RAIL.—The somewhat lengthy paragraph with the above heading which appeared in our last issue was taken from the Sindian. The merit of originating the vast project there described is due to Mr. W. P. Andrew.

THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—Only forty-four candidates presented themselves for the entrance examination of the Bombay University on the 5th March. Lads, who must be at least sixteen years of age, and who are expected to be ready to take the degree of Bachelor of Arts, after an examination as strict as that of the London University, were asked such questions as these:—Define a pronoun and decline it; conjugate the verb, speak; correct the sentence—"I saw cow standing on field." This is playing at universities.

THE VEHAR WATER WORKS at Bombay have, according to the Gazette, turned out a failure. Our contemporary writes:—"A great experiment was made the other day about supplying the folk of Bombay with water from the Vehar lake. This desideratum so long talked of, with repeated promises of an early completion of the works, and a plentiful supply of the pure element, turned out to be a miserable abortion on the 7th of March. It appears that on the achievement about being made, every man was at his post to attend to the turn-cocks and the sluice-valve at Vehar; but where the superintendents sprang from to attend to those duties remains to be solved, as only four turn-cocks form the sum total of that establishment. It was even said that after a little snort and suggle, up flew the jets, joyous and sparkling throughout the whole line of the main, whereas it was the very reason that the air-cocks not having been opened to allow the escape of the compressed air which caused the bursting of the great 32-inch pipe, and consequently the joyous jets is a mere delusion. Half a million sterling has been expended on the great Vehar bubble, and Bombay is at present as far from obtaining water from the lake as it was years ago, when the famed Conybear was first laying down and maturing his wild and unscientific plan."

FEMALE EDUCATION IN BOMBAY.—The Parsees support four girls' schools with an attendance of about 400. They are about to establish a first-class ladies' school under an English governess. There are three Marathi-Hindoo and two Gujarati-Hindoo schools, with an attendance of 351 girls, and endowed by natives to the extent of Rs. 2,000 a year. At the last examination of the latter Lord Elphinstone presided. He said it was probably the last opportunity he would have of witnessing such a pleasing spectacle.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, March 15.—The London mail of the 26th January arrived here on the 11th.

Sir Hope Grant, Commander-in-Chief of the British Expeditionary Force, arrived here on the 13th, along with his staff. No further details of the British and French forces have arrived, but we have intelligence of several vessels with troops on board having reached Singapore.

All kind of rumours are going about as to the preparations made by the Chinese, their determination to fight, and their efforts to engage Europeans in their service; but no dependence can be placed on these rumours. There is a general impression among the Chinese that the Court of Peking intends to make a determined stand, but that is only conjecture on their part.

We mentioned in our last summary that four English war vessels—the Sampson, Actæon, Algerine, and Dove, had left Shanghai under sealed orders, and that we had heard they were to take a strip of land in Shantung as a depot. One of them, the Sampson, has since come down to Hong Kong, having left the other vessels on the 4th safely anchored at a port in the entrance to the Gulf of Pecheleo. These vessels went first to Ta-lien Bay, near, we think, to the port of Tang-chau, that was to be opened by the new treaty. The inhabitants, who had never seen a European ship before, were alarmed at their appearance, but showed no hostility. The country round was found to be extensively cultivated, and growing much grain. Fresh provisions could not be obtained, and fruit and vegetables must be scarce. There are salmon and oysters in the bay, and the thermometer was so low as 18; the shore being lined with ice. A singular report exists among the Chinese at Canton, to the effect that the two gunboats have been taken, but no one believes it. It is true that the news of the loss of the gunboats at the mouth of the Peiho last summer was reported in Canton nine days after the event took place, and before our vessels brought the intelligence to Shanghai; but though Chinese stories often prove correct, yet they cannot be relied on, and in this case all the probability is against it. The story only shows that the Cantonese expect hostilities in the North.

Admiral Page has issued a proclamation opening the river of Saigon in Cochin China to the commercial vessels of all nations at peace with France.

The rebels in the valley of the Yangtze have had some more success, and also in Sze-chuen. There have also been some disturbances near Canton from rebels, or rather local marauders. In eight separate districts of Kwang-tung bands of marauders have risen up and set the mandarins at defiance, refusing to pay the taxes, and plundering villages, which they surround during the night and enter at dawn. The mandarins sent out four thousand men against them in the commencement of this week, and will probably reduce them to order; but these and other local disturbances, which are mainly owing to the shock given by foreigners to the prestige of the Chinese authorities, must cause much misery.

The state of matters in Japan appears to be getting worse and worse; and the foreign community there is living in great apprehension. On the 26th February two Dutch captains, Captain De Vos of the brig Christian Louis, and Captain Dekker of the schooner Henrietta Louise, were murdered in Yokohama. They were walking through the streets, and it is said, had given no offence, being respectable, quiet men, when they were attacked by some Japanese with swords. Captain De Vos was killed almost immediately, and Captain Dekker was pursued a short way before he was despatched. No cause is assigned for this act. The Japanese are a high-spirited people, and have been known to commit suicide when insulted by foreigners; it is not impossible that the unfortunate captains may have committed offence without intending to do so, or they may have been sacrificed to expiate the acts of other foreigners. The burial of Mr. Alcock's servant was attended by officials. The mission to the coal mines is said to have been a failure; but it has been found that Hirado coal can be advantageously used by all steamers when it is mixed with an equal portion of Welsh coal. The imitative powers of the Japanese must be very great, for muskets and rifles are now made by them as well as in Europe, and the retainers of the princes are daily taught their exercise and use. There is an idle story going about of one of the Japanese Ministers having, in the heat of a recent discussion, laid his hand upon his sword and exclaimed, "Let us rid ourselves of these treaties and fight for freedom." At Hakodadi good feeling exists between the foreigners and Japanese, and articles are exported from there which are held back at the other ports. Copper, iron, tin and coal exist in the island of Yezo; and the ores are said to possess from 75 to 85 per cent. of fine metal. Russian influence is there said to be supreme; there are always two Russian men-of-war in the bay, and large consular mansions. The Japanese Ministers to New York were to have sailed before this time in the Pouchattan, and one of their own steamers was to accompany them under the direction of Lieut. Brooke, late of the United States surveying schooner Penimore Cooper.

Mr. Tarrant is to be released in a few days, but the heavy costs of his trial will probably confine him in the debtors' gaol for some time longer. The gaol authorities condemned him lately to solitary imprisonment for a short time on bread and water, because the end of a cigar was discovered in his cell. Such a fact scarcely requires comment, and shows that, whatever may have been the faults of some of the papers in Hong Kong, no small share of the obloquy should fall upon the officials who thus demonstrate their incapacity for comprehending the age in which we live, and so wantonly embitter the state of matters.

Captain Saunders has been committed for trial at the Supreme Court, on the charges of the murder of a Chinaman, and of shooting at and wounding other Chinamen, on board a Customs' boat at Swatow. He has been released on bail, the securities being himself for 6,000 dollars, and two friends for 5,000 dollars each.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, March 30.—During the hot, dry weather of the fortnight which has elapsed since the last mail went out every possible effort has been made to prepare and despatch the coffee which has reached Colombo. The result is not quite what might have been expected, but still the addition to our exports is considerable. Six vessels have sailed, all for London, taking away 35,928 cwt. of coffee, in the proportions of 32,486 plantation, and 3,442 native. But the great and cheering topic of the fortnight has been the marvellous success of the pearl fishery. The prices realised are unprecedented, ranging from nine to sixteen guineas per thousand. The result is, that already the addition to the revenue from this source is £35,732. The arrack rents for 1860-61 have also sold at very high prices, so that Sir H. Ward's financial luck has not forsaken him.

Employers of Tamil horsekeepers are considerably and not pleasingly surprised to find that, in the opinion of the board they are liable to the tax, which is being actively collected. We hope soon to hear that Captain Graham has been more successful in "fresh fields and pastures new," than he was while poaching on the old preserves, as the planters put it. The unfortunate Manchester has been sold at Bombay for £1,000.

All the accounts respecting the position of our staple are good, and of course no one is sorry in Ceylon to learn that chicory is at length to be taxed.

The governor and a considerable portion of the leaders of society are away from the heat of Colombo, enjoying the invigorating air of the mountains.

Fever prevails to some extent at Colombo, but on the whole the health of the country is good. It is matter of special thankfulness that there has been no outbreak of disease at the Pearl Fishery.

The planting intelligence may be summed up in the fact that the promise for next crop is excellent; would that we were equally sure of a full supply of labour.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

JAVA, March 5.—The second expedition to Boni is now returning to Java, a battalion and half battalion, besides the artillery, having already reached Samarang and Sourabaya. H.M. steamer Merapie had gone from Banjerassing to Makassar to bring over the Commander-in-chief of the army. As the treaty with the small State of Waju had not been completed, the departure of the Commander-in-chief from Boni was uncertain, and would probably not take place until the end of March. The 11th battalion still remains in Celebes, and will probably not return to Java until all the arrangements with the Celebes princes are definitively settled.

The latest news from Banjerassing is contained in telegrams received from Sourabaya, reaching to the 3rd March. On the 10th February the fortification at Amonthai was captured with great loss to the enemy and trifling loss on the side of the Dutch. In consequence of this the whole Benua Lima had come under submission. Hidayat, who, by proclamation on the 5th February, had been declared to have forfeited his office of Manku-bumi or Regent, and was summoned to place himself at the orders of the Government commissioner, had in connection with the expedition against Amonthai entered into correspondence with the commissioner. Some bands from the Upper Dusun attacked Marabahn on the night of the 8th February, but were driven off with great loss.

Rajah Muning was attacked by Captain Schiff, at Chambi, on the 5th February, and was found dead on the field. On this occasion Lieutenant Blondeau lost his life.

A column of seventy-five men had an encounter with an overwhelming number of the enemy on the 10th February at Taal, without any decisive result.

On the 11th February the first meeting with the bands of Surapati in the Upper Dusun took place. The Suriname received two shots from the 30-pounder taken by the rebels from the Onrust, one in the boiler, causing a loss of one man killed and seventeen wounded. The Suriname being reinforced by the Montrado and Celebes, the entrenched post of the rebels was attacked on the 22nd February, and being assailed in the rear by the land forces under Captain Ravestein, while the steamers operated in front, it was taken, and the Onrust's gun recovered. During the course of the operations the Montrado received a shot from this gun, but with little damage to the vessel.—Singapore Free Press.

SINGAPORE.—Colonel Cavenagh, the Governor of the Straits Settlements, in a letter to the Recorder of Singapore, proposes that the island should cease to be a penal settlement gradually, by receiving no more convicts, while those at present in the Straits, to the number of 2,286, die out. Their labour, much of which is skilled, was valued last year at Rs. 149,887. He is of opinion that to withdraw this at once from the settlements, even were Chinese to be imported, would for a time put a stop to all public works and cause vast expense. The crime among those convicts is excessive, and the Andamans need more labour. Every object would be met were the same privilege extended to the Straits as Madras has, of sending all life convicts to the Andamans. Those at present in Singapore could be despatched gradually. The plea that several are skilled labourers too often interferes with justice. Their skilled labour would be more valuable and their punishment more just in a jungly island. A Bill is now before the Legislative Council, allowing the Governor-general henceforth to decide to what place each transported felon is to be sent.—Friend of India.

PENANG.—The returns of the trade of Penang for the years 1858-59 show a total of imports, Rs. 1,58,08,884; exports, Rs. 1,95,74,656; total, Rs. 3,53,83,540. This is an increase over 1856-57 of nearly eight lakhs. The improvement is chiefly in the trade with Malacca and Singapore, and in that with Java and Cochin China. There is not a port on the south coast of Asia from Aden to Shanghai which has not, chiefly through English enterprise, doubled its trade in the last ten years. Though the nutmeg in the Straits, like the vine in some parts of Europe, is dying out, new sources of produce are continually arising.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Jan. 26.—At about two o'clock a letter was received from Kandahar from Sirdar Ameen Khan, stating that a Persian force of 20,000 men had reached Herat; that the King of Persia had sent out a khillut empowering Sooltan Jan to assume the office of Governor of Herat; a khillut has also been granted to Shadoolla Khan, conferring on him the title of a chief. The object of this Persian force is to proceed to Kandahar. The Dost on hearing this was much surprised, and is contemplating precautionary measures to defend Kandahar in case of invasion.—Jan. 27.—A letter was received from Mahomed Hussein Khan, Hakim of Cabul, mentioning that three men were coming from Turkistan, of whom two died on the way by the "khoony" ice; and that one had survived and reached Cabul. The letter was conveyed by this individual to the Dost; and the contents of this urzee were to the following effect:—That he (Mahomed Hussein Khan) had read a letter from Mahomed Afzul Khan from Turkistan, stating that the King of Bokhara had, on a previous occasion, asked assistance from the Russian agents; and that some aid in the shape of troops had now reached the King of Bokhara, and the Russian troops were plundering and maltreating the inhabitants of Bokhara; that the inhabitants had complained to the King of the ill-treatment they were subjected to, and of their ultimate intention to drive the Russians out of Bokhara, if they did not desist. The King of Bokhara replied that the residents should not fight with the Russians, as they had come to aid them, but that they should compel the Pathans to leave Bokhara; the King also ordered his own troops to encamp on the borders of the river Hamoo, together with the Russian troops. Another force, consisting of people of Turkistan, Momund, and Shergan, are marching towards Kandahar. That he (Mahomed Afzul Khan) was in great want of reinforcements to resist these attacks. The Ameer was greatly amazed on hearing this, and replied (to Mahomed Afzul Khan) that it was impossible for him to send reinforcements so long as the snow did not dissolve; but that in the mean time he could accumulate all his forces and take up some strong position, and entrench himself.—Jan. 28.—A letter was received from Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, from Sungoo Khel, stating that the Sunwarees, Loharghees, and Khyberees had attacked his force, and that he had lost some men. The enemy also suffered a slight loss. That, in consequence of the snow having fallen very heavily, his troops were unable to cope with those of the enemy. The enemy had entrenched themselves very strongly, and threatened another attack. The Ameer replied that he would make some arrangement with the Khyberees.—Jan. 29.—Information was received from Cabul, through Sirdar Khan Lowanee, that the Hakim of Cabul, Hussun Khan, was greatly distressing the inhabitants, and levying fines on the poor people for slight offences. The Ameer informed Hussun Khan that he should levy no fines on any man till he came to Cabul, and that if he persisted in oppressing the poor he would be severely reprimanded, and made to resign.—Jan. 30.—The Ameer received intelligence from Turkistan, through Mahomed Afzul Khan, to the effect that 8,000 Turkwundees had arrived near Koondooz, and were marching into the city, when Reaz Khan and Sirdar Shumsodeen Khan, with their forces, attacked the enemy and killed and wounded some, and made about 200 prisoners. The rest dispersed. Among the prisoners are some chiefs of note belonging to Bokhara. On inquiry the prisoners stated that the force was sent by the King of Bokhara. The Ameer wrote to Mahomed Afzul Khan, and ordered him to put all the prisoners to death; which circumstance will drive some awe into the minds of the remainder.—Jan. 31.—The Ameer remarked to Golam Mahomed Khan and Oosman Khan, that he had not yet received the opinion of Peer Mahomed, whether he can go to Peshawur or not. That owing to the disturbed state of the times he was very anxious to consult the Governor-general of India, and obtain his orders and assistance in dealing with his enemies, as the British were the only powerful friends whose aid he could obtain.

Feb. 4.—The Dost received intelligence from Turkistan through Mahomed Afzul Khan that the King of Bokhara had ordered his troops to rebel against the Pathans and to drive them out of Bokhara. The King had also ordered his forces to be in readiness to march on Koondooz. The Ameer was contemplating the necessary measures to adjust all this.—Feb. 12.—A despatch was received from Turkistan stating that the people of Koondooz, Badukshan, and Turkwund had attacked the forces of Mahomed Azeem Khan during the night, and committed great depredations, whereon Mahomed Azeem Khan repulsed them and killed some of the dacoits. That the enemy had stopped the grain, &c., from coming into Turkistan for the troops, and that consequently the latter were greatly distressed. The Ameer was devising measures for sending some reinforcements to Turkistan.—Feb. 15.—Aman named Golam Mahomed arrived from Cabul (in Jellalabad) and stated to the Ameer that it was rumoured in Cabul that the forces of the King of Bokhara had crossed the river Hamoo and reached Budhakshan. The Bokhara force is under the command of three Russian generals. That Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan was residing at a place called Thuk-ta-bul, and had sent some troops to Koondooz. The Dost immediately ordered 500 Jezzailchees to march to Cabul, and to take with them some more troops from Cabul, and proceed at once to Turkistan, and that he himself would be at Cabul in a few days. He also ordered Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, to send off as many men as he could spare to Turkistan on service.—Feb. 16.—The Dost remarked to Sirdars Oosman Khan, and Peer Khan, and others who were assembled in durbar, that he was very anxious to return to Cabul and make arrangements for despatching troops to Turkistan, and also that he had heard that the Governor-general of India was expected at Peshawur on Feb. 21st, and he was anxious to pay his visit in person, and would leave Shere Ally to make the necessary arrangements for sending troops to Turkistan. The Ameer also informed them that the authorities of Peshawur had ordered that a grand illumination should take place on the arrival of the Governor-general at Peshawur.—Feb. 17.—An urzee was received from Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Turkistan, in which it was stated that a large force from Bokhara, under the command of 3 Russian generals, had crossed the river Hamoo, and encamped in Fort Kirkee, near Maimund. That a number of inhabitants of the tribe of Kolab, Hissar, &c., had crossed the river in boats, and arrived in the proximity of Budhakshan. Mahomed Afzul Khan also requested the Ameer to send him, forthwith, on receipt of this intelligence, some reinforcements. The Ameer was much surprised, and communicated the news to Sirdars Shere Ally Khan, Mahomed Oosman Khan, and Peer Mahomed Khan. The Ameer also remarked to his councillors, that it was his intention to go to Peshawur, to pay a visit to the Viceroy and Governor-general; but this startling intelligence will not permit him to leave, since otherwise the Bokhara people will take advantage of his absence, and very likely invade Turkistan. He resolved, therefore, to send Sirdars Shere Ally Khan and Mahomed Oosman Khan as his representatives, and to start for Cabul in a day or two, to make arrangements for raising troops and despatching them to Turkistan.—Feb. 18.—The Dost wrote to Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, requesting him to collect a number of coolies, and to send them off to clear away the snow on the road to Turkistan, so that no difficulty may be felt by the troops when marching to Turkistan. The Dost also ordered Ally Shah Murd Khan to levy a body of troops from the tribes of Ghilzie, Maimundee, and Jellalabad, for service in Turkistan. He also wrote to Mahomed Afzul Khan, informing him that he was raising troops, and that they would soon be in Turkistan.—Feb. 19.—Whilst the Dost was seated in durbar, an express arrived from Kandahar from Sirdar Ameen Khan, stating that a large force, consisting of Persians and Heratees, under the command of Sooltan Ahmed Jan, Governor of Herat, had encamped at Killa Furrah and besieged it, and taken possession of the adjacent hamlets. That Sirdar Ameen Khan had despatched some troops under the command of Nussur-oola Khan, Barakzaee, and Ismael Khan, and Abdoola Khan, towards Fort Furrah; and that he was in great want of reinforcements from the Ameer. The Dost was greatly startled, and ordered Shere Ally Khan to postpone his journey to Peshawur, and to proceed at once to Kandahar. Sirdar Mahomed Oosman Khan asked the Ameer whether he was going to send Shere Ally Khan to Peshawur. The Ameer informed him that he could not send Shere Ally Khan to Peshawur, owing to the emergency which had risen, and which now demanded his service in Kandahar, and as Sirdar Ameen Khan was not an experienced commander he could not confide in him in the disturbed state of the times; besides which, if he would not send Shere Ally Khan, then Futteh Mahomed Khan (who is at enmity with Mahomed Ameen Khan) would side with the Governor of Herat; and that on this account Shere Ally Khan's presence at Kandahar was indispensably necessary.—Feb. 20.—The Dost wrote to the Hakim of Cabul, and requested him to send some ammunition and military stores to Turkistan; and that if any place was obstructed by the snow, the magazine tumbrills should be taken up on men's shoulders, and carried over the roads. He also told Allyjah Shah Murd Khan to collect the troops soon, as he was about to send him to visit the Governor-general of India at Peshawur.—Feb. 21.—A letter was read from Mahomed Afzul Khan from Kandahar, mentioning that the King of Bokhara had also come to Killa Furrah, and held a council, consisting of the sirdars of the adjacent forts, and asked their opinion as to which were the most opportune points of attack. The sirdars informed him that one portion of the force should attack Koondooz, and the other portion Tukht-tubul, which two were the salient points of attack. The King of Bokhara accordingly arranged that his forces should attack Koondooz; and that the tribes of Kolab, Hussar, and Badakhshan should assault Tukht-tubul. That Mahomed Afzul Khan having heard of their intentions, despatched some troops to guard those positions.—Feb. 22.—The Viceroy and Governor-general arrived at Peshawur in a carriage drawn by four camels, when the civil and military authorities, and the principal residents of Peshawur went out to receive him. The Governor-general and cortège entered by the Cabulee gate, the space between Cabulee gate and the Cutcheree gate being lined with citizens, who received him with loud acclamations of salams and compliments. The shops and dwellings were fitted up with shawls, handsome carpets and kimkhabes, and decorated with glass and framework. The Governor-general took up his residence at the house of Brigadier Chamberlain. The Dost received a letter from Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Turkistan, stating that he had despatched his vakeel to the King of Bokhara, to inquire the reason of his (the King's) intended invasion. The King of Bokhara informed the vakeel that as the Dost had violated the terms of the treaty by distressing the inhabitants and forcibly invading Koondooz and the neighbouring villages those conditions were no longer binding on him; and that, consequently, he was come to invade Koondooz. That if the Dost would strictly abide by those treaties he would return to Bokhara, and cease molesting him. The Ameer replied and requested Mahomed Afzul Khan to hold out as long as he could, by giving the King of Bokhara assurances of future good behaviour towards the inhabitants, and other pretences.—Feb. 23.—A despatch was received from Sirdar Ameen Khan from Kandahar, stating that he had summoned the Jageerdars and principal landholders of Kandahar, and demanded troops from them to enable him to preserve the country from the grasp of his enemies. They replied that as the Dost's Government had confiscated their estates, and left them but limited means and little influence, they were unable to raise any number of troops; but that if Government restored their lands, they would have direct control over their residents, and the resources for maintaining them; and by which means alone they could organise a body of troops and maintain them under their own supervision. That the forces he had sent to Gurshuk were opposed by the Zemindars of that village; and that he was still forwarding as many soldiers as he could to Furrah, the scene of disturbance. It is rumoured in Jelalabad that some merchants who were coming to Mushhad-Mookuddus were plundered by the tribe of Ulmanee and Oorgunjee.—Feb. 24.—An urzee was read from Mahomed Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, informing the Dost that he had summoned all the troops who were on leave, and that he was awaiting his orders as to how he is to dispose of them.—Feb. 25.—Golam Hussun, the British vakeel at Cabul, represented to the Dost that he had received information of the Governor-general's arrival at Peshawur, and that he was anxious to pay his respects to the Viceroy in person. The Ameer informed him that he was at liberty to visit Peshawur, or to remain in Cabul, as he deemed proper. The vakeel accordingly made arrangements for starting to Peshawur on the following day. The Ameer remarked to his councillors that as the Governor-general had arrived in Peshawur, it was requisite that he (the Dost) should send the presents he had prepared for the Viceroy. His advisers replied that as the Viceroy had sent no invitation to the Ameer, nor any official information of his arrival, it was not advisable for the Dost to send any presents; but a congratulatory letter (expressive of the joy the Dost felt in the restoration of peace and good order in Hindoostan) would suffice. The Dost accordingly ordered that a letter should be drafted out and sent to the Viceroy.—Feb. 26.—The Ameer held a durbar this morning, and informed Abdool Razak Khan, the accountant, that he intends to start for Cabul in the beginning of April, and that all the papers and documents which required his signature should be ready by that time. At the close of the durbar the Ameer held a private interview with Sirdars Peer Mahomed Khan, Oosman Khan, Goolam Mahomed Khan, and Shere Ally Khan. This conference lasted till 5 p.m. The subjects discussed in this private interview have not yet been made known.—Feb. 27.—One of the servants of the Dost gave the following explanation of the subjects discussed on the preceding day. That the Dost had represented to his councillors who were here assembled, the stoppage of his allowance of one lac a month by the British Government, and of his constant reminders to the British authorities for a continuance of that aid, and of the inattention with which his letters were regarded by the British Government. He also stated that this allowance was to be granted to him so long as the Herat boundary question was in dispute, and that he received the money only for a few months. That the Governor-general's visit to Peshawur, and the indifference (in not inviting the Dost) with which the Dost's presence was regarded, were omens that the British were no longer bound by the treaties they had concluded with him (the Ameer,) and the Governor-general was come to Peshawur to annul those conditions, and to express his displeasure with the Dost's friendship. That the Dost was hated by all his subjects, and held in contempt by all Mahomedans, merely because he had become the friend of the British. The Sirdars replied that the Ameer was at liberty to act as he thought best. The Ameer then wrote to Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, at Turkistan, requesting him to send his vakeel to the King of Bokhara, and to inform the King that he has broken the bonds of friendship with the British, and that the Dost was now anxious that the King should come to some amicable terms with him, and conclude a treaty of peace on the same footing as it existed before. The Dost also related all the particulars of the causes which induced him to give up the friendship of the British, and strongly advised Mahomed Afzul Khan to obtain the good graces of the King of Bokhara.—Feb. 28.—Nothing of importance transpired on this day.—Feb. 29.—The Dost received a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Turkistan, and after its perusal he was much grieved, and his countenance turned pale. The Dost then wrote to Mahomed Rufeek Khan at Kandahar, requesting him to send all the gold which he had accumulated from the mine to Cabul, and that from its proceeds he would raise a large body of troops and send them to Turkistan.

March 1.—At the conclusion of the durbar the Ameer sent for Abdool Razack Khan, and requested him to issue perwanahs for the payment of the wages of the troops who were proceeding to Kandahar and Turkistan, so that before their departure on service every soldier may be paid up. The Dost also summoned Shah Murd Khan, and requested him to disband the new levies he had raised, and to order them to await further instructions, when notice will be given them.—March 2.—The accoutrements purchased by Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, from Peshawur, were despatched to Jelalabad, and the Ameer ordered that they should be repaired and distributed to the troops. A letter was read from Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Turkistan, prohibiting the Dost from despatching troops towards Turkistan, as the ice was very dense on the road; that he (Mahomed Afzul Khan) had adopted measures for securing the post of Tukht-tabul, which the King of Bokhara had intended to attack; and that he was sanguine that the King of Bokhara would come to amicable terms with the Dost. This he perceived from the social manner in which the Vakeel of the King of Bokhara listened to the terms proposed, and the alacrity with which the Vakeel gave his assent. That it was rumoured in Turkistan that the King of Bokhara had encamped at a place called Kirkee, and intended to proceed to the banks of the Hamoo, and there await the arrival of his Vakeel; that the King of Bokhara had posted the three Russian generals in command of his artillery; that the Russian generals proposed to the King of Bokhara to have provisions stored up on the banks of the river, and that the King had accordingly ordered granaries to be erected in that place.

—March 3.—The Dost invited Sirdars Peer Mahomed Khan, Oosman Khan, and Golam Mahomed Khan, and remarked to them that he had learned from Turkistan that the King of Bokhara was inclined to come to terms, and that the King was also establishing granaries and storing provisions for his troops. Sirdar Oosman Khan replied that an agent had just arrived from Bokhara, from whom he had learned that the Kings of Bokhara, Persia, and Turkistan had combined together, and were bound down to assist each other in case of warlike operations; that the Czar of Russia had ceded two districts to the Persians. The Dost rejoined that since this has been the case it is the ultimate intention of the King of Bokhara to wage war, and that he would wait to see how Mahomed Afzul Khan would settle affairs. The Ameer also expressed his intention of proceeding to Turkistan as soon as the road was cleared of ice.—Lahore Chronicle.

The Office of Deputy-paymaster, Jullundur.

Fort William, March 6.—No. 240 of 1860.—The Hon. the President in Council, with the concurrence of H.E. the Gov. gen., is pleased to direct that, from April 1 next, the office of the dep. paymr., Jullundur, shall be transferred to Gwalior, the following stations forming the new or Gwalior circle of payment, viz. :—

Morar (Gwalior) Sipree.

Goonah, Augur, Jhansi.

Mouranepore, Lullupore.

Mote, Kurara, Chundeyree.

Tal Beheet, Tehree, Nowgong.

Indore, Neemuch, and Ajmere.

On the removal of the pay-office from Jullundur, the dep. paymr. at Lahore will pay all the stations comprised in that circle except Phillour, which is transferred to the Umballah circle.

Half-yearly Inspection of Troops.

Head Quarters, Camp Lahore, Feb. 18.—Officers commanding divisions and districts are in future to inspect the European cavalry and infantry regts. of H.M.'s Indian army half-yearly, instead of annually, as has been the practice hitherto.

2. These inspections should take place in the months of March and Nov., and the reports thereon be as complete as possible.

Ammunition Stores.

With the sanction of Govt., the C. in C. is pleased to direct that the maximum scale of ammunition to be kept in store in each regt. of native cav. shall be as below specified :—

Service ammunition, 100 rounds per carbine or pistol.
Practice " 30 " "
Blank " 80 " "

With the regulated proportion of caps.

Postage on Official Letters.

Head Quarters, Camp Sealkote, March 1.—Under instructions from Govt., the C. in C. directs all military officers under the orders of H.E. to keep an account of the postage due on official letters posted under their several franks during March and April, 1860.

Leave of Absence on M.C.

The C. in C. is pleased to direct that when officers on leave at Simla or any of the hill sanatoria desire to appear before a medical board other than the usual annual committees held at such stations, they shall invariably make application for permission to do so to the officer commanding the division in which the sanatorium may be situated.

The Boon of Two Years' Service.

Camp Kamookie, Feb. 25.—With reference to the boon of two years' service granted by G.O. by the Gov. gen., dated Oct. 12, 1859, to the European troops of H.M.'s Indian forces, H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to publish the subjoined extract from a despatch No. 468, dated Dec. 19 last, from the Right hon. the Sec. of State for India :—

Para. 6. "It is probable that the boon of two years' service will, in some instances, have completed the contract engagement for ten years of the soldiers receiving it, and will thus have entitled them to their discharge. The re-enlistment of such men with the usual bounty will of course be permitted, provided they are eligible, under the regulations, and willing to be attested on the new form for general service."

The spirit of the concession is, that each soldier should receive, as far as may be, a full boon of two years' service.

Accordingly, and in order that the application of the boon may be uniform in the three presidencies, the Gov. gen. directs that the following construction of the concession shall be observed :—

Soldiers will be allowed to reckon the boon towards the completion of such periods of service as, under existing regulations, entitle them to discharge or to renew with bounty, or to reckon it or any remaining portion of it in the period for which, if fit for the service, they are allowed to renew their contract. Men renewing are, in every case, to be attested on the new form for general service.

Furlough to the whole Native Army.

Head Qrs., Camp Sealkote, March 3, 1860.—With the sanction of Government, the C. in C. is pleased to grant furlough to the whole of the Bengal native army, including those corps under the orders of the Lieut. gov. of the Punjab that are serving out of that province, but excepting such native regiments as may have been ordered to proceed to China.

2. The furlough will commence on April 10, and terminate on October 31 next.

3. Leave will be given, where practicable, to the extent of 10 per cent. of the effective strength of corps. In all cases where divisional generals may find it necessary to withhold the indulgence, altogether or in part, a special report of the circumstances is to be made for his excellency's information.

4. Leave of absence is to be given with a strict regard to the priority of claims; and the period of leave is to be limited with reference to the distance of the men's homes and the nature of their business, so as to admit of as general a participation in the indulgence as possible.

5. Furlough will not be given, as a rule, to the men of the new levies under the C. in C.'s orders, but special exceptions may be made, under the sanction of officers commanding divisions, in the cases of old soldiers who have been transferred or may be attached to the levies, or in the cases of young soldiers who have urgent business.

6. All Government or regimental arms are to be left with regiments; but men of the irregular cavalry are to be allowed to take their horses with them.

7. The usual leave certificates are to be granted, and men proceeding on furlough are to be reminded of the penalties they are liable to incur from overstaying their leave; and they are also to be warned to send notice to their regiments, should sickness prevent their starting to join their corps in such time as to insure their reaching them on the expiration of their leave.

Officers commanding divisions and districts will be good enough to forward, with as little delay as possible, to the officiating asst. adjt. gen. of the army, at Simla, the names of all officers and soldiers of H.M.'s Indian army, now or formerly serving in their division or district, who have actually received in India the decoration of the Victoria Cross.

The return is to include those who may have left their commands as well as those still serving in them.

The C. in C. is pleased to direct that the officer commanding at Lahore shall in future be designated the "Officer commanding at Meean Meer," and that all letters intended for him and the staff officers serving under his orders shall henceforward be directed to Meean Meer.

Inspectors of Musketry.

Camp Lahore, Feb. 21.—His excellency the Gov. gen. is pleased to authorise the appointment of district inspectors of musketry for the European troops in India, both of the line and of H.M.'s Indian forces, under the following arrangements :—

In the Presidency of Bengal there will be—

1 chief inspector with a staff salary of Rs. 400.

4 district inspectors with a staff salary, each of Rs. 250.

In the Madras Presidency, including Pegu—

2 district inspectors with a staff salary, each of Rs. 250.

In the Bombay Presidency, including Scinde—

2 district inspectors with a staff salary, each of Rs. 250.

The chief inspector in Bengal will be attached to army head quarters, and all musketry returns in the Presidency will be forwarded to him for submission to the C. in C. and subsequent transmission to the home authorities.

The senior of the two musketry inspectors in Madras and Bombay will be attached to the army head-quarters of those Presidencies, and while performing the duties of their own divisions will also receive the reports from the other one, which will be sent home as in the case of Bengal.

For the performance of the above duties the senior inspectors at Madras and Bombay will receive an extra allowance of rupees (50), fifty per mensem each.

The inspectors when on tour of inspection will travel by post at the public expense at the usual rates, to be passed on contingent bills.

The distribution of the districts in the Bengal Presidency will be as follows :—

1st District.—To include the European troops stationed at Calcutta, Barrackpore, Dum-Dum, Ranee-gunge, Berhampore, Dacca, Hazareebagh, Benares, Dinapore, Dehree, Ghazepore, Gorakhpore, and Azimgurh.

2nd District.—To include the European troops stationed at Allahabad, Oorsee, Cawnpore, Futtch-gurh, Lucknow, Roy Bareilly, Fyzabad, Gondah, Seetapore, Shahjehanpore, Bareilly, and Moradabad.

3rd District.—To include the European troops at Saugor, Jubbulpore, Nagode, Nowgong, Gwalior, Jhansie, Agra, Muttra, Meerut, Delhi, Umballa, Jullundur, and Ferozepore.

4th District.—To include the European troops at Umritsar, Lahore, Mooltan, Sealkote, Rawul Pindee, Nowshera, Attock, Campbellpore, and Peshawur.

The distribution of the districts in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies will be determined on by the Governments of those Presidencies, in communication with the C. in C.

The office establishment of the district inspectors of musketry will be settled hereafter.

Durbar to the Chiefs of the Peshawur.

Foreign Dept. Peshawur, Feb. 29.—H.E. the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a general durbar this day, at Peshawur, for the reception of the chiefs and principal native residents of the Peshawur division.

These, together with the principal civil and military officers of the station having been first assembled, the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by H.E. the C. in C., entered and took his seat under a royal salute.

Each chief and native gentleman was introduced to the Viceroy and Gov. gen., the customary offerings were presented and accepted, and suitable khillats were bestowed on all according to their rank.

H.E. took the occasion to confer on Khoja Muhammed Khan, Rais of Khutuk, the title of Khan Bahadur, for his services during the rebellion.

H.E. then addressed the assembly in the following words:—

"Khans of the Peshawur Division,—I have summoned you to meet me here that I may thank you for your loyalty and good service to the State.

"I see among you many who have voluntarily taken arms in the Queen's Indian army, and many who, unable by age or infirmity to do so in person, have sent their sons and dependents to strengthen its ranks during the contest which was lately raging in Hindostan.

"I see others who have heartily aided the Civil Government in maintaining order in this division of the Empire during a time of excitement and trouble.

"Peace is now restored to every corner of India, and it is a pleasure to me to thank you, in the Queen's name, for the share which you have had in the good work.

"Khans,—As the Chiefs of the country you are the advanced guard of the British power on this side of India. You have for neighbours restless, warlike, and unruly tribes, who have too often done violence to the lives of British subjects and to the authority of the Government.

"Quite recently some of these men have learned, not for the first time, how swift and sharp can be the punishment of those who so offend.

"I now charge you, in your intercourse with them, to warn them that the like punishment will never fail to overtake those who by their crimes disturb the tranquillity of the frontier. Tell them that if any of them suffer wrong at the hands of British subjects they shall receive prompt redress; but that peace must not be broken. They shall have justice, but I will have peace.

"Khans,—I look to you as loyal chiefs to aid the government in enforcing this rule, and in repressing violence on both sides of the border.

"You will thereby best promote your own prosperity and that of your dependents, and command respect from the subjects of the neighbouring power."

This having been interpreted in the native language, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. left his seat under a royal salute, and the durbur broke up.

Gov. gen.'s Camp, Sealkote, March 9.—H.E. the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a durbur at Sealkote on Thursday, the 8th inst., for the reception of the Maharajah of Cashmere and the Chiefs of the Derajat.

The Maharajah of Cashmere, who had been previously escorted by British officers and troops from his own territory into the station of Sealkote and entertained with the honours due to the rank and position of an independent chieftain, had a private audience of His Excellency, accompanied by his son, his cousin, and the principal officers of the Cashmere State, and received on arrival a salute of nineteen guns.

Afterwards, the Maharajah and his relatives and officers, the chiefs of the Derajat and other native gentlemen, together with the principal civil and military officers of the station having been assembled in general durbur, the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by His Excellency the Commander in Chief, and by the Hon. the Lieut. governor of the Punjab, entered and took his seat under a royal salute.

The Maharajah and each of the other chiefs and native gentlemen present were introduced in succession to the Viceroy and Governor-general, the customary tribute and offerings were presented and accepted, and suitable presents and khilats were bestowed on all, according to their rank.

The Vakeel of the Nawab of Bhawalpore attended the durbur with presents from his highness, and received the usual complimentary khilats.

After the concluding ceremonies the Viceroy and Governor-general left his seat under a royal salute. The Maharajah of Cashmere was then conducted from the tent under a salute of nineteen guns, and the assembly broke up.

This day the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by the Hon. the Lieut. gov. of the Punjab, the Sec. to the Govt. of India, the principal civil and military officers of the station, and the officers of H.E.'s personal staff, paid a return visit to the Maharajah of Cashmere at his encampment.

H.E. was met by the Maharajah himself and by the nearest relatives and principal ministers of his highness in accordance with established custom, and was received, both on arrival and departure, with a royal salute.

The annual tribute from the Ruler of Cashmere to the Queen was first presented, and accepted by H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in the name of Her Majesty.

The usual offerings having then been presented and accepted, His Excellency addressed the Maharajah in the following words:—

"I wish to take this opportunity of repeating to the Maharajah of Cashmere in his own durbur, and before his own court, the thanks which, when I had the pleasure of receiving His Highness yesterday in my camp, I offered to him for the good service rendered by His Highness to the Queen's armies during the late troubles in Hindostan.

"The Maharajah may be sure that the recollection of that service will long live in the memory of the British Government in India and in England.

"He may be sure, too, that it is the sincere desire of her Majesty's Government that his illustrious house may be perpetuated, and that it may continue to hold its possessions in peace and prosperity.

"I earnestly hope that the young Prince, his son, will grow up to be a worthy ruler of those rich and beautiful dominions; but if unfortunately a direct lineal successor should fail the Maharajah, His Highness may rely upon a willing recognition by the British Government of an heir adopted into his house according to its usage and tradition."

The concluding ceremonies having been observed, His Excellency retired.

By order of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India,

CECIL BEADON,

Sec. to the Govt. of India,
With the Gov. Gen.

Romanising the Native Alphabets.

Fort St. George, March 23, 1860.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India is published for general information:—

Public. No. 6.

I.E. the Hon. the Gov. in Council, Fort St. George.—Sir,—Para. 1. I have considered in council your letter, dated Oct. 22 (No. 74), 1859, reporting your proceedings on the subject of remedying the redundancy and confusion of the existing official phraseology, and of introducing some recognised system of writing in Roman characters native words in ordinary use.

2. I have to express my approval of the object you had in view; and though it may be difficult to accomplish it to its full extent, it may reasonably be expected that considerable improvement will result from the observance of the few simple rules prescribed by your resolution of Sept. 12, 1859. It will be proper, however, with reference to the observations of Mr. Elliot, that the operation of the rules should be watched; and that, if necessary, some modification should be made in them as respects the rendering of consonants, till the schedules which you intend to issue shall have been prepared.

3. I enclose for your information a paper of remarks on the subject by Professor Wilson.—I have, &c., C. WOOD.

MEMORANDUM.

Whatever advantages may result from the substitution of the Roman alphabet for the various and difficult alphabets of India, it is undeniable that their realization is indefinitely remote, and that until the natives of India, if they ever agree to the substitution, adopt the European characters, their European rulers must take the trouble to acquire theirs.

It is very possible, as I have attempted to show in the introduction to the Glossary, to devise a scheme for applying the Roman letters to the languages of India; but where twenty-four letters have to do the duty of nearly thrice their number, some contrivances must be had recourse to, to multiply, in some instances at least, their usual powers. The Managing Committee of the Madras Literary Society referred to by the Madras Government, have admitted this in their report, and have gone into the whole question with adroitness especially to the expedients I have adopted. Agreeing in the main, they have suggested various modifications, some of which may be advisable. I am disposed to demur to some others. As, however, the principles which I have laid down have their entire concurrence, it might be of public benefit to make them more generally known by printing that portion of the introduction to the Glossary* which treats of the alphabet, and distributing copies to the public offices. In revising the publication, which would form a pamphlet of no very great extent, I should have an opportunity of more carefully examining the suggestions of Messrs. Elliot and Bayley, and the result might be an almost unexceptionable manual for the expression of the words of any Indian form of speech in the letters of Europe.

This, however, is not the immediate object of the Government of Madras. At that Presidency, as well as at those of Bengal and Bombay, it is, no doubt, high time to put an end to the disgraceful blundering and unsystematic deformity with which Indian words are still too often represented in public documents by English letters. Instances might possibly be even now adduced almost worthy of the factors of Surat who converted Sahu Raja into Sow Roger; and as I have exemplified, even simple and ordinary terms undergo such transformations as to render it almost impossible to recognise them; and, as stated by the Madras Government, the official phraseology is so redundant and confused as to be a positive obstruction to public business, and to cause in the aggregate an enormous waste of invaluable time. It is to remedy this, and to establish a uniform system of spelling, so that the same Indian word shall always appear in this same English dress by whatsoever functionary it may have to be presented to the Government, that the Orders of the 12th of September last have been circulated. It may be difficult to accomplish the object to its full extent, but there is no doubt that a very important improvement may be easily effected by calling the attention of all public officers to the proposed orders of the Government of Madras.

1. When technical terms can be correctly represented by an English equivalent, the English word should be used.

There is no question of the judiciousness of this injunction. Native words are often very unnecessarily inserted from idleness, affectation, or sometimes perhaps ignorance; their meaning being unknown. This is particularly the case in the South of India, where the languages are less carefully studied. Occasionally, however, the original term expresses a more definite idea than any equivalent: the simple phrase "Lakshiraj" conveys to a person conversant with the revenue system of India, a more precise notion of what is intended than—rent free, or exempt from revenue tax; generally speaking, however, where the word is readily translatable, the English should be used. We have, for instance, in a reported case, an individual always spoken of as the Panikar, meaning nothing more than a carpenter; the Judge possibly did not know what it meant.

2. When native terms are introduced into official correspondence they should be expressed in English letters, according to the system originally recommended by Sir W. Jones, and since adopted, with partial variations, by the Asiatic Society, the Madras Literary Society, and by Professor Wilson, in his Glossary of Indian Official Terms.

In order to enable the servants of Government to comply with this injunction, it is obvious that they must be provided with the means in the shape of lists, at least of the equivalent letters. The pages of the Glossary will supply much that is most essential, but it may not always be available. Lists of the most usual official terms are to be supplied, and in the mean time a table of the vowel equivalents is given. This is by far the most important. It is in the vowels that the greatest confusion and barbarism prevail, and uniformity in writing them will contribute most materially to introduce accuracy and consistency of spelling. The consonants are of less consequence, and, in fact, it would not be possible to devise a scheme of diacritical marks, either accents or points that would be strictly adhered to in the hurry and informality of writing. A single stroke to mark a long vowel, as a i u, may be inserted readily enough, but the same over at or ad would be inconvenient, and generally omitted. If the vowels were correct, and rule 3 observed, that is, no consonant inserted that was not in the original word, the transcription would be sufficiently correct for all useful purposes.

3. No letters should be introduced into any native word which do not exist in the original; and those which do exist should be expressed strictly in accordance with the scheme.

The observance of this rule requires that the writer be acquainted with the word in its original characters; now the word may be Telugu, the civilian a Tamil scholar not familiar with Telugu, or it may be Marathi, with which the writer is not acquainted. He must take his version of the word from a native interpreter, who is apt to make sad work of his spelling; even a common Hindustani word, Mr. Elliot observes, may be unfamiliar to more than a dozen of the Madras civilians. The word "Marammat" (which, by the way, he himself inexactly writes "Maramat"), he says, is constantly written Mharamat, Marhamet, Mharamat—inserting an h where there is no such letter. Another very common inaccuracy is doubling a letter that should be single, as Mullig, Kilik, for Malik, Kila.

With respect to the second clause of this rule I have already expressed my opinion that, as affects the consonants, it can scarcely be enforced. Rapidity and inexactitude in penmanship are unfavourable to the use of diacritical marks; and with every wish to be precise, confusion and incorrectness will occur. In preparing a document for press, the scheme should be strictly followed, but in writing some latitude may and must be permitted. As long as precision is observed regarding the vowels, little or no embarrassment will be occasioned by the consonants.

Rule 4 provides for the continuation of the names of places, and it might be added of persons, which have become, as it were, stereotyped by long usage. This may be admitted. At the same time, there are a few common affixes which, if it could be done without inconvenience, one could wish to see rectified, such are cherry, poly, ore, pore, which should be cherri, palli, ur, pur, each being a significant term, meaning town or village. It would not be a great departure from past usage to write Pondicherry and Trichinapalli. There is a whole host of names, especially in Southern India, the correction of which would not shock prejudice, and would be a great benefit to future maps and surveys.

That complete uniformity and a satisfactory system will be realized, is not, I fear, to be anticipated; but it is admitted on all hands that a reform is indispensable, and that the move now made is in the right direction. For the representation of the vowels, all are agreed that the proposed equivalents should be strictly adopted; for the consonants, or rather the collective words, the Glossary may be taken as the guide until a manual that shall more fully combine the suffrages of competent judges shall be compiled and sanctioned.

Change in the Command of the Garrison Troops.

(Fort St. George Gazette, March 27.)

No. 124.—The Gov. in Council hereby notifies that H.M. has been pleased to accept the resignation by Sir C. Trevelyan of his commission as gov. and com. in chief of the fort and garrison of Fort St. George, and that the proposal of his Honour in Council to transfer the troops in garrison at Fort St. George and at the Presidency to the authority of H.E. the C. in C. has been approved by H.M.'s Govt.

2. The transfer will accordingly be carried into effect from March 31, 1860, under the following arrangements:—

3. The military command of the troops in garrison will be exercised by the maj. gen. comg. the centre division, with the following staff to be appointed by Govt., on the recommendation of the C. in C.:—

- 1 brig. maj. in lieu of the town maj., which appt. is abolished.
- 1 fort adjt.
- 1 garrison surg.
- 1 garrison asst. surg.

The brig. maj. will receive a staff salary of Rs. 350 per mensem, with the pay and full regimental allowances of his rank, and he will be provided with free quarters.

The allowances of the other staff officers will remain on the present footing.

The brig. maj., fort adjt., and garrison asst. surg. will reside in the fort.

The duties of the brig. maj. and fort adjt. will be the same as those of the town maj. and fort adjt. at present, with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by H.E. the C. in C.

5. The garrison surgeon and assistant surgeon will be employed under the military authorities on such military duties as are ordinarily performed by similar officers at other stations.

6. The barrack master will remain in charge of all public buildings at present under him. For those occupied by the troops (officers or men), he will be responsible to, and under the orders of, the military authorities. All buildings and stables under departmental occupation will continue allotted as at present, and regarding them, he will communicate direct with the civil architect or garrison engineer, as the buildings may be under their respective supervision.

7. The garrison engineer will stand in the same relation to the military authorities as concerns the buildings occupied by the troops only, as district engineers in regard to military buildings in the provinces. As regards the fortifications and works, he will be under the orders of the chief engineer.

8. The conservancy of the esplanades will continue under the commissioner of police, but all applications for the erection of pandals, encampment of troops, &c., &c., now made to the town major will be hereafter addressed to the brigade major.

9. As relates to the effective troops in garrison, the commissary of ordnance at Fort St. George will be available for all duties under the military authorities, in the same manner and to the same extent as commissaries of ordnance at other military stations.

10. The executive commissariat officer will, in the same manner and to the same extent, be subject to the military authorities, as provided for above in the case of the commissary of ordnance.

11. Advances of pay, when required, will, on the requisition of the adjt. gen. of the army, be made under the authority of a garrison order through the brigade major, as has heretofore been done by the town major.

12. The church will be made over to the lord bishop under the same conditions as churches in military cantonments, the necessary accommodation being reserved for the troops in garrison.

13. The body guard will receive their orders direct from the military secretary to the Hon. the Governor, but will submit the regulated reports, applications, and returns direct to the military authorities, and will be available (with the sanction of the Honourable the Governor) for all duties now ordinarily performed by them.

14. In all points not provided for above, the relation of all departments at the presidency connected with the army will remain as at present, leaving such modifications as may be required, to be made from time to time as found necessary.

15. Leave, whether to officers or men of the garrison, will be granted under the general regulations of the service; the rules in force as regards the grant of privilege leave by heads of departments connected with the army, will, however, remain in force as at present.

16. In placing the services of the officers marginally noted* at the disposal of the military authorities, so far as concerns their executive duties with the troops only, it is not intended to authorise any interference whatever with departmental arrangements and orders beyond that at present sanctioned by the general regulations of the service at other stations.

The governor in council is pleased to make the following appointment:—

The present incumbents of the following appointments will continue undisturbed:—

- Fort Adjutant of Fort St. George.
- Garrison Surgeon, Fort St. George.
- Garrison Asst. surg., Fort St. George.

Commissariat Requisitions.

Fort St. George, March 23.—No. 117.—The Governor in Council directs all heads of departments at the Presidency, and local officers of departments in the provinces, who make requisitions for supplies of any kind on the commissariat department to send to the Commissary gen. and to executive commissariat officers, before April 1, 1860, lists of every description of demand which they are likely to make in the year 1860-61, to enable the Commissary gen. to estimate the cost of the supplies, and to include the expenses in the budget which he is preparing for the next official year.

Care must be taken that the above-mentioned lists are framed with economy, and that the demands are restricted to the lowest possible amount consistent with the efficiency of the service.

* Barrack master, garrison engineer, commissary of ordnance, executive commissariat officer.

* Copies of Professor Wilson's Glossary of Indian Terms were furnished some years since to all the principal offices in the Presidency.

Disbandment of the 3rd Extra Battalion.

March 16.—Under instructions from Government, the C. in C. directs the disbandment of the 3rd Extra Battalion, from the date of arrival of the 24th regt. N.I. at Belgaum, from which date all establishments are to cease.

The native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and soldiers, received from the line, with the exception of those unfit for further service, are to be re-transferred, in their present rank, taking with them their arms, accoutrements, ammunition, and clothing, to their original regiments, to be borne as supernumeraries, until absorbed by casualties.

The privates enlisted for the battalion are to have the option of volunteering for regiments of the line (provided they are fit for the service), or of being discharged with gratuities at the rate of one month's pay for every complete year's service. Men so volunteering will carry with them to their new regiments their arms, clothing, and accoutrements.

Register rolls, and all other necessary papers, are to be sent to the officer commanding the regiments which the men are to join, on the strength of which they are to be brought from the date subsequent to the disbandment of the 3rd Extra Battalion, which is to be duly reported.

The men are to march to their respective stations under orders which will be communicated, through the quartermaster general of the army, to the maj. gen. commanding the southern division.

On the receipt of this order, a special invaliding committee is to be assembled at Belgaum for the examination of such native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and soldiers as may be considered unfit for further active service. The rolls are to show the regiments from which the men were originally received, and to be transmitted to army head quarters immediately on completion of the proceedings.

All stores in charge of the battalion are to be returned into the arsenal at Belgaum, and the European officers will proceed to rejoin their respective regiments on these orders being carried into effect.

Maj. gen. Farrell will be pleased to carry out the above orders, and issue any further instructions he may deem necessary to give them complete effect.

Lieuts. T. H. Trafford and F. J. Mortimer, art., are

att. to hd. qrs. horse brigade, for the purpose of undergoing a course of instruction in equestration drill.

Leave of absence:—

Staff.—Capt. W. S. Hewett, actg. brig. maj. at Ahmedabad, fr. March 23 to April 19, privileged leave in extension.

Rules for Furloughs in the Indian Navy.

No. 39.—Under instructions from, and subject to, the confirmation of H.M.'s Govt., H.E. the Gov. in Council is pleased to declare that acting masters and acting second masters serving with the I.N. shall be eligible to furlough on private affairs, and on medical certificate, on terms and conditions corresponding in a great measure with those now established for lieuts. and mates respectively:—

RULES FOR FURLOUGH ON PRIVATE AFFAIRS.

1. Acting masters, as regards pay and allowances while absent on furlough, shall be classed with jun. lieuts.

2. Acting 1st class 2nd masters shall be classed with mates of 3 years' standing.

3. Acting masters and acting 1st class 2nd masters shall have the same privileges as are assigned to other officers of relative rank by paragraphs 1 and 2 of G.G.O., No. 186 of Nov. 1, 1855:—

Para. 1. Every officer will be allowed a furlough to Europe, or elsewhere beyond sea, for a period of two years at the expiration of ten years' service, and for a second period of two years after twenty years' service in India.

Para. 2. The second furlough of two years will only be granted after ten years' service in India from the date of the return to duty after the first furlough of two years. These furloughs are not to be cumulative under any circumstances, but are limited to two years. Officers who have taken leave of absence on sick certificate to Europe, or elsewhere beyond the sea, will be ineligible to a furlough on private affairs until they have served six years from their last return to duty. This rule does not apply to short leaves to sea.

RULES FOR FURLOUGH ON SICK CERTIFICATE.

4. Acting masters and acting 1st class 2nd masters will be allowed leave of absence, on sick certificate, for a term not exceeding eighteen months, whether it be to any place in Europe or elsewhere out of India. Extensions of such leave, on production of medical certificates, for further periods not exceeding eighteen months in the whole, may also be granted.

5. Officers of the above grades, when absent on medical certificate, will be allowed pay as follows:—

If the period of actual servitude from the date of first joining the service fall short of three years (except in cases of an extraordinary nature, to be determined by Government), no pay.

Over three, and less than six years' service, one-half the furlough pay of his relative rank, viz.:—

Acting masters, Rs. 80-8-10 per mensem for the first six months, and 5s. 3d. per diem afterwards; acting 1st class 2nd masters, 3s. 3d. per diem; acting 2nd class 2nd masters, 2s. 7d. per diem, to be issued only on return to duty.

After six years' service, full furlough pay, viz.:—

Acting masters, Rs. 161-8-1 per mensem for the first six months, and 10s. 6d. per diem for the remainder of their leave; Acting 1st class 2nd masters, 6s. 6d. per diem; acting 2nd class 2nd masters, 5s. 3d. per diem.

LEAVE WITHIN INDIAN LIMITS.

6. The indulgence of privilege leave and of leave of absence on private affairs and under medical certificate, within Indian limits, enjoyed by jun. lieuts. and mates, and on the same condition as to pay and sick allowance as shown below, is also extended to acting masters and acting 2nd masters respectively.

Acting Masters.—Pay, Rs. 120 per mensem; sick allowance, 90 ditto; total, Rs. 210 ditto.

Acting 1st class 2nd Masters.—Pay, Rs. 100 per mensem; sick allowance, Rs. 60 ditto; total, Rs. 160 ditto.

Acting 2nd class 2nd Masters.—Pay, Rs. 70 per mensem; sick allowance, Rs. 60 ditto; total, Rs. 130 ditto.

7. Any leave granted to acting masters or acting 2nd masters will be subject to the new furlough regulations, published in G.G.O., No. 186 of Nov. 1, 1855.

8. The grant of passage money now made to lieuts. and mates proceeding to Europe on medical certificate will not be extended to acting masters and 2nd masters.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

OPERATIONS AGAINST THE WUZEEREES.

In our last issue we gave the official report of General Chamberlain's expedition against the Wuzerees, which is worthy of being read with close attention and interest. An officer travelling near the frontier, alone and unarmed, was suddenly attacked by a party of wild mountaineers and cruelly murdered. The outrage was scarcely known before measures were taken to avenge it. A force of 5,300 men was speedily in the field, under the command of one of the ablest and bravest officers the Punjab—that prolific mother of heroes—has yet produced. The constitution of this avenging column deserves a word of notice. Of the entire strength 240 horse and 1,216 foot levies were furnished by the Kohat district “for the purpose of keeping up the communications, holding posts, supplying escorts, &c., &c.”—in fact, of doing the peculiar duty of Volunteers, and this they did effectually. The general character of the operations reminds one of Henry the Second's expeditions into Wales. The mountaineers retired to a lofty range of hills, to which also they removed their families, their flocks and herds, and stores of grain, and there awaited the onslaught of their enemy behind a breastwork of stones and earth. The fighting was the least part of the business, for “sword and shield and pistol had no chance” against British arms and discipline. Courage and natural strength of position will no longer avail against practised riflemen and a well-trained artillery, and to be a patriot a man must now-a-days also be something of a soldier. One lesson taught by this brief but effective campaign may be useful to those who advocate the neutrality and immunity of commercial vessels in time of war. It was found that “the only course as regards humanity as well as policy (was) to make all suffer, and thereby for their own interests enlist the great majority on the side of peace and safety.” There is also one small trait that is very British. Many of the men had to walk barefooted because their shoes were worn out by their two days' march over the hills. Another trait, equally British, is far more gratifying to contemplate. Some of the neighbouring tribes, whose wishes were certainly not in favour of the expeditionary force, not only abstained from opposing its progress, through a salutary fear of consequences, but, being promised that life and property should be respected if no active opposition were offered, implicitly believed the word of the English officer, and suffered their women and children to drive their cattle and flocks to water in the same pool with the army which was passing on to chastise their neighbours and kinsmen. Nor did the infliction of punishment alone occupy the mind of the English general. Actuated by the desire of obtaining a correct knowledge of the hitherto untraversed country through which he was marching, he detailed two officers for the especial duty of executing a map “which will be invaluable for future operations.” In short, no service was ever more gallantly, more effectively, or more intelligently performed; and all, from the general in command to the humblest soldier, deserve the admiration and gratitude of their country.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY, OR WHAT?

A VERY unpleasant case has lately come before Mr. Court, Magistrate of Allahabad, tending to involve an officer of the Madras Army in most injurious suspicions. It might be called “The History of a Hoondie: a Fragment,” for the adventures of the symbolical bit of paper are not yet all revealed. As much as is yet known is very clearly stated by Mr. Court, who appears to have exercised a sound discrimination in passing judgment. The facts, as proved in Court, are briefly as follows:—

On the 7th May, 1859, Lieut. C. H. Griffin, H.M.'s 96th regiment, hurriedly left Cawnpore for Calcutta as second in command of the Eurasian battalion. A Mr. Bowen, of the former station, having missed him at the railway, where he had promised to deliver to that officer the sum of Rs. 167, forwarded the amount to him by a hoondie payable at the Allahabad branch of the Delhi Bank. This hoondie never reached its proper destination, though it did not fail to be presented at the Bank after receiving the following endorsements:—

“Contents payable to Lieut. Griffin, Eurasian battalion. (Signed) W. Bowen, Cawnpore, 7th May, 1859.

“Contents payable to Lieut. Turner, Royal Art. (Signed) R. C. Griffin, Eurasian battalion, Calcutta, 10th June, 1859.

“Please pay the contents to Agent Delhi Bank. (Sd.) G. P. Turner, Lieut. Royal Artillery, Allahabad, 10th June, 1859.”

The local agent, Mr. Vaughan, deposed to the receipt of a letter purporting to come from Lieut. G. P. Turner, R.A., expressing a wish to open an account, and forwarding the hoondie as his first credit. It says little for the vigilance of the Bank agent that he did not observe the somewhat startling circumstance that the promissory note in question appeared to have been endorsed on the same day at Calcutta and at Allahabad; nor did he even take the trouble to open an Army List to ascertain if any such person as Lieut. Turner, R.A., actually existed. Instead of adopting the most simple and obvious precautions, he paid away, only a few hours afterwards, the sum of Rs. 160 on account of this very hoondie, to the order of his new and unknown customer. It is certainly much to the credit of the British army that the mere assertion of wearing her Majesty's uniform should be held as a guarantee of respectability and honour. In the present instance the character of that force remains untarnished so far as Lieut. G. P. Turner was concerned, for there was no such officer in the Royal Artillery. The order for the Rs. 160 was made out in favour of Captain J. G. B. Griffin, of the 3rd Madras Europeans, who presented it in person, and received the amount. When the endorsements were discovered to be forgeries, which was only done through Lieut. O. H. Griffin having written to Mr. Bowen, complaining of the detention of his money, the Madras officer was arraigned to stand his trial on the charge of having committed the said forgeries. The hoondie, however, was not forthcoming. Mr. R. Benson, the officiating magistrate, had handed it to one of his Amlah to have it filed, and there all trace of it was lost. Profiting by this fortunate accident, Captain J. G. B. Griffin was, of course, released from arrest on the 2nd February of the present year. His own way of accounting for the possession of the order for Rs. 160 was that a gentleman called at his house on the 10th June, 1859, while a sale of his property was going on, and purchased a silver watch of that value. This gentleman represented himself to be Lieut. G. P. Turner, R.A., and in payment for the watch gave him an order on the Delhi Bank.

Upwards of six months having elapsed, Capt. Griffin recognises the pretended officer of artillery in a Mr. O'Callaghan, a confidential clerk in the employment of Messrs. Palmer and Co., merchants, of Allahabad. The recognition was not less strange than the other points in this singular case. On the 30th January, while he was still under arrest, Captain Griffin had a Committee of Arbitration sitting in his house regarding a dispute between himself and Mr. Palmer. The most damaging witness against him was Mr. O'Callaghan, but he never once hinted a suspicion of his being the fraudulent lieutenant of artillery. He says that he recognised him at once, but was anxious to avoid a scene, and, besides, he was not then aware that he could produce any other witnesses. However, he afterwards discovered that his mother-in-law, his daughter, and two of his native servants had as good memories as himself, and had also come to the conclusion that the individual they had seen for a few minutes among many others, six months ago, was no other than this unfavourable witness. Of the two servants, one had observed him as he passed through the room to take orders for dinner, the other as he went to fetch some wood. Both knew him by his low stature and by his beard—Mr. O'Callaghan, however, being above the average height, and his beard in no way remarkable.

Having taken time to think the matter well over, Captain Griffin informed Colonel Brett of the discovery he had made, and between eight or nine P.M.—more than two hours after his identification of the impostor—he made a formal report to the Brigade-major. It is at least odd that he did not recognise Mr. O'Callaghan some months previously, when he was introduced to him by Mr. Palmer. This took place in June or July, and one would have thought that a gentleman gifted with such an excellent memory would have seen that the confidential clerk and the pseudo-artillery officer were one and the same person. Six months later the faculty of recollection had become stronger, and thus Captain Griffin had no difficulty about swearing to the identity of the impostor. Mr. O'Callaghan was luckily able to prove that on the day when he was charged with having purchased the watch, he was not and could not have been anywhere near Captain Griffin's bungalow; and he further showed that he had lately threatened to expose certain acts of that officer, and had actually brought charges against him. It is not surprising that, after hearing and sifting the evidence on both sides, Mr. Court should have found the following judgment:—“I consider the charge against Mr. O'Callaghan not only to have broken down, but think Mr. O'Callaghan has placed his innocence beyond the shadow of a doubt; and I cannot but record an opinion that Captain Griffin, in swearing distinctly, first to Mr. O'Callaghan being the identical man who personated Turner, and, secondly, to his never having seen or been introduced to Mr. O'Callaghan, showed a somewhat reckless disregard to the sanctity of his oath. In both cases there was ample room for his having been mistaken." It was, indeed, a great mistake, as well as a cruel and heartless proceeding; and we cannot doubt that we have not yet heard the last of this fragmentary history of a hoondie.

THE POT AND THE KETTLE.

"THE Kettle began it." The Madras Judges, speaking through their mouthpiece, Sir Henry Davison, C.J., declare that the "proceedings of the Legislative Council (of Calcutta) are of the grossest ex post facto character, and violate the first principles of legislation and of justice; and that if they are allowed to stand, and serve as a precedent for the future, then the rights of every person throughout British India are in jeopardy, and we no longer live under the shelter of the British constitution." Thereupon Sir Barnes Peacock, Chief Justice of Bengal, and Vice-President of the Legislative Council, is inspired with fiery indignation; and, after expressing his astonishment that "any Judge sitting on the Bench, and supposed to be free from all irritation or excitement arising from personal or party feeling, should make use of such language," moves, "that in the opinion of the Council the remarks made by the learned Judges were unwarranted by the facts, and the language used wholly uncalled for and unjustifiable." This resolution was seconded by Sir C. Jackson, but was pronounced too severe by Sir Bartle Frere and Mr. Sconce; and, finally, Mr. Wilson succeeded in pouring oil on the troubled waters by suggesting that the proper mode of proceeding would be to lay the entire question before the Secretary of State, who would take a dispassionate view of all the circumstances of the case, and so be enabled to pass a calm, unbiassed judgment.

What, then, was this momentous question which roused two Chief Justices to such fierce wrath, and disturbed their learned serenity? What morbid agencies were at work that had such power to destroy their judicial imperturbability? What savoury bone of contention set these two mighty dogs of law to snap and snarl, to growl, and bite, and worry one another? On one side, careless legislation—on the other, careless administration of an Act carelessly worded by a careless legislator. Both parties were in the wrong, and each being in need of forbearance neither could make allowance for the other. But passing from generals, let us descend to particulars.

During the minority of the late Nabob of the Carnatic, his uncle, Prince Azim Jah Bahadoor, was appointed by the East India Company his guardian and the manager of his property. Now, uncles, like stepmothers, are proverbially cruel and unjust, and Prince Azim Jah took no pains to disprove the accuracy of the vulgar belief. On the contrary, his chief and only care—to use a homely but expressive phrase—was to "feather his own nest," though in doing so he might pluck to the skin the fledgling intrusted to his care. It is even probable that, cuckoo-like, he would have thrust out the lawful occupant of the estate, had he not been restrained by fear of the inexorable justice of the British Government. As it was, the Prince contented himself with raising money on the credit of his nephew to such an extent that when the latter attained his majority he found himself involved in debt to the amount of £200,000. Three-fourths of this formidable sum he at once repudiated, it being notorious that the uncle had appropriated to his own use the money thus fraudulently acquired. As both the Nabob and his uncle were exempt from civil process, the creditors had no means of proceeding against either during the lifetime of the former. Attaining his majority in 1842, the Nabob died in 1855 without leaving any legitimate issue. The British Government, therefore, succeeded to his property, though clearly they could not be held responsible for the debts incurred in his minority without his knowledge or acquiescence. Nevertheless, as it was owing to their appointment, or recognition, of Prince Azim Jah as Naib Regent that the latter had been enabled to obtain such a large credit, the Government resolved to exhibit a liberality rather in accordance with their own power and reputation than with the just claims of the creditors. The Legislative Council of Calcutta accordingly passed an Act, in August, 1858, the preamble of which set forth "that the East India Company is willing to pay in full, to such creditors as shall be willing to accept the same in the manner herein mentioned, all such debts as shall be proved to have been fairly and justly contracted by the said Nabob, or on his behalf, during his infancy, by the said Azim Jah as Naib Regent, such debts to be estimated in respect of moneys at the amounts which may be proved to have been actually advanced or paid by such creditors respectively, and in respect of goods supplied or other matters at the amount which shall be proved to have been the full and actual value thereof at the time when such debts were incurred, with interest at six per cent. per annum."

Now the Madras Judges to whom fell the duty of carrying out this Act thought proper to interpret the words, "fairly and justly contracted by the said Nabob or on his behalf during his infancy by the said Azim Jah as Nabob Regent," as a recognition by the State of all debts contracted by the uncle in the name of his ward, no matter what became of the moneys thus raised. If their ruling is correct, the Government are liable for the £150,000 repudiated by the late Nabob in 1842, together with accumulated interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum. The Legislative Council, however, reject this reading of their Act, and deny that they had ever any intention of paying the debts dishonestly contracted by the Regent. To make their meaning more clear, so that even the Madras Bench should, perforce, understand the purport of the previous Act, they passed another in June, 1859, in explanation of the former one. After stating the "doubts" which had been entertained as to the true construction of the preceding Act, the Council go on to say that "no debt contracted by the said Prince Azim Jah Bahadoor during the minority of the said late Nabob shall be deemed a debt or claim within the meaning of the said Section XIV. or any subsequent section of the said Act, unless it shall be proved that it was necessary and proper that such debt should be incurred on behalf or for the use of the said Nabob, and that the same was so contracted, or unless the Governor in Council of Fort St. George shall dispense with such proof."

Unfortunately this explanation leaves room for further explanation, for who is to decide what debts were proper and necessary to be incurred? The burden of the proof would evidently fall upon the creditors; but what means had they of ascertaining to what purpose Prince Azim Jah proposed to devote the money, or money's worth, he drew from their confidence, or cupidity? But this was not the objection urged by the Madras judges. According to Sir Henry Davison and Sir Adam Bittlestone the Act of 1859 is a gross piece of ex post facto legislation, and altogether unconstitutional. Instead, however, of indecently reviling the highest authority in the land, it might have been more dignified, as it certainly would have been more useful, had they devised some new legal phraseology to meet the real justice of the case. Their supplementary experience and sagacity might possibly have enabled the Council to frame a measure which should have secured to all bona fide creditors of the late Nabob the due payment of the claims, without holding the Government responsible for the swindling transactions of the Regent. Whatever borrowed moneys were faithfully applied to the use of the young Nabob ought certainly to be refunded, but it is absurd to suppose that the Government is bound to make good the frauds of his uncle. In any case it is an unsightly spectacle to behold two branches of the judiciary at open hostility with one another, exchanging hard words, and bandying to and fro unpleasant imputations. It is not thus that the natives of India will be inspired with an exalted admiration of the wisdom and moral superiority of their rulers; and without such a feeling on their part our hold of their country cannot be otherwise than precarious and uncertain. We trust, therefore, that this scandal will be brought to a speedy termination by the prompt action of the Secretary of State.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that in the Bengal district (419½ miles) the 24 miles between the river Adjai and Cynthea, the remaining portion of the South Beerboom division, had been duly opened for traffic. Mr. Turnbull, the engineer, still looked forward to the completion of the three following divisions—33½ miles, 23½ miles, and 26 miles up to the Ganges at Rajmahal—by the end of June. On the North Rajmahal division, 25 miles, the works were making rapid progress; on the Colgong division, 26 miles, the works were also in a forward state, and, assuming an adequate supply of permanent way materials, the line might, with great exertion, be opened to Colgong in the spring of 1861, a distance of 247 miles from Calcutta. The works on the Bhaugulpore division, 23 miles, were well advanced; on the Jehangeerah division, 20 miles, they were making good progress; and those on the Monghyr division, 29 miles, were progressing, but would be much accelerated by a communication being formed between the line and the river at Monghyr, which was under the consideration of the Government. It was expected the Monghyr tunnel would be completely pierced during the present month. On the Soane district the works were advancing rapidly towards completion, and at the Soane-bridge everything was going on very satisfactorily under Mr. Power's management, in circumstances of great difficulty; and if materials could be sent up from Calcutta more rapidly than they had been hitherto, the completion of this great work might be effected earlier than was anticipated by Mr. Turnbull in his last report—namely, the end of 1863. In the North-western Provinces (563 miles), it appeared that on the Benares district, 56½ miles, the works were mainly waiting the arrival of permanent way materials; that on the East Mirzapore district, 28 miles, satisfactory progress had been made during the last six months, as also on the following, or Middle Mirzapore district, 32 miles; that on the next division, West Mirzapore, 31½ miles, the main works were approaching completion, and there was every probability of these three last divisions being completed by the end of June next, with the exception of laying the permanent way. The works at the Tonse-bridge were steadily proceeding, while those at the Jumna-bridge were progressing. Much difficulty and delay had arisen from the want of land for brick-making—a matter still, it appeared, awaiting the decision of the Government. On the Cawnpore division, 27 miles, the works were well forward; on the Etayah district, 92½ miles, good progress had been made; on the Agra district, 86 miles, all was going on steadily, and on this and the following, or Delhi division, 82 miles, arrangements were in progress for getting possession of the land which had not been handed over. The great difficulty still to be overcome was the transport of permanent way materials, which had all been shipped from this country, from Calcutta to the works. The board had every confidence that when the line is opened to Rajmahal, and their steam flotilla was fairly at work, this almost only remaining bar to early completion would be removed. The surveys of the Jubbulpore line were proceeding under the superintendence of Mr. Le Mesurier, chief engineer. The permanent way and works continued in sound condition, and had been maintained at a cost, for the past half-year, of 7d. per train mile. Accompanying this report is the revenue account for the half-year ended the 31st of December last. The working expenses, which now included a proportion of the charges in this country, had been 45.24 per cent. Of the 708,360 passengers carried during the half-year ending the 31st of December last, 665,326 were third-class, 34,918 second-class, and 8,116 first-class. The increase in the number of passengers was 116,782 as compared with the corresponding half of 1858. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ended the 31st of December last had been £113,149, against £85,972 for the corresponding half of 1858. The total gross receipts for the year 1859 amounted to £233,054, against £166,871 for the year 1858, showing an increase of £66,183. The net traffic receipts since the opening of the line had been £31,253 in 1855, on 121 miles, £57,060 in 1856, £82,760 in 1857, £88,148 in 1858, and £128,534 on 142 miles for eight months, and 166 miles for four months. These sums were paid to the Government of India. The receipts from traffic in the year 1855 amounted to £66,970, or £10. 12s. 6d. per mile per week; in 1856 to £96,100, or £15. 5s. 5d. per mile per week; in 1857 to £133,641, or £21. 4s. 9d. per mile per week; in 1858 to £166,871, or £26. 10s. 5d. per mile per week; and in 1859 to £233,054, or £29. 17s. 7d. per mile per week. The working expenses amounted to £35,617, or 53.26 per cent.; £39,040, or 41.66 per cent.; £50,870, or 38.06 per cent.; £78,723, or 47.17 per cent.; and to £104,520, or 44.85 per cent. respectively. The permanent way and works between Allahabad and Cawnpore had been maintained in good order for the last six months, at a cost of 8½d. per train mile. The gross receipts for the half-year had been £36,613, working expenses £18,678, showing a gross earning of £11. 8s. 11d. per mile per week. The sum of £1,600,000 was raised on debentures about November last, and the board considered that the balance of capital in hand on the 31st of December last would suffice to carry on the works till June or July next. The capital account showed that £13,614,067 had been received to the 31st of December last, and £11,798,665 expended, including £3,486,539 during the year 1859, leaving a balance of £1,815,402.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that fifty additional miles of railway in the Deccan, from Deeksal to Barsee-road, was opened for public traffic on the 24th of October last, by which the length of the railway opened was increased to 245 miles. The traffic receipts of the half-year ending the 31st of December last upon the opened portion of the line amounted to £80,008, and the expenses to £16,706, leaving a balance of £33,302 as profit to the credit of net revenue account. In the half-year 602,922 passengers and 88,668 tons of goods were carried, against 553,816 passengers and 68,543 tons of goods in the corresponding half-year of 1858. The point to which the railway was completed was still far short of the producing districts of the country; and there was as yet no permanent station accommodation provided in Bombay. In consequence of the break in the railway at the Bhore Ghât the whole of the traffic between the Concan and the Deccan had to be transported eight miles over a steep and tortuous mountain road, at a heavy cost, by the inferior means which were alone available there for such a purpose; and the opening, at short intervals, of new sections of the lines seriously interfered with those permanent arrangements which were requisite for the development of traffic. In this incipient and imperfect condition of the undertaking the receipts hitherto obtained had so much surpassed the expectations originally formed, that they led to the most favourable anticipations of future results. The opening of the North-Eastern Extension to the coal district would ultimately relieve the company of the great expenditure for fuel. The works, permanent way, and buildings of the opened line, as well as the whole of the rolling stock used in working the traffic, were thoroughly maintained during the half-year. As regarded the railway in course of construction, the works had been continued uninterruptedly during the half-year. The re-letting of the works of the Bhore Ghât incline (Contract No. 7) to Mr. S. Tredwell was mentioned in the last report. Mr. Tredwell unfortunately died fifteen days after he had taken possession of the works, but his representatives having since assiduously carried them on, the company's interests had not suffered. Upon the remaining section of the South-East line—viz., from Barsee-road to Sholapore, forty-nine miles (Contract No. 9), such progress had been made in the half-year as to allow of twenty-eight miles from Barsee-road to Mohol being opened for public traffic on the 2nd of January last, and it was expected that the further distance to Sholapore would be completed by the present month of April. Upon the North-East line from Wassind to the foot of the Thull Ghât (Contract No. 10), much sickness had occurred among the workpeople, but the first four miles of the contract from Wassind to Shawpore had, since the 6th of February, been used for passenger traffic, and for the conveyance of permanent-way materials, as well as for bringing forward from Shawpore the firewood-traffic. On the other contracts of the North-East line to Jubbulpore, the works, owing to various causes, had not proceeded as rapidly as it was hoped they would; but the attention of the directors in Bombay was given to pressing them forward with all possible expedition. Upon the Nagpore branch the engineers had been employed in staking out the line, and preparing the working sections for the use of the contractors. The total receipts on capital account from the beginning to the 31st of December last, amounted to £5,897,123, and the total expenditure to £4,906,222, leaving a balance of £990,901. Of this balance £130,800 was required for paying off debentures at 4½ per cent., due the 1st of January, the owners of which had declined to renew them. Notwithstanding the depressed condition of the money market towards the end of last year, the directors were able to provide, by means of renewals of old loans at the increased rate of 5 per cent. interest, and by new loans obtained at the same rate, the whole of the sum of £333,300 previously borrowed on debentures. In consequence of the large extension of the company's capital and operations, and of the greatly enhanced responsibility thereby devolving upon the auditors and the secretary, the directors recommend that the allowance to the two auditors be increased from 20 guineas to 50 guineas per annum, and that the secretary's salary be raised from £700 to £900 per annum. Mr. Watt, the secretary, had now been in the service upwards of six years, in which time the capital had grown from £500,000 to £8,000,000; and they had much pleasure in acknowledging his assiduity and efficiency in the conduct of business. The Secretary of State having objected to an increase of the amount of the home establishment allowance, the directors were in communication with him upon the subject; but they had determined to provide, in the mean time, for the above increases, by reducing their own allowance from £1,300 to £1,000 per annum.

It appeared, from a report published by the local authorities, that the profits on the East India Railway were estimated as having amounted to £8. 10s. per cent. per annum, on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to £5. 14s. 3d. on the whole line, but on the Concan line only, to £8. 13s. 6d. per cent. per annum. The capital account showed that £5,897,123 had been received, and £4,906,222 expended, leaving a balance of £990,901. The net revenue account showed that £111,698 had been paid into the Government treasury, and that £33,302, on account of the past half-year, remained to be paid in, making the total to the credit of the company £215,001.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
 "A very entertaining volume, evincing great research. It is surprising what a fund of incidents and facts the author has brought together, and placed before us in an attractive form. The work is just the one suited to a soldier, inasmuch as it may be taken up to while away an hour, and laid down at any moment, without losing its thread, or weakening its impressions."—United Service Magazine.

"Second to none of its class in merit, 'Curiosities of War' teems with authentic anecdotes of the British Army. We recommend our readers to buy the book, the perusal of which will endear yet more the British Army to every Englishman. The author has done both the service and the public a favour, by the publication of 'The Curiosities of War.'—Standard.

"Noble deeds, loyalty, and heroism, in every phase of military life, are chronicled with graphic skill, and the book will doubtless give an impetus to the spirit of the day."—Sunday Times.

"One of the most interesting chapters is 'Woman in Battle.' The book abounds with interesting scraps and anecdotes; it will be of great value to the military student."—Court Circular.

"Mr. Carter has a natural taste for accumulating strange or curious stories, incidents, and traits. His book will be amusing and instructive to all."—Chatham News.

"Will fully repay those who are daily becoming more and more interested in the public feeling that it is necessary to be fully prepared against any emergency that may arise against the liberties of the country."—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

This Soldiers' Book and Military Compendium is full of the most interesting anecdotes and incidents relating to various regiments, and contains the origin of every infantry corps, together with names and heroic deeds of the recipients of the Victoria Cross, arranged regimentally.

ALLEN'S
MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffuseness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 3 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MILITARY and NAVAL EDUCATION.—A CAMBRIDGE GRADUATE, resident at Brighton, RECEIVES a limited number of PUPILS, between the ages of Twelve and Fifteen, who may be destined for the Military and Naval Professions. With a view to this ultimate object, the entire course of Study, from the outset, is regulated expressly in conformity with the requirements of the Examinations at Addiscombe, Sandhurst, Woolwich, and Portsmouth; and every care is taken to direct special attention to those subjects likely to prove professionally useful in the future career of the Naval or Military officer. The Pupils are examined periodically in Mathematics by Professor J. R. YOUNG, formerly of Belfast College, and Author of "A Course of Mathematics, Pure and Mixed, for the Use of Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations," &c.; and also in Classics and Modern Languages by Scholars of repute. Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street, London.

AN INTRODUCTION to the GRAMMAR of the SANSKRIT LANGUAGE, for the Use of Early Students. By H. H. WILSON, M.A., F.R.S., &c., &c. 8vo. Cloth, 18s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

SOUND and WHITE TEETH are indispensable to PERSONAL ATTRACTION and to health and longevity, by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a White Powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herb. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the Teeth, and insures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and anti-scurbic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of decay of the Teeth, induce a healthy action of the gums, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath, also, from the salubrious and disinfecting qualities of the ODONTO, attains a purity and fragrance truly grateful to its possessor.

PRICE 2s. 9d. PER BOX.
CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' ODONTO, &c." are on the Label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp.
Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.
"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
"W. J. NEWMAN,
"Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."
Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in 1858, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.
Single Truss, 16s. 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.

H SPRING CHANGES.—In the spring many persons otherwise remarkably healthy often suffer from cracked lips, rough skin, pimples, and blotches. All sufferers from such causes will find their appearance and comfort both restored by the use of Holloway's preparations, which may be used without fear, as nothing in the Ointment could injure the most delicate skin, nothing in the Pills could disagree with the most feeble constitution. The Ointment immediately cools and relieves the irritation; the Pills purify the blood; both act energetically on the cutaneous functions. They likewise set the digestion in order, strengthen the stomach, and regulate the liver and kidneys; thus disorder disappears from the interior as the disfigurements depart from the skin.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBURY

sold Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of FEVER, RHEUMATISM, VIOLENT COLDS, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name—F. NEWBURY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, London.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-

RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Doloréux, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BARCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD PRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.
At Home from Eleven till Five.

TO SUFFERERS with CORNS and

BUNIONS.—Ask for a Box of YOUNG'S CORN and BUNION PLASTER, which will eradicate corns or bunions in a very short time. Be careful that you have YOUNG'S—the name is printed on the label; all others are imitations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box, or by post for thirteen postage stamps. Address H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Alders-gate-street, E.C. May be had at most chemists throughout the world. Agents wanted abroad. N.B.—A Liberal Allowance to Wholesale Dealers.

BONUS YEAR.
NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY.
ESTABLISHED 1836.
Capital, £1,259,760.

Office in London: 1, MOORGATE-STREET.

The next investigation, for the purpose of declaring a Bonus to the Policyholders, will take place on 31st January, 1861, and all Policies in the Participating Class, effected prior to that date, will share in the profits then to be divided.

The whole of the Profits of this branch are divisible, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, amongst the insured.
The last Bonus declared by the Company was at the rate of £1. 7s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the amount insured, a return which, when its very moderate scale of premiums is considered, has rarely been exceeded by any other Office.

As an illustration of the proportion which the additions already made to Policies bear to the sums paid by the assured in the shape of Premiums, it will be sufficient to state that a Policy for £1,000 taken out in 1850, on a life then aged 25, and upon which £503 have been received by the Office, has been increased by successive Bonus additions to the sum of £1,351. 1s. 10d., the increase being equal to SEVENTY PER CENT. on the Premiums paid by the assured.

All Policies are guaranteed by a subscribed Capital of upwards of One Million Sterling, an accumulated and invested Premium Fund of over £350,000, and the unlimited responsibility of upwards of Seven Hundred Shareholders.
A. P. FLETCHER, Secretary.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Claphamcommon, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common.
They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to Westend and City pass constantly. One mile to the Dalham Station, for Picnic, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS,
handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 11th of April announces the commencement of the reaction in public opinion as to the efficacy of Mr. Wilson's panacea. On the principle of omne ignotum pro magnifico, the Indian journalists were at first dazzled and astounded by the honourable gentleman's fluent dogmatism on a subject hitherto unintelligible to English residents in India, whether official or otherwise. Now, however, they are beginning to recover from the shock, and to doubt whether the financial magic of the Wizard of the North comes from above or from below. It should be stated, however, that this incipient scepticism is by no means due to their own intuitive perceptions. The first germs of infidelity have been planted in their plastic minds by no less a personage than the doctrinarian Governor of Madras. By one of those "untoward accidents," which one day result in the destruction of a fleet, and in another in the overthrow of a ministry, a Secret Minute by Sir Charles Trevelyan has found its way into print before it had come under the consideration of the Legislative Council, for whose especial benefit it had alone been drawn up. Nobody, of course, is to blame for this surreptitious proceeding, any more than Professor Airey is to be praised when the sun bursts through the clouds and dispels the mists and darkness of the morning. Sir Charles' minute has rushed into light because it was light, and if Mr. Wilson's obscurity has consequently been exposed, whose fault is that? In our next issue we propose to analyse this important document at considerable length. For the present it must suffice to premise that Sir Charles questions the accuracy of Mr. Wilson's estimated deficit for the ensuing year, and further insists that even if it be assumed to be true, there can still be no necessity for an income-tax, so long as there are cash balances in the public treasuries to the amount of nearly twenty millions sterling. The reduction of the native army is declared to be the real path of safety. Not only will the annual expenditure be thereby greatly diminished, but the labour market will be replenished at a time when every industrious and able-bodied man is worth his weight in gold to the State. Sir Charles omits, indeed, to indicate the precise nature of the reduction he proposes to institute, just as Mr. Wilson failed to explain the data on which he founded his calculations for the year 1860-61. There is certainly no denying the fact that the taxes recommended by the financial commissioner are worthy of the epithet "tremendous" which Sir Charles does not scruple to apply to them. The only justification for their imposition is "necessity, the tyrant's plea," and if Sir Charles can prove that the necessity does not exist, the sooner the whole scheme is withdrawn or revised, the better will it be for the safety of our Indian empire, if not for the maintenance of Mr. Wilson's meteoric reputation.

The only other topic to which we need particularly refer in this place is a second outbreak on the part of those turbulent mountaineers, the Wuzerees. On the departure of the Nawab of Tank from his petty principality to present himself before the Viceroy, a few squadrons of the 5th Punjab Cavalry were sent by Brigadier Chamberlan to guard his territories during his temporary absence. This proved to be a wise precaution, for a body of 3,000 Wuzerees suddenly swooped down from their hills upon the lands of the Nawab, and began to murder and plunder, according to immemorial custom. The native officer, however, in command of the irregulars was equal to the occasion, and by great tact and courage succeeded in routing the marauders with considerable slaughter. A mixed force was again about to march into the hills to avenge the affront.

On the 24th March a Coercion Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council for the purpose of compelling by summary process all ryots who have accepted advances to fulfil their contracts. The provisions of this temporary, but inevitable measure, are given elsewhere.

The notorious Khan Bahadoor Khan was hanged on the 24th March, in front of the Kotwalee, at Bareilly. Mummoo Khan, however, has been reprieved, though convicted of active complicity in the murder of Europeans.

The vice-regal progress is at length terminated, and at this moment Lord Canning is probably enjoying the cool breezes of Simla.

Lord Elphinstone was to leave Bombay on the 11th of the present month; the senior member of council, Mr. Reeves, acting as provisional governor until the arrival of Sir George Clerk.

There is reason to believe that the Emperor of China has accepted the ultimatum of the Allied Powers—the expedition from India, at least, has been suspended.

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

We submit that the character of the events now transpiring in the direction of Cabul and Bokhara is sufficiently grave to demand the early and earnest attention of the Supreme Government. Without endorsing the extravagances of the Russophobists, we do not hesitate to assert, that in much that they advance there is enough of truth to command respect. But supposing that we were to put them and their statements altogether out of sight, there would still remain this indisputable fact, that the Ameer of Cabul, pressed by the King of Bokhara, Heerates, and the Persians, and openly slighted by the British Government in the person of our famous Viceroy, has made up his mind to fling himself into the arms of Russia. When we say, that whilst the attention of Europe is concentrated on the movements of Louis Napoleon, the Pope and the patriots of Central Italy, Russia has taken advantage of the moment to advance her own interests in Central Asia, we speak advisedly. The Levant Herald stated the other day, totidem verbis, that the Autocrat of Russia had pushed forward a corps d'armee in the direction of Bokhara; an official journal at St Petersburg openly boasted of the measures about to be carried out by the Czar for the destruction of British Commerce in India; and we are ourselves receiving by nearly every dawk intelligence of the proceedings of Russian emissaries in Bokhara and Khiva, and the perseverance and energy with which they are carrying out the instructions they have received.

It will not do, in 1860, to judge of these things by the light we possessed in 1830. At that time the expectation that a Russian army would start from the then frontiers of Russia, and make one continued march across Central Asia, for the purpose of attacking us in our possessions in India, was very properly scouted as a gigantic absurdity. The thing was next to impossible. It was then said by Sir Charles Metcalfe that "the difficulties of marching a regular army through the intermediate countries, of supplying and feeding it, of repairing losses, of replacing wear and tear, of preventing the ravages of disease in new climates—above all, the impracticability of providing the enormous funds requisite for such an undertaking—these are obstacles to the attempt with a large army which seem insurmountable. Difficulties in some respects similar, and in others of another nature, would attend the attempt by a small one. In addition to the reduction by sickness and losses, by wear and tear, a small army might be resisted and destroyed by the troops of the intermediate countries; or if a remnant of it should reach our frontiers, we should most probably defeat and capture it, and send every man down the Ganges to Calcutta, or down the Indus to Bombay, and land them all prisoners at Portsmouth." That Russia did not shut her eyes to this view of the subject her conduct since the treaty of Turkmanchi has sufficiently shown. She has spared neither men, labour, time, nor money to strengthen her influence in some, and obtain a footing in others of those "intermediate countries" whose troops would otherwise have torn a small Russian army to pieces. Russian diplomacy could never have been guilty of the tremendous folly of attacking a formidable Power possessing great resources, without first establishing herself, physically or morally, in the "intermediate countries."

But there is a passage in the valuable State paper of Sir Charles Metcalfe's from which we have quoted, to which we would beg the attention of our readers. One would think that the writer penned it under a presentiment. It runs thus:—

"If we are ever to be troubled with a Russian invasion, it must be after an approximation of our frontiers; and whether this is to take place by advances on our side or that of Russia—whether she is to conquer the intermediate countries, or acquire influence over them—whether the event apprehended is to occur in ten or twenty years, or in fifty, or a hundred—what revolutions are to take place in the mean time in the intermediate States, or in India, or in Russia herself, or throughout the whole world, in what quarter she is to make her attack, and what will be the state of things when she may make it,—these are all matters of such uncertainty, that &c., &c."

Have not our frontiers approximated? Has not the Punjab fallen into our hands, and has not Russia pushed forward her advanced posts all along the line from the southern shores of the Caspian to the right bank of the Amour? If the latter Power has not "conquered," has she not succeeded in "acquiring influence" over the intermediate countries? Has she not by these means freed herself in a great measure from that anxiety which she would otherwise have felt, had a force thrown forward by her been cut off from reinforcements and resources by intervening countries?

It must not, however, be inferred from the foregoing that we are of those who believe that Russia contemplates at this moment the conquest of India. The time has not arrived for the setting on foot so gigantic an undertaking. Like a wise man, the Czar makes sure of one step before he advances another. His influence must be more complete at Teheran, Khiva, Bokhara, and the Bala Hissar than it is at present, to enable him to free his path from those natural difficulties which he at present finds on it. He has one road, at all events, clear, and that is on the side of Persia. The British Minister, writing to Lord Palmerston from Meshed on the 25th June, 1838, observes:—

"I have already informed your lordship publicly, that the country between the frontiers of Persia and India is far more productive than I had imagined it to be; and I can assure your lordship that there is no impediment, either from the physical features of the country, or from the deficiency of supplies, to the march of a large army from the frontiers of Georgia to Khandahar, or, as I believe, to the Indus. Count Simonich, being lame from a wound, drove his carriage from Teheran to Herat, and could drive it to Khandahar; and the Shah's army has now for nearly seven months subsisted almost exclusively on the supplies of the country immediately around Herat and Ghorian, leaving the still more productive districts of Subzar and Furreh untouched. In short, I can state, from personal observation, that there is absolutely no impediment to the march of an army to Herat; and that, from all the information I have received, the country between that city and Khandahar not only presents no difficulty, but affords remarkable facilities for the passage of armies. There is, therefore, my lord, no security for India in the nature of the country through which an army would have to pass to invade it from this side. On the contrary, the whole line is peculiarly favourable for such an enterprise; and I am the more anxious to state this opinion clearly, because it is at variance with my previous belief, and with statements which I may have previously hazarded, relying on more imperfect information."

That the country between Cabul and Peshawur is very strong England knows from bitter experience, since the bones of thousands of her sons lie buried within those terrible defiles. But if the master of those frightful passes be driven, by the unlooked-for and undeserved slight offered by Lord Canning, to seek an alliance with the Power against whose advance they would naturally form on our behalf the strongest barrier, they become to us of no earthly value. That the Ameer's expectation of receiving a lakh of rupees per mensem for an indefinite period is unreasonable is, of course, obvious; but it is not equally clear why an interchange of courtesies between him and the Viceroy of India should be denied him. It is evident that he expected it. There can be no doubt but that the chief of Cabul has lost considerably in popularity with his people because of his alliance with us; but so long as we could, by feeding Affghan avarice, secure the friendship of the man who holds the gates of India, a few thousand rupees per mensem, even in the present state of the Indian exchequer, would not be thrown away. As Sir William Macnaughten remarked, "Whilst Russia assists our enemies with money and three hundred thousand muskets we give neither the one nor the other to our friends." But there is no end to Lord Canning's blunders.

We had written thus far when we met with the following remarks, evidently written by one who is conversant with this subject:—"I have lately read," he writes, "some excellent articles in your paper, calling public attention to the present advance of Russia towards India: You will, I think, confer a public benefit in continuing to call attention to this subject, even at the risk of being accused of Russia-phobia. The Russians have now, beyond a doubt, occupied Ougunj, and are at present engaged in building barracks at that place. Their officers are also intriguing at Bokhara; which province will, doubtless, ere long be occupied by them; probably on the plea of protecting the Khan against the advance of Dost Mahomed. During the most critical period of the late rebellion, when we were straining every nerve to retain our hold on India, a Russian mission, composed of a chief and twelve assistants, arrived at Herat, bringing rich presents for the chief of that city. They at once spread themselves over the face of the country in pairs, and deliberately proceeded to survey all the roads leading to India, giving out, without reserve, the future advance of a Russian army towards our Eastern empire. Since that time they have reduced to subjection the tribes inhabiting the Caucasus, and now, by the occupation of Ougunj, have secured the navigation of the Oxus. This object having been effected, they will satisfy themselves steadily and quietly in completing their communications between the banks of the Aral and their new acquisition, and forming a secure base ere they make their next move, the object of which will be the securing of the Passes of the Hindoo Koosh. There will be no hurry in achieving these objects, but a steady, deliberate proceeding. I see by a recent mail that it is reported to be the intention of Russia to despatch a force to China, and of occupying Bokhara and Kokund. This requires confirmation, but is, nevertheless, probable; if true, it will necessitate our reinforcing our troops in China, both from England and India; while, if the occupation of Bokhara and Kokund be permitted by us, the passes of the Hindoo Koosh would be secured to them. This scheme may take years to carry out, or it may take a very short time. It will entirely depend upon European affairs, and the pressure that may be brought against England by other Powers. But, however, the establishment of the Russians at Ougunj is of no mean significance, as the moral influence such a commanding position already exerts over the minds of the Affghans—the only nation now intervening between ourselves and the Russians—is, doubtless, very great. Fortunately for us, during the late crisis in India we have been able, by taking advantage of the cupidity of Dost Mahomed, to secure the old man to our interests. He alone has power over the Affghans, but he is now verging upon eighty years of age, and must soon follow the course of nature. It is not improbable, therefore, that after his demise the greatest anarchy and confusion may ensue, each of his many sons claiming to succeed him. In the event of such a contingency Russia is too far-sighted not to take advantage of such a state of affairs. Our prestige, both amongst the inhabitants of Central Asia and India, is no longer what it used to be; and we may rest assured that unless our present rulers arouse themselves, and make most vigorous efforts to re-establish our influence in Central Asia, we shall, at no distant time, have to meet a European invasion, and, perchance, another rebellion.—Lahore Chronicle."

THE INDIGO BILL.

The reports of the week from the indigo districts have compelled Government to act. On Thursday, the 22nd March, orders were issued to station bodies of military police throughout the districts originally disturbed. In the evening another force was despatched to Rajmehal, to guard a portion of Moorshedabad. On Friday orders were issued despatching a number of European deputy magistrates to Krishnagur, and on Saturday a Coercion Bill was introduced by the member for Bengal. It provides that a ryot who, having accepted advances to sow indigo, shall refuse to sow, may be fined five times the advance, and imprisoned. Any person guilty of instigating such breach of contract, or of damaging growing crops, may also be imprisoned. At the same time the Act provides that a commission of inquiry shall be issued, with power to investigate the entire question, to take evidence on oath, to compel witnesses to attend, and to commit for perjury. The Act takes effect from the 24th of March, and its operation is limited to six months. The Bill was supported by Mr. Wilson, and all the members of Government, and, after a brief debate, passed its second reading. There are forms to be obeyed which compel a delay of a week, but the Act will operate from the day it was introduced.

There are, we believe, doctrinaires in India who, under any circumstances, would object to such an Act as this. Full of the notion that the labourer is always oppressed, the capitalist always the oppressor, they would rather see both involved in a common ruin than strengthen the hands of the employer. Moderate men, however, will accept the Act with pleasure as a temporary expedient. It is not, confessedly, a settlement of the broad question which now clamours so pre-emptorily for decision. It is not even, perhaps, in the absence of restrictive clauses, a perfectly even-handed Bill. As the Chief Justice observed, abstract justice would demand an investigation of the voluntary character of the contracts penally enforced. But it is not a Bill intended to settle the rights of capital and labour, or to define the precise relation of employers and employed, or even to secure absolute justice. It is designed to arrest a catastrophe, to save a trade which must be saved in five weeks or abandoned, to give both parties time for the mutual agreement which the exasperation of the hour forbids. That is the view taken by the Lieut. governor in the able letter we reproduce, admitting the full extent of the emergency.

The emergency indeed is the justification of the Bill, and it is patent to all men who understand either the cultivation of indigo or the first laws of politics. The ryots of three districts after cultivating patiently for fifty years, without any new provocation, without any notice to their employers, announced their resolution to cultivate no more. A strike of that kind, admitting prima facie of no reconciliation, would be dangerous to any trade. In the indigo trade it was simple ruin. The seed must be sown by the 15th of May or not at all, and there was no time for conciliation. The ryots, always as capricious as children, would have received any overtures as indications of fear, and, like the Assam Company's labourers, have doubled their demands upon the spot. There was no time for anything save the exertion of authority, and it was better that authority should be exercised by the State than by the followers the planters might have raised.

Not content with this passive attitude the peasantry proceeded to acts which rapidly assumed the character of open violence. During the week some six or seven factories have been menaced. One, Mr. Lyons', has been attacked, and in the defence five lives have been lost. A system of destroying records has commenced, and the destruction of the advance papers is now evidently the main object of the rioters. The peasantry operate in bodies of two thousand and upwards, and already the cry of "kill the Europeans" has been heard. Mr. Herschel, a magistrate, supposed without justice on the side of the ryots, was treated with contumely the instant he resisted their demands, and all the symptoms which in India precede insurrection are abroad. That insurrection might not as a military movement be very formidable. Bengalees, though not precisely the cowards Englishmen believe them to be, are not soldiers. They have neither arms, organization, nor self-confidence. But they are some five millions in number in the three counties, they have a country which offers endless obstacles to military advance, they are adepts at combination, and fire raising, and above all they are too near the vitals of our power. No man, whatever his capacity or experience, can predicate what a peasantry ignorant to a degree Europeans cannot even conceive may do when once roused from the torpor of generations. A refusal to pay rent spreading through the eastern districts would be a calamity at which the boldest politicians might stand aghast.

Nothing could better prove the imminence of the crisis than the altered tone of the zemindars. Their representatives in the British Indian Association petition, it is true, against the Contract Bill. But they do it in a tone which contrasts most strangely with their ordinary demeanour. The planters are no longer the "refuse of England," but men it is in the highest degree advisable to encourage. This moderation may be merely affected, intended only to secure the hearing events seem to refuse. The "suffering angel" carries points the virago might strive in vain to obtain. But the moderation may also be due to a just fear. The zemindars are no more loved by the peasantry than the planters. They have as much to lose in a servile war. The dishonesty which seems admirable while the sufferer is a European becomes unpleasant when he is a native, and intolerable when displayed towards a landholder. The man who fights rather than repay advances may find fighting less obnoxious than paying rent. It is not the zemindars who should court the settlement of all scores between themselves and the people of Bengal.

There is one report current about these outrages which demands especial investigation. It is said on good authority that the active movement is confined to the Mussulman cultivators. The Hindoos are only coerced into consent. In Moorshedabad this is peculiarly the case, the Hindoos stating specific grievances, and returning to work when they are redressed, till menaced by their bolder Mahomedan allies. The statement, if true, would invest the movement at once with a political character, and strengthen the belief that it originates in Calcutta. It is more probable that the Mussulmans, a haughtier race, and from their diet and their creed less afraid of violence, are only the leaders and not the instigators of revolt. But the statement deserves inquiry, and there are one or two Mussulmans of note who have no special cause to love English order whose proceedings might expediently be watched.

What has become of Doodo Meab since his arrest as a political offender?—Friend of India.

THE INDIGO INSURRECTION.

Attempts are made by some persons to excite popular sympathy in favour of the Bengal ryots in their quarrel with the indigo planters, by representing the contest as one between labour and capital, which ought to be settled on "economical principles." But one consideration of some consequence is here left out. Barbarous as is the method which workmen in England adopt, of trying to gain what they conceive to be their just rights by means of "a strike," the law does not wantonly interfere to prevent them from ruining themselves by their folly, so long as they are content to go peacefully down the broad road that leads to their own destruction. But the most jealous care is taken to check the first symptom of an intention on the part of the men on strike to involve other classes in the consequences of their acts, and to produce social anarchy. So strictly are order and the liberty of the subject guarded, that not only do the workmen themselves who have "gone out" fear to resort to any other weapons than those of argument and passive resistance, but, with all the undoubted terrorism exercised by trades' unions, every strike has hitherto failed, because men can always be found who, under the protection of the law, will accept work at the prices offered by the masters. Add to this that no man in England can break a contract to do certain work for a certain wage without incurring a legal penalty, and we see within what narrow limits the operation of strikes is confined, and how, though in the absence of parliamentary representation of the working classes they are sure to exist, they are equally sure to be unsuccessful.

But how far does the ryots' insurrection resemble an English strike? It is perfectly clear that, whatever the merits of the general question, the ryots have put themselves wholly in the wrong by, first, breaking their contracts, and then resorting to plunder, intimidation, and murder, to enforce their illegal demands. No one can presume to justify rebellion; and that the conduct of the ryots amounts to rebellion on a pretty wide scale, the evidence we publish this morning amply proves. The Lieutenant-governor's proclamation is treated with contempt; burning of factories, armed coercion, and fatal affrays still go on; and the Government, which sneered at the apprehensions of the newspapers and the planters as exaggerated, is now obliged to send troops into the disturbed districts to restore order. Improbable as it may seem, the planters have actually been reproached with being carried away by vain alarms, and letting their reason be overpowered by their fear of the ryots. We suppose every man dislikes having his property destroyed, and his own life and the lives of his servants endangered by an armed rabble; but if the planters, who are quite able to protect themselves, did not prefer to seek redress from the law, they could easily show the world it is not the ryots but anarchy they fear. The Government, to do it justice, appears anxious, while it utters reassuring words, to provide for the worst that may happen. In addition to sending the military to crush insurrection, it has introduced into the Legislative Council a Bill granting summary powers to magistrates for the punishment of breaches of indigo contracts. Whether these measures do not come too late to repair the mischief already done, experience alone can decide. There is a wonderful power of endurance in the native character; and if the popular movement be, as there is good reason to suspect, encouraged and directed from Calcutta, the planters and Government may still be beaten by the patient resolution of the ryots to submit to any fines and imprisonment rather than sow indigo.

This is why we are pleased to notice that Sir James Outram proposed to add to the Bill some resolution providing for the immediate appointment of the commission prayed for by both planters and ryots. If we are not content that English colonists should find that all their enterprise and capital have been wasted, and that it is time for them to quit Bengal, we must have a complete revision of existing arrangements between the planters and the cultivators of the soil. There is no necessity for abolishing the system of making advances to the ryots, in return for which they are bound to grow a certain quantity of indigo. What does it matter whether the English colonists are really planters, or only capitalists who lend their money on the crops? Whichever plan is the more convenient will naturally be adopted, and the system that at present obtains seems certainly the best suited to the circumstances of the country. The two things essential to its perfect success are that the contracts, which when once entered into must be inviolable, should be formed without compulsion on either side, and that a fair price should be paid for the indigo. The latter of these conditions depends on the former. If the ryots are perfectly free to make what bargain they please, it is as clear as day that they will not engage to supply English money lenders with indigo at unremunerative prices. And this appears to be the true grievance of the ryots—not that the system of advances is in itself bad, for it might be made to answer very well, but that in some way or other they are compelled to accept these advances at what may be called an exorbitant rate of interest. It is right that ryots and planters should understand this is an affair of open trade, in which there must be perfect freedom on both sides. On the one hand, the cultivators must be taught that they have liberty to judge for themselves what crops they shall grow, but that, having engaged to grow indigo, they must grow it or pay the penalty. On the other hand, it is absolutely necessary that any attempt on the part of the planters to use the ryots as if they were slaves should be at once put down. It were a cruel kindness to sanction or connive at any such violation of the laws of our country, for the very thought of anything in the nature of slavery is hateful to the English people; and when the national conscience became alarmed at the condition of the ryots, the Bengal planters would, like their West Indian brethren, in recompense of their trust in the good faith of their rulers, be offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of offended humanity.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE WUZEREES AGAIN.—We are sorry to see that those mountain caterans, the Wuzerees, are at their old tricks again. On the afternoon of the 13th March, some 3,000 Wuzerees moved out of their hills into our plains opposite the town of Tonk, which lies about 50 miles north-west of Dehra Ismail Khan. The native officer of our cavalry posted there, Ressaidar Sahadut Khan, having collected together about 180 sabres, composed of his own men and levies, advanced towards the hills. On coming within matchlock range of the Wuzerees, he extended his front and slowly retired; the hill-men thinking the day their own, followed shouting vociferously for about half a mile, when the Ressaidar, finding the ground a little more practicable for cavalry, halted his men, faced the enemy and gave them an effective volley. This produced great confusion in the motley mass of hill combatants, and being at once followed up by a brilliant and effective charge of about 100 horse, the enemy were thrown into irretrievable confusion. Away from their well-loved passes, and opposed to the charge of a body of horse, these mountaineers, naturally brave and courageous, fled without an attempt at resistance. The cavalry pursued up to the foot of the hills, and the ascertained number of killed appear to be upwards of one hundred, and of wounded upwards of 200. The enemy suffered the great disgrace in the eyes of a mountaineer of leaving his dead in the field, and altogether this little affair sent back the Wuzerees thoroughly disheartened, whilst it reflects great credit on the little body of cavalry opposed to them.—Lahore Chronicle.

KUMAON IRON WORKS.—The smelting operations at these works have progressed very favourably since the opening on the 16th of February. The quantity of iron now on the ground cannot be far short of one hundred tons, judging from the line of the heaps. The making of steam rails is commenced, and the chief engineer is about laying them down around the works. Two deliberate and determined attempts have been of late made to smash the machinery by some persons unknown, which have been partially successful, and has given a very great deal of trouble. The machinery is much shaken, and might have been broken but for its strength. The chief engineer has been unable to trace the delinquents. There can be no doubt that it must have been done with a most malicious intent. The success of these works has no doubt created a feeling of no genial nature amongst others. No attempt of this kind now can in any way hurt the officer in charge, but must fall on the Government. It behoves them, then, to well look after their own property.

DEATH OF COLONEL ANGELO.—It is with extreme regret that we have to announce the death of Colonel John Angelo, late of the 3rd Light Cavalry, which regiment he commanded for several years. Colonel Angelo died at Dehra Doon on the 29th March, at the age of sixty-six years, upwards of fifty of which were spent in India, and in the military service. Until overtaken by infirmities common to those who have long passed the meridian of life, the deceased was an active and excellent officer, and, we have been told, one of the best swordsmen that ever entered the service. Every one in these provinces and in the hills knew Colonel Angelo, and as a member of society respected him for his amiable and hospitable disposition, and his warm and kindly feelings. He was father of a large family (chiefly daughters), all of whom he lived to see married to officers in the Bengal army. The relatives and connexions of the late Colonel Angelo may be reckoned by hundreds. While we write, scores of old familiar faces and forms seem fitting before us to recall to the mind the past days of Meerut.—Mofussilite.

MUMMOO KHAN, the murderer of the Dourayra fugitives, is not to be hanged. He was one of the prime movers in the rebellion. His hands are dyed red with the blood of many of England's bravest sons; he was tried and found guilty. The proceedings of the court which convicted him were sent up to the Judicial Commissioner, with no recommendation to mercy; he was assured that there was no chance of his escaping a felon's doom; and yet we repeat, Mummoo Khan is not to be hanged. Mr. Campbell has pronounced the prisoner guilty, with extenuating circumstances, and has sentenced him to imprisonment for life beyond seas, and to the forfeiture of his property. Mummoo Khan was a member of the rebel Cabinet of Oude. He offered large rewards for the heads of Christians; he directly participated in the massacre of English men and women, and yet he is not deserving of death, according to the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner. And is this all we owe to the respect which should be paid to the feelings of the surviving relatives of those who met their death at his hands? The criminal whose life has just been spared was second only to the Nana in wickedness. Tantia Topee was a gentleman and a hero in comparison to him. Tantia Topee was regarded by many as an honourable enemy; he was, however, sent to the gallows; while Mummoo Khan, of whose conduct scarcely a difference of opinion exists, is to escape with his life. This is a specimen of Indian justice which will arouse feelings of the strongest indignation and disgust in the minds of the whole public.—Delhi Gazette.

BANDA, March 27.—Rummust Singh, the rebel chieftain, who commanded the party which killed Messrs. Evans and Linwell last year at Entooa, in this district, and who is said to have slain one of these unfortunate gentlemen with his own hand, and in cold blood, is now a prisoner here, awaiting his trial. He gave himself up to Captain Osborn, the political agent at Rewah, and was not captured by that gentleman, as erroneously stated in the New Times. He is supposed to have been compelled to surrender by the Rewah Rajah, otherwise he would never have given himself up; as there is hardly a doubt of what his fate must be. The trial of the late Nawab's Prime Minister is going on at present; Mr. Mayne, the magistrate, presiding.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS.—It will be perceived from the subjoined general order, that the five years' staff order is not to be carried into effect. This will bring the balm of consolation to many an agitated bosom:—"General order by his Excellency the Governor-general of India. Camp Deenanuggur, March 19, 1860. Under instructions from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, his Excellency the Governor-general is pleased to announce for general information, that the orders requiring staff appointments to be vacated after five years tenure are not intended to apply to officers serving with irregular or local corps, who, though detached from their own regiments, are nevertheless performing regimental duties. Under the same authority the operations of the rule requiring the vacation of appointments is altogether suspended until further orders. R. J. H. BINCH, Major-general; secretary to the Government of India, with the Governor-general."

THE TOBACCO DUTY.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Saturday, the 17th March, Mr. Wilson, in reply to Mr. Harrington, gave some much-needed explanations with regard to the new duty on tobacco. The intimation that eight annas a seer would be levied on all tobacco imported into India, and that the duty on home-manufactured tobacco would be raised proportionably, had created great consternation. The impression prevailed that there would be an uniform tax of eight annas a seer on all tobacco, foreign or native. Mr. Wilson has now made known what are the real intentions of Government. Imported tobacco is worth, say from Rs. 18 to Rs. 20 a maund. The new duty of 8 annas a seer, or Rs. 20 a maund, is equivalent to 100 per cent. on this price. In the case, then, of indigenous tobacco, the duty to be levied will not be 8 annas a seer, but 100 per cent. ad valorem. The tobacco used by the mass of the people may be valued at Rs. 6 a maund, or nearly 2½ annas a seer. But, according to the Finance Minister, it is a mistake to suppose the increase of duty will amount even to so much as 2½ annas a seer. In the compound which among the lowest classes of the people goes by the name of tobacco, there is only one-fifth of the real weed, the rest being made up of soda and the juice of the sugarcane. It is this fifth, therefore, which alone will be taxed 100 per cent., so that on each seer of this kind of tobacco sold in the bazaar the tax will be, not even 2½, but half an anna, per seer. In a superior mixture, used by the higher classes, there is one-third of tobacco to two-thirds of foreign substances, and therefore the duty will be nearly one anna a seer. This statement will dissipate the apprehensions which were caused by the belief that Government proposed to levy an almost prohibitory tax on native-grown and manufactured tobacco.—Bombay Gazette.

CAMELS FOR AUSTRALIA.—Mr. G. J. Landells, agent for the Government of Victoria, Australia, has succeeded in procuring, chiefly from the Rajah of Bickneer's territory, a number of excellent camels, for shipment to the colony. Some of the animals are of the Sowaree, others of the hill or Affghanistan breed, the former being noted for their superiority in riding purposes, the latter for their capabilities in travelling over stony and hilly ground. They are generally of a larger size than the common camels of Sind. India sends a return in kind to Australia for her horses in these useful animals, with whose aid it is hoped that the exploring expedition which is about to start for the interior of the continent-island, will overcome obstacles which have hitherto proved insurmountable, and penetrate into those unknown regions in the heart of Australia, which nature has till now been able to conceal from our curiosity. The camels have been shipped on board the Chinsurah, which Mr. Landells chartered for the purpose. This gentleman, whose courage and perseverance in obtaining these camels from a wild and disturbed country, and bringing them down 1,300 miles to Kurrachee, cannot be too highly praised, has also made an extensive and valuable collection, which he takes with him, of seeds, plants, and live birds from the Himalayas. He certainly deserves well of the Government of Victoria.

CHURCHES IN THE PUNJAB.—It is only too well known that whilst the churches erected at various stations in the Punjab may, in point of architectural beauty, compete with any of those in our older territory, many, as at Umballa, Sealkote, and Peshawur, remain unfinished for want of funds. It is, therefore, with much gratification that we are able to announce that a contribution of Rs. 6,332 has been raised in the Governor-general's camp, and placed at Sir Robert Montgomery's disposal in aid of the completion of these sacred buildings. Of this subscription the munificent sum of Rs. 5,000 has been given by Lord and Lady Canning; and the whole has been offered, not only in furtherance of the specific object in view, but also as a recognition, in a form acceptable to the European community of the Punjab, of such little attentions as opportunity permitted to be paid to the Viceregal party during their recent visit to these territories.

MISSIONARY MOVEMENTS.—We [Guardian] learn with much pleasure that the Rev. Messrs. Paterson and Taylor, missionaries sent out by the Established Church of Scotland, to recommence at Sealkote the mission interrupted by the massacre of the Rev. Mr. Hunter and his family, have reached that station, and received a cordial welcome from the friends of the gospel there. The Rev. Mr. Schoolbred, after the death of his colleague, Mr. Steel, proceeded to Beawr, and has there taken up his residence with a view to the prosecution of his labours in that portion of Rajpootana. The Rev. Dr. Wilson, who accompanied this brother, and introduced him to his field, has just returned to Bombay. Dr. and Mrs. Wilson have been absent four and a half months, and their journey must have been, in many respects, a most trying one. Nearly forty years ago an effort was made to diffuse some light in Rajpootana by means of Government schools. Lord Hastings commissioned Mr. Jabez Carey, son of the Serampore missionary, to proceed thither, organise and superintend a system of schools. Mr. Carey introduced the gospels into these schools, with the consent of the parents of the children. Some of the "old Indians" at the station, however, thought fit to make a representation on the subject to Lord Hastings, who informed Mr. Carey that this step was premature, and directed the substitution of other books. A report had been circulated at Ajmere that the children, after they had been indoctrinated in Christianity, were to be sent away to Calcutta. Mr. Marshman, in his history of the Serampore Mission, says, "There can be little doubt that if the reading of the Scriptures had been persevered in at Ajmere, the alarm would have died out never to be revived. An ignorant people will always be exposed to groundless panics, but it is questionable whether a timid concession is the surest mode of removing them; it may indeed be the means of confirming them." If a portion of the Bible had been read daily in the schools when Government first entered on the work of education in India, leaving it to the pupils to attend the lecture or not, the native objections which are now raised would never have been heard of. A gentleman who has just come from Delhi informs us that the interest on the subject of religion continues unabated in that place. The missionaries (his remarks related particularly to the three Baptist missionaries) are daily occupied in preaching to large audiences; and the number of those who are said to be seeking baptism is expressed by thousands.

PEOPLE'S BANK OF INDIA.—We (Englishman) have seen a prospectus of a Bank to be established in Calcutta under the new Act of Limited Liability to be called the "People's Bank of India," capital five lacs of rupees. This is to be formed in imitation of the Unconventured Service Bank at Agra, which has been so successful and done so much good. If this proposed Bank succeeds and is well managed, it may be of great use, it may be of great service in accustoming clerks, assistants, and the less opulent classes to be more provident, and may largely help towards establishing the practice of cash payments to tradesmen in Calcutta, a custom which would benefit all parties. We believe an establishment of this kind to be a desideratum in Calcutta, and the present effort has our good wishes.

RAMPORE, March 20.—Your readers will be quite surprised to learn what befel the late Nawab of Nujeeemabad, the principal and chief rebel of that place. It so happened that on the evening of the 18th, six prisoners (two males and four females) rebels, arrived from the Goruckpore district through the Mooradabad magistrate's office to be released, or rather to be made over to their relatives. The head male rebel gave his name before the British officers as Navaz Khan of Rampore, and so passed all the British districts and Thannas without being recognised, but when the party arrived at Rampore the head of the police suspected him to be a man of some note by his way of speaking and sitting, &c., consequently made a proper search, and found him to be the notorious rebel chief Nawab Mamood Khan of Nujeeemabad, and of the others, one is his mother, one his second wife, and two slave girls and a nephew; this morning his Highness Nawab Mahumed Usuf Allee Khan Bahadoor sent them to Mooradabad under a proper escort; great praise is due to this loyal and clever prince, and also to the officers under him.

ELECTRIC PHENOMENON.—An extraordinary occurrence took place in the neighbourhood of Agra, on the 28th March, at a place called Kheraghur, where there is a police station. It was duly reported by the native officer. It seems that a flame of fire suddenly arose out of the ground and ascended into the air, when it disappeared; at the same moment a loud report, like the discharge of heavy artillery, was heard. There were many witnesses to the phenomenon; Gunga Ram, and Hurdeo, Chowkeydars and Bhowanie Singh and other zemindars were present on the occasion at the Thana, all of whom personally witnessed it, and the report was heard by many others at a great distance.

THE INDIGO INSURRECTION.—A bill was this day (Saturday, March 24,) introduced into the Legislative Council by the honourable member for Bengal, and read twice, entitled, a Bill to Enforce the Performance of Indigo Contracts. The preamble states the necessity for introducing the bill, and gives promise of a commission to be appointed to inquire into causes of quarrel between planter and ryot. Clause 1. Provides that in case cash advances have been taken by the ryots for the cultivation of indigo, the magistrates may, on summary inquiry, award a penalty of not more than five times the amount of the cash advance. Clause 2. Provides for the punishment of intimidation by six months' imprisonment. Clause 3. Provides punishment for malicious destruction of crops. Clause 4. No appeal from magistrate's decision. Clause 5. Act to endure for six months.—Sir James Outram moved on the part of the Supreme Government that six clauses be added, to make provision in the bill for the appointment of the proposed commission, who should have the power of examining and compelling the attendance of the witnesses administering oaths and committing for perjury.—Sir Bartle Frere made some remarks which were inaudible, with the exception of praise he bestowed on Mr. Herschell, who, however, he said, was a great deal too young for the post he now holds.—Sir Barnes Peacock objected to the limiting the fine to five times the amount of the cash advance only, and thought that the old balances ought to be included, and that the magistrate should have power to inquire whether the advance had been forced upon the ryot.—Mr. Wilson alluded to the "long lasting" disorders in the indigo district, and said those who were exciting the ryot to rebel were ruining instead of benefiting him. He compared opium and indigo.—The bill was then read a second time.

BAREILLY, March 24.—Khan Bahadoor Khan has passed from time to eternity. This morning, at seven o'clock precisely, before the Kotwallee, on the identical spot where he had raised the Mahomedan green flag of rebellion, the gallows was erected; and in the presence of a great crowd of all classes and creeds, of all races and climes, Khan Bahadoor Khan paid the last penalty of the law which his inhuman cruelty and his bloodthirsty deeds most righteously merited. Everything should have a beginning, a middle, and an end. We have an account of the disturbances of Bareilly, from May 31, 1857, when at twelve at mid-day, the Bareilly Brigade openly joined the cause of mutiny and rebellion, and Khan Bahadoor Khan had himself proclaimed as the true and faithful representative of the great house of Delhi, to the day when Bareilly was reoccupied by British bayonets, and rebellion sought an asylum in the hills of Nepaul. The next scene represented the capture, imprisonment, trial, and condemnation of him who for a short period, when the evil days had set in, had usurped the British administration, and ruthlessly and in cold blood murdered the helpless, the unoffending, and the innocent. The last or closing scene, I will now endeavour to describe, in which the hoary monster of ingratitude and cruelty receives the last stroke at the retributive hands of law and justice. There had been much speculation on the delay of the orders of Government to hang Khan Bahadoor Khan, as recommended by the special commission by which he was tried. I am glad to be able to state that there was no reprehensible tendency to mitigate the offence of the prisoner. The Local Government concurred in the judgment of the court, and only differed as to the prisoner's criminality in the murder of Doctor Hansbrow, of which, from the evidence before them, the court had acquitted him. The question naturally arises, why then this unnecessary reference to the Supreme Government, in a matter about which there could not possibly be any material difference, and in which the guilt and punishment of the prisoner are as clear as noonday. Surely there was no desire on the part of the Local Government to shirk all responsibility. Certainly not. The prisoner, as was to be expected, was dissatisfied with the decision and judgment of the Court which had tried and condemned him, and thought that a touching appeal to the Governor-general in a petition, which he endeavoured clandestinely to send, would not be without some effect. The petition, though intercepted, was officially forwarded, with a summary of the prisoner's trial, the judgment of the Court, and the concurrence of the Local Government in that judgment and condemnation. To give the prisoner the full benefit of his appeal, and to avoid all culpable precipitancy in the execution of a punishment of so irrevocable a nature as hanging, the orders of the Local Government were set in abeyance; hence the delay which the public and the press have questioned and condemned. On receipt of the orders of the Supreme Government conveying an entire concurrence with the views and sentiments of his honour the Lieutenant-governor, and a high sense of approbation of the creditable manner in which the special Commission had discharged their onerous duty, and a full appreciation of the talent and ability which had been displayed by the Government prosecutor, the local officials were instructed to carry out the execution of Khan Bahadoor Khan. Owing to the absence of Mr. Inglis, the magistrate, on special duty in the district, Mr. H. Clark, the joint magistrate, had to attend to all matters connected with the hanging. All precautionary measures were taken to prevent anything like a disturbance arising either from Mahomedan fanaticism or wounded dignity. The city was patrolled by our magisterial dignitaries, from the joint magistrate to the deputy; and though smothered feelings of the most malignant nature were depicted on the clouded brow of every Mahomedan, this morning dawned to witness the execution of Khan Bahadoor Khan without any riotous outbreak or disturbance. The rectangular space before the Kotwallee, where the gallows had been erected, is enclosed on the north and south by the Kotwallee and Tehseelee, two similar buildings of some pretensions to grandeur; on the east there is the Jumma Musjid or temple, and on the west, native buildings and the main street of the city. The gallows, erected between the Kotwallee and Tehseelee, faced the west, the back of the prisoner, when he was hanged, being turned to the Musjid. The prisoner, under the protecting care of a strong military escort, composed of a company or more of the martial and gallant 42nd Highlanders and some of the military police, arrived at the scene of execution at 7 o'clock, where the city and part of the military police had been stationed since day-break to preserve order. The gallows was enclosed by the highlanders on the east and west, the military police ranged themselves on the south near the Tehseelee, and the city police at their own post, the Kotwallee. The prisoner, to use a vulgar but emphatic expression, died game. His last words breathed vengeance. He said to the Government prosecutor, Mr. Mons, who was close to him, "You ruined me; had I the power I would kill you." When the Jail Darogah read that portion of the warrant where mention is made of his having ordered and sanctioned the murder of Europeans, he said, "I have killed a thousand dogs, and would if I could kill a thousand more;" and when told that he was to be hanged on the spot where he had raised the Mahomedan flag of rebellion, he triumphantly remarked that "he had done right." The next moment he was taken up to the platform, which launched him into eternity. His remains were taken to the old jail, at present occupied by the women of the 42nd Highlanders, and guarded of course by a European guard.—Delhi Gazette.

KHYREGHUR FOREST, CAMP NUNGHEE, March 24.—The Boundary Commissioners, with the Goorkha authorities, are now encamped here, marking out the boundary; the Chief Commissioner, Mr. Wingfield, is with his camp also in the neighbourhood. The Goorkhas seem much pleased at their getting the forests, and no doubt Jung Bahadoor will turn the timber to good purpose; it was generally thought that no Europeans would be allowed to enter the forest, when once made over: but in conversing with the Nepal Colonel, a jovial, good-humoured intelligent man, he mentioned there would be no restrictions, so that those fond of sport can come out as usual; a good many tigers have been knocked over this year, but no larger game, elephants or rhinoceroses. The elephants the Ghoorkhas have with them seem a different breed to the elephants commonly met with, being smaller and longer in the body: the guddee or seat is very small: but Jung Bahadoor is said to shoot from this when chasing large game. The Nepal regiment here is dressed in dark blue, with a crescent on their turbans; they are well set up, and strong-limbed men, but horridly dirty. I asked one of them when he bathed last, he said, he had never done so. Water seems quite out of their element. The boundary marked is from this side of the Surdah river at Moondeah Ghaut, in a straight line towards Toolspoor; no one part has as yet however been made over to them. You may have heard Sir Jung is also anxious to get possession of Ajoodiah, or rather the famous temple there, but I doubt whether Lord Canning will assent. This place is about eight miles from the foot of the hills, and there is a large town some fifteen miles up, where a brisk trade is carried on with the plains; the table land at the top is about three quarters of a mile in length, and on the southern and highest extremity there is a high hill, on which there is a large fort. I am indebted to the Colonel, Davie Dheen Shah, for this information. The trees growing here are horse chesnuts, cherries and oaks, and rhododendrons are just now coming into bloom; the hills abound in game of all kind, and iron, copper, and coal are easily got at; all Europeans are, however, strictly prohibited to enter the hills, and although I have been coaxing the Colonel to let me go up to the first range, he is unkind enough to say, "It is more than his head is worth if he allowed me to set a foot within their territories." I mentioned elephants, but forgot to say they can be got very cheap in the Nepal territories, the price averaging from 300 to 500 rupees. I find the Nepalese all great sportsmen and first-rate shots. The weather is getting warmer daily, the thermometer ranges from fifty to sixty inside the tent; the greatest plague here are flies, and when in the howdah shooting in the forests, they annoy one not a little; one would think that would be the last place they would be found in. The view of the hills here is very grand and beautiful; the atmospheric changes are highly interesting, and the scenery throughout the Terai is very picturesque. I know of no place in India that reminds one of spots one has seen in Scotland and England so much as wandering about at the foot of these hills, so different to the burning and parched-up plains about Agra; and there is generally a cool breeze blowing. Up to the 15th April one can go about here without protection from the sun, but after that it is not healthy for Europeans until November.—Delhi Gazette.

FYZABAD, March 25.—There is very little of any importance to be communicated to you from this station. Everything here seems to be sinking into a dull monotony and lifelessness and nothing except wind, dust, and heat can be seen as showing any signs of stir and activity. For the last two days a strong north-western wind has been incessantly blowing, accompanied by clouds of dust, which has so thickly environed the atmosphere that even sometimes the glorious splendour of the sun is but dimly perceived through its opacity. The heat is daily becoming insufferable, and already we have had a few instances of that dire epidemic, which some people say you European gentlemen brought along with you into this country, which has swept away some sixteen natives from Maharajunge to that unknown region from whose bourne no traveller returns. Rajah Man Singh, I hear, has lately established a magisterial cutchery of his own in his palace at Shahgunge, after the fashion of our Moffusil courts, where he sits twice in the course of a day to hear causes and to decide them. A certain moonshee of his establishment informed me that he (the rajah) is empowered to award punishment to criminals to the extent of forty lashes, and imprisonment not exceeding eighteen calendar months. He further informed me that his highness, usually, after bathing and performing his religious exercises at ten o'clock in the morning, takes his magisterial seat for an hour and a half, or until he is called to dinner, which he generally eats at about twelve o'clock, noon. After dinner his highness repairs to rest, or his customary nap, as is usual with our Eastern potentates, which takes some two or three hours at the most, and when he rises at three or four, he again betakes himself to his magisterial guddee, where he continues until it becomes dark and then the office is closed. His official establishment, I mean his magisterial cutchery, contains at present some nine or ten persons with a Sheristadar at its head, who sits near his highness and reads and explains the plaints, &c. The outward show and appearance of his highness's cutchery, with the exception of a table and chair, for he sits upon a downy mattress reclining against a large takeeah, exactly resemble a deputy-commissioner's office. Those who have seen him try cases, speak very highly of the depth and sharpness of his understanding, and the quickness and facility with which he decides them; but how far these men are right in their assertions I cannot say, although they may sound good to our hearing. From the ryots I have not been able yet to correctly glean anything.—Delhi Gazette.

LUCKNOW, 31st March.—The weather has become very warm within the past few days. Sudden change is not likely to add to the sanitary condition of the place. Our judicial commissioner left this evening for Calcutta, on six months leave; it is not known exactly who succeeds him, although rumour has many names on his list; the most likely candidate is stated to be Colonel Barrow, our most popular commissioner. For the present the chief commissioner conducts the duties of the judicial commissioner's office, besides his own. This was the arrangement which answered so well when the judicial commissioner was on leave last year.

BUXAR, March 28.—The European force with the guns, four 12-pounder howitzers, and a large magazine of shot, shell, powder, and rifle ammunition, are to be withdrawn. The two companies H.M.'s 6th foot will proceed to Barrackpore to join regimental head-quarters, being replaced by a company of the 1st Bengal police battalion. The 3rd Indian Naval Brigade and the detachment (200) 3rd Sikh cavalry were detached from the command some time since, the former on disbandment proceeding to Calcutta in November last, and the latter to head-quarters, Segowlie, in January. The detachment H.M.'s 6th foot cannot regret leaving Buxar, as within a year it has lost ten men, and invalided one captain to England, and twenty-one rank and file to Darjeeling, whilst the remainder are more or less sadly debilitated, owing to the fatal epidemic which has swept through Behar. On the departure of the 3rd naval brigade upwards of one half were hors de combat from fever, and the chaste obelisk which these gallant, well-conducted fellows raised in generous sympathy to the memory of their lost shipmates, and which adorns the Buxar burial ground, tells too truly how even the brigade suffered; whilst the row of white well-tented tombs in the small and neatly filled military cemetery speaks, though silently, yet eloquently, for the impulse which moved their soldier comrades in their remembrance of the departed.

EDITORIAL CHANGES.—Mr. Forbes, late editor of the Dacca News, to be editor of the Bengal Hurkaru, vice Mr. Smith, retired. Mr. Winter, late sub-editor of the Madras Times, to be editor of the North-West Gazette, vice Mr. Strafford, de-throned. Mr. Gordon, late editor of the Mofussilite, to be editor of the New Times, vice Mr. Moore, ostracized. These are some of the new editorial movements mentioned by the Oudh Gazette. No notice is taken, however, of Mr. Norton's secession from the Indian Statesman, or the contemplated resignation of the editor of the Bombay Times and Standard.

GHAZREPOOR, March 30.—A tremendous fire occurred here by accident on the 27th instant, whereby two entire barracks of her Majesty's 37th Regiment were destroyed in five minutes. No lives were lost, but the larger number of four companies have lost everything. So rapid was the fire and so fierce was the westerly wind that it was hardly possible to save anything. Lots of rifles have been burnt. When once the fire caught the roof it spread like lightning, ran over to the next barrack, then across to a small bungalow many hundred yards off, where temporarily the magazine had been stored, but which fortunately and Providentially was removed, just in time, as the roof was in a blaze ere the last bag of powder was removed. The third barrack was saved by the head-strong courage of some of the soldiers, who tore off one of the skylights, and thus shut up the fire. Two or three Jews' shops would be a great catch, as old clothes are much wanted, the clothes on the soldiers' backs being their all in all. The flames were fearful, and drove most furiously. It was dinner time, which made matters worse for the non-commissioned officers, as they had to run in a scorching blast to save what they could; but it was all gone in a moment. The burnt-out men are in tents, as the 77th come here from Dehree, and occupy the spare room, and it must be trying and piping times for them. An incendiary fire occurred in the wash-house the night following the great blaze. Cholera has since carried off several men, as also the quarter-master (Mr. Crutchley) of the regiment. Now that the hot winds are raging, and sickness of every description commencing, it is to be hoped that European troops will no longer be moved about the country.

STRANGE, IF TRUE.—Lord Canning, we are informed by the Englishman, presented the sum of Rs. 5,000 to the poor dependent on the Sikh Temple, on the occasion of his visit to Umritsur. His lordship was unfortunate in his donations. But the strangest part of the story is, that after the whole had been distributed, it was ordered that the money should be applied to some public work in the town, and the whole Rs. 5,000 was re-collected from the recipients in sums of 4 and 8 annas, and 1 rupee, to their great disgust and disappointment. They may have blessed the giver in the first instance, what they did when they had to go through the disagreeable process of refunding we shall leave our readers to guess.

LAHORE, March 24.—There has been a great dearth of news at Lahore for some time past, but we have just been roused from our apathy by the news of a border raid on the Derajat frontier by the Wuzerees. The actual extent of the affray is not yet ascertained, but they have received a smart repulse from the small force of cavalry stationed at the frontier post of Dehra Ishmael Khan. It is, however, contemplated to teach them a severe lesson, and a force is being collected for that purpose, and we doubt not that General Chamberlain will give equally as good an account of them as he did of the tribe to which the murderers of Captain Meham belonged. These border tribes keep the troops on our frontier continually on the alert; they are always watching for opportunities to commit raids, to carry devastation into the country of tribes enemies to themselves, or under the protection of British rule. We are particularly fortunate in having such a man as General Chamberlain in command of the frontier; a man of indomitable courage and energy, thoroughly up to his work, and idolized by the troops he commands. He is about to proceed on furlough to England shortly, and will be succeeded in the command by Colonel Lumsden, C.B., who returned from Afghanistan about twelve months ago, whither he had been deputed on a political mission of importance. His succession to the command of the Punjab Irregular force is a happy and judicious choice.—Lahore Chronicle.

A NOTIFICATION in the Calcutta Gazette of March 24th is of great importance. It naturally follows upon the measure of an income-tax, and into the effect that the income derivable from Government loans must pay income-tax, whether the notes are enfaced and interest payable in England by bills on Calcutta or not. The notification declares, that in future all promissory notes presented for enfacement shall be enfaced as follows:—Interest, subject to deduction of Indian income-tax, payable in London by draft on Calcutta (or Madras, as the case may be). Explanations are also given on the subject of the promissory notes already issued with coupons; in future the coupons will bear a notice to the same effect as the enfacement above.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—The Secretary of State has ruled that henceforth it must be made imperative on all Europeans appointed to the educational department to pass within a given period an examination which shall prove that they possess a sufficient colloquial knowledge of the vernacular language of the district in which they are employed, failing which their services will be dispensed with. All persons now employed in the department are to be required to satisfy the director of public instruction within a given period that they possess such a knowledge. The pecuniary rewards will be given only for highly distinguished acquirements in the native languages. Ordinary colloquial acquaintance with them is considered as indispensably necessary to the efficient performance of their duties by those who are employed in the department of education, and will be insisted upon by Government.

AURUNGBAD, March 21.—I regret much I have to report to you that about 8 o'clock this morning one of the Buckrabad servants came here and reported that yesterday afternoon some two or three hundred men from the Kalapanee division went across the Ganges to the Malda side, forced the ryots of some villages on that side to join them, and then in a body attacked and plundered Buckrabad factory. What the extent of the damage done is I have not yet been able to ascertain, or what has become of the rest of the servants, one of whom only we have just heard has found his way to Aimaree factory. I have written to the Malda magistrate on the subject, and sent the man who brought me the report in to him to give his deposition. Mr. Farrell, the assistant magistrate at Jungypore, writes me that immediately his court amlah arrive from Berhampore he will proceed to Kalapanee and try to restore order. Not anticipating such an attack on the other side of the Ganges, I had Mr. Rich with me, assisting in trying to get matters quieted in the Kalapanee division. He and Mr. Gordon accompanied me here yesterday from Aimaree. P. S.—Reports have just this moment come in that a serious affray has taken place at Banyagram factory, in which lives have been lost. This I think may be probable, as several thousand men from this quarter went off to join the Banyagram ryots in an attack on that factory. However, this report requires confirmation, and though I believe it, it will be as well not to mention it till you hear more about it, in case it may prove false.—March 22.—The report received and wrote you of last evening as to the affray in Banyagram factory is quite true; two dead bodies have just past this on hackeries for Berhampore from the scene of action, and the peon in charge reports five wounded, but likely to recover. It is fortunate the attack was repulsed, otherwise the factory would have been sacked, and every soul in it murdered. To-day I have received information that the party who attacked Buckrabad either carried off or destroyed some of the factory books and records, and sacked Mr. Rich's bungalow, destroying such articles as could not be removed; but as many of the perpetrators are known it is to be hoped an example will be made of them.—Englishman.

KITE-FLYING.—The noble and highly fashionable pastime of archery is likely to have a rival. This sport, as every one knows, is a favourite one with the ladies, solely on account of the out-of-door exercise. This is an advantage which the gentlemen will be able to enjoy in the pastime about to be introduced. We (Delhi Gazette) understand that in a large station in the North-west a "kite-flying" club is to be set on foot. The advantages of kite-flying are obvious. Like archery, it will be pursued solely for the sake of these advantages. It will be necessary to keep the body erect, to hold the head well back, the chest out, &c., a posture and habit of body invaluable to a military man. Some of our enterprising vendors of "Europe goods" are getting out, we understand, a large consignment of "Europe" kites and "Europe" twine, and the ladies, as they assemble at their archery in the morning, will soon have the pleasure of seeing the gentlemen, headed by the brigadier of the station, repairing to the parade ground to enjoy the healthful and manly exercise of "kite-flying."

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.—Tidings have reached us of the occurrence of a melancholy event at Dowlaishweram. On Saturday the 24th March, the assistant in charge of the electric telegraph office at that station, a European youth, went out on a shooting excursion accompanied by one of his subordinates. A few miles from camp they fell in with a couple of toddy-drawers, and requested a supply which was immediately furnished, and some friendly conversation appears to have taken place between the parties, one of the natives having been given some cheroots. Unfortunately however the telegraph assistant had not sufficient coin with him to pay for the toddy, and requested the men to accompany him to Dowlaishweram, where they would be paid the whole sum claimed—only four annas. Hereupon one of the men got into a great rage and abused the European roundly, insisting upon being paid upon the spot. In vain did the two youths offer all the money they had with them, and repeat their invitation to their importunate creditor to go with them to camp. Nothing would satisfy the ryot but immediate payment, and he stepped up to the assistant, holding up a large knife as if going to strike him; he was pushed off by the youngster, who seized a revolving rifle he had previously placed on the ground, and seeing that the man appeared bent on cutting him down, turned and ran, as he believed, for his life, pursued by the infuriated and armed toddy drawer. On finding himself blown, and that the native was nearing him, he halted, turned round, and told the man to keep off. The warning was unheeded, and the youth fired, but over the man. This had the effect of stopping him for a little, and he retreated a few yards, when he was seized by some women, from whom however he soon extricated himself and again went in chase of the telegraph officer, who, being unable to run, was speedily overtaken. Thinking now that it was all up with him, and seeing the large blade gleaming over him, in sheer desperation and self-defence he pulled the trigger, without even raising the rifle higher than his hip—but the mischief was done—the ball went through the native, who at once fell a corpse. On reaching Dowlaisweram, the unfortunate young man immediately communicated what had occurred to the judge of Rajahmundry. He is represented as being greatly distressed at the untoward event, and maintains that nothing but what he conceived and believed to be the most urgent necessity, and the only means of saving his own life, would have induced him to imbrue his hands in a fellow creature's blood.—Daily Times.

THE EMBARKATION OF H. M.'s 1st Dragoon Guards for China has been suspended, under telegraphic orders from Calcutta, and their destination is now uncertain.

ECONOMY.—All the silver plate belonging to Government House has been sent to the Mint to be melted down for the benefit of the State, its place at the viceregal residence being supplied by an equally good-looking but less valuable metal.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE EXAMINATION threatens to be a very formidable affair, upwards of two thousand candidates having come forward in Madras alone. The Banqueting-hall, College-hall, and Patcheappah's-hall have already been engaged for the accommodation of the candidates, but it is not at all unlikely that more will be required for the purpose.

MYSORE.—We (Daily Times) understand that native inhabitants of Mysore and Bangalore are so averse to the transfer from the Supreme to the Madras Government of the charge of the Mysore country, that they have addressed a petition to the Governor-general earnestly deprecating the arrangement. The petition has been forwarded by electric telegraph at a cost of five hundred rupees contributed by the petitioners. The Rajah himself, it is understood, considers the new arrangement a breach of the treaty. In connection with this subject we may mention that Sir Charles Trevelyan requested Sir Mark Cubbon to continue in the office of Commissioner, but Sir Mark expressed his regret that he could not comply with the Governor's wish. Previous to making over charge, however, of his office, he suggested that it would be desirable that Sir Charles should visit Bangalore and hold a conference with him in regard to the affairs of Mysore.

CAPTAIN GRIFFIN.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has at last complied with Captain Griffin's request, who has obtained a trial by Court Martial on the notorious beer case. Subjoined is the charge:—"Draft of Charge.—Captain John George Benjamin Griffin, of her Majesty's 3rd Regiment of Madras European Infantry, placed in arrest on the following charge: With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Allahabad on or about the 3rd of August, 1859, with intent to defraud Mr. R. Carr, wine merchant of that place, written and sent to him a letter addressed to Messrs. Carr, & Co., written in a feigned hand, and bearing the fictitious signature of C. J. Erskine, Captain, 7th Light Cavalry, in which he requested the supply of one dozen of beer and one dozen of brandy, and which said beer and brandy were supplied in accordance with such request; he, Captain Griffin, well knowing that the said letter was altogether fictitious, forged, and counterfeit. (True copy.) (Signed) J. HUDSON, Capt., Major of Brigade. Allahabad, March 24th, 1860.

TRIAL AND CONVICTION OF THE RANA OF NUGGUR PARKUR AND HIS ACCOMPLICES.—The Rana of Nuggur Parkur, Kurrungee, and his accomplices, Doojoo, Prime Minister, Ooda Singh, Khana, and Lukderr, were arraigned on the 12th March before J. Gibbs, esq., special commissioner for trials in Nuggur Parkur, on charges of treason and murder. The trial was brought to a close on the 15th, and ended in the conviction of the whole of the prisoners, who were sentenced as follows:—The Rana to fourteen years' simple imprisonment; his Minister to the same period of incarceration with hard labour; Oodah Singh and Khana to ten years, and Lukdeer to eight years' imprisonment with hard labour. The prisoners are being brought down to Kurrachee under a strong escort of Major Johnstone's Beloochees.

OFFICIAL COMPLIMENTS.—The following is Sir Hugh Rose's last division order, on giving over the command of the Poona division of the army pro tem. to Brigadier Hobson:—Extract from division orders, by the Lieut.-general commanding P.D.A. "Head-quarters, Mahabeshwur, 28th March, 1860. Lieut.-general Sir Hugh Rose, on giving up the command of the Poona division of the army, thanks, sincerely, Major Wood, assistant adjutant general; Captain Macdonald, assistant quarter-master general; and Major Sandwith, deputy judge advocate general; for the zeal and ability with which they have executed their respective duties, and for the thorough goodwill with which they have assisted him in all matters, whether relating to the discipline, comfort, or movements of troops. It is superfluous to say that Sir Hugh Rose is grateful to Superintending Surgeon Stovell—so constant and successful have been all his efforts in aid of the sick. The Lieutenant-General has invariably consulted Doctor Stovell on all matters relating to the health of the troops, and he has always given him the best and most useful advice. Captain Hawkins, the commissary of ordnance, has on every occasion efficiently carried out the instructions of the Lieutenant-General. The Assistant Commissary-General, and Military Paymaster, have served but only a short time with the division, but long enough to give proofs of their fitness for their respective posts. Staff-Surgeon Larkins, during the whole time the Lieutenant-General commanded the division, has discharged his duties entirely to Sir Hugh Rose's satisfaction. Brigadier Hobson, commanding at Ahmednuggur, as next senior officer, will, until further orders, assume command of the division. All returns and correspondence will, as heretofore, be forwarded to Mahabeshwur. By order, H. H. A. Wood, Major, Assistant Adjutant General, P.D.A."

MAJOR B. K. FINNIMORE, of the artillery, is appointed agent for gunpowder and superintendent of the percussion cap manufactory.

THE MEMORIAL WINDOW to perpetuate the remembrance of the late Rev. Philip Anderson has just been erected in St. John's Church, Colaba, to which it forms a pleasing ornament, while it serves as a most appropriate monument to the worth and devotion of the lamented deceased.

BROACH, April 7.—Cholera has been for the last week or so raging most fearfully in the town of Broach and the surrounding districts. The dire scourge has carried off hundreds of souls within this short space of time. Mr. Denny, assistant engineer of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, died this day week of cholera. The railway works on the Nurbudda iron bridge, as well as in the districts round Broach, have been deserted by workmen through fear of being attacked by the epidemic. The chief engineer, Mr. Forde, with his assistants, has sought refuge in Baroda. We are glad to hear that Dr. Glen, the civil surgeon, is doing his best in affording prompt medical aid to those who are unfortunately attacked by the disease. He deserves the best thanks of the community of Broach. Mr. Oliphant, the acting magistrate of Broach, has, in conjunction with the civil surgeon, placed five Parsees at the several gates with cholera mixture, and instructions to treat such patients as needed their assistance. The Surat districts are comparatively healthy, though the weather is sultry and hot.

MR. GEDDES, the marshal of the county jail, being about to retire from his situation, the appointment has been offered to Mr. Charles Lake, secretary of the Byculla club, and Mr. Lake has accepted the place.

MAJOR C. DOUGLAS has been appointed deputy superintendent of electric telegraphs in India.

DIVISIONAL COMMANDS.—Consequent on Sir H. Rase, G.C.B., having assumed the command of the army, Brigadier-gen. J. Hale has been transferred from the command of the Scinde to that of the Poona division of the army. Major-general Cunningham, C.B., appointed to the staff of the army, has been posted to the Scinde division.

BOMBAY WIT.

In Worcestershire there is a sauce
Would charm the Furies;
But in Bombay there is a Sausse
Would starve the juries.

MESSRS. ADAMSON AND CLOWSER, who have carried on the works on the Bore Ghaut Incline from their commencement, and who have long been recognised as the most experienced practical engineers in the railway department in this presidency, have, we are glad to learn, transferred their services from the G. I. P. Railway Company, to the executors of the late Mr. Solomon Tredwell, and have entered into an agreement to complete this great work. Messrs. West and Tate succeed Messrs. Adamson and Clowser, as engineers for the railway company.

THE LATE MR. MANSON.—The body of the late lamented Mr. C. J. Manson, acting political agent, Southern Maratha country, who was surprised by the chief of Nurgood, while encamped in the Ramdroog estate and barbarously murdered on the 29th May, 1859, was brought to Bombay by rail on Sunday, April 10, and interred the next day in the family vault at the Girgaum burial-ground.

BARODA, April 3.—The Rewa Kanta field force is broken up; the dispute between the Raja of Nandode and the rebel Bheel Dawer is satisfactorily settled at present. The detachment of the 16th N. I. left Omerpara some time ago, and those of the 2nd extra battalion N. I. and the two guns at Lhowa return to Baroda to-morrow.

MR. M. R. WESTROFF, barrister-at-law, has been appointed Government Remembrancer for legal affairs, during the absence of Mr. J. Lowndes, proceeding to Europe on sick leave for one year.

MR. CHARLES BEYTS, a master in the Elphinstone Institution, has been offered the head mastership of the Fort proprietary school. No better selection could be made.

Examinations for the Uncovenanted Civil Service.

Fort St. George, March 30, 1860.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India is published for general information:—

Public. No. 7.

H.E. the Hon. the Gov. in Council, Fort St. George.—Sir, Para. 1. I have considered in council your letter, dated Oct. 4, 1859, No. 70, in this department.

2. The report on the examination in May last of candidates for the uncovenanted civil service, transmitted with your letter is satisfactory and encouraging. The number of applicants who succeeded on this occasion to pass the required tests will at once have afforded to the heads of offices the opportunity of selecting for public employment persons of improved education, and, it may be hoped, qualified in other respects for the duties they may have to perform.

8. The free and judicious exercise of the power confided to these gentlemen cannot fail to give an impetus to education, and thus, by elevating the general character of the subordinate ranks of the service, tend to promote its efficiency.

4. I approve the alteration in the rules of March 4, 1858, as suggested in your order of Sept. 20, 1859.

I have, &c., C. WOOD.

India Office, London, Feb. 20, 1860.
By order, T. PYCHOFF, chief sec.

Pay of Officers of the Sappers and Miners.

Fort St. George, March 22.—No. 116.—The Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to cancel the rule in para. 2, head "Sappers and Miners," Section XII., of the Pay and Audit Regulations, and to direct the publication of the following rules:—

2. Officers attached to the corps of Sappers and Miners shall, when permanently in command of a company, draw as extra remuneration Rupees (100) one hundred per mensem, under all circumstances, while present with the company or any part of it, whether at head quarters of the corps or on detachment in the field.

3. In future no officer shall be placed permanently in command of a company of sappers until he shall have passed an examination in field engineering, embracing the subjects marginally noted*, and will also be expected to have some general knowledge of permanent fortifications.

4. Certificates of qualifications will be granted by the comdt. of the corps, who, in notifying the same for the information and approval of H.E. the C. in C., will forward the examination papers to the adjt. gen. of the army.

5. The names of all officers obtaining such certificates (with date of examination), will be notified in the Government Gazette, and the honorary mark, "M.E." (Military Engineer) will be affixed to their names in the Army List.

6. It is to be understood that this examination in no way cancels the certificate in surveying required by the general regulations for all sapper officers, 12 months after their appointment to do duty with the corps; and if after a further interval of 6 months an officer shall not have qualified also in military field engineering, he will, on recommendation of the commandant, be remanded to his regt.

7. The adjt. and qmtr. are to be considered, in common with other officers of the corps, liable to examination and entitled to all corresponding advantages, but with the understanding that they shall not be appointed to the actual command of a company to the prejudice of any other qualified officer at head quarters, who may be available for the duty.

8. The allowance is claimable for only one company.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, April 27.

The Queen having been graciously pleased, by a Warrant under her Royal Sign Manual, bearing date the 13th of Dec., 1858, to declare that non-military persons, who, as volunteers, have borne arms against the mutineers, both at Lucknow and elsewhere, during the late operations in India, shall be considered as eligible to receive the decoration of the Victoria Cross, her Majesty has accordingly been pleased to signify her intention to confer this high distinction on the undermentioned gentleman:—

Indian Naval Brigade.—Mr. G. B. Chicken, for great gallantry on the 27th Sept., 1858, at Sahjee, near Peroo, in having charged into the middle of a considerable number of the rebels, who were preparing to rally and open fire upon the scattered pursuers. They were surrounded on all sides, but, fighting desperately, Mr. Chicken succeeded in killing five before he was cut down himself. He would have been cut to pieces had not some of the men of the 1st Bengal police and 3rd Sikh irregular cavalry dashed into the crowd to his rescue, and routed it, after killing several of the enemy.

WAR OFFICE, May 1.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned soldier, whose claim to the same has been submitted to her Majesty's approval, on account of an act of bravery performed by him in India, as recorded against his name, viz.:—

86th Regiment (now of the 56th Regiment).—Private James Pearson, for having gallantly attacked a number of armed rebels, on the occasion of the storming of Jhansi, on the 3rd of April, 1858, one of whom he killed, and bayoneted two others; he was himself wounded in the attack. Also, for having brought in, at Calpee, under a heavy fire, Private Michael Burns, who afterwards died of his wounds.

THE LATE SIR HENRY HAVELOCK.—Early in the autumn a monument in honour of the Indian hero, Havelock, will be publicly inaugurated at Sunderland. His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief will be invited on the occasion, and hopes are entertained that Lord Clyde will also be present.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, May 5, 1860.

THE OUTRAGE AT CAIRO.

A VERY disgraceful outrage is stated to have been committed by a party of Englishmen in the Marble Mosque at Cairo. Some twenty overland passengers, of whom two are said to have been ladies, entered the Mosque while certain solemnities of the Mahomedan religion were being performed in the presence of the Viceroy and the chief men of the city. These Curieux Impertinents are described as being under the influence of what Mr. Swiveller emphatically designates as "the rosy," and their conduct appears to have been exceedingly scandalous. That they were not subjected to summary chastisement on the spot was as creditable to the Egyptian authorities as the whole proceeding was disgraceful to our own countrymen. Now, certain metropolitan journals with an extensive circulation have seized upon this opportunity of abusing and vilipending the members of the Indian Services, who—say these interpreters of public opinion—entertain an ineradicable idea that all orientals are "niggers," and born to be "walloped." Sometimes it suits them to go on the other tack, and to represent the "old Indians," at least, as too partial to the natives, and to ascribe the late mutinies to the excessive indulgence shown to the sepoys. But in the present instance there is as yet no proof that the offenders belonged to the Indian Service at all. The Australian passengers were passing through Cairo at the same time as those for Bombay, and the escapade certainly bears the stamp of colonial coarseness rather than of military licence. Besides, were there among the passengers no clerks or railway officials or artisans, or other persons unconnected with the Services? These points ought assuredly to have been ascertained before the journalists in question permitted themselves the use of strong and abusive language, whereas all that is really known of the offenders is derived from a vague expression in the Consul-General's letter about boys just let loose from school. Are these, perchance, some of the competitive gentlemen who are to do so much more for India than those sent out on the old system, and who, from their infancy, were taught to take an interest in their fellow-subjects, however swarthy their complexion? Be this as it may, such scenes must not be allowed to recur, nor need there be any difficulty in their prevention. All that is required is to appoint some one in charge of the passengers by each mail to keep them in check during the transit through Egypt, and with power to bring any individual guilty of riotous conduct before the Consul-General, who is already invested with authority to punish such evil-doers. The senior passengers might also be expected to exercise a salutary influence over their young and thoughtless companions.

THE TANJORE RAJ AND THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

It was in the year 1771 that the Madras Government, being desirous to gratify a doubtful ally, made war upon the State of Tanjore, took its Rajah prisoner, and bestowed his territories on the Nawab of the Carnatic. The Court of Directors, however, disapproved of this magnanimous proceeding, and instructed the new Governor, Lord Pigot, to restore the Rajah—under certain conditions. Though they condemned the unjustifiable conduct of their servants, they were still quite willing to turn it to good account, and to benefit by a crime which they affected to condemn. The independence of the Court of Tanjore was, nevertheless, placed beyond a doubt, and more than one treaty of alliance was subsequently concluded with the reigning Rajah on terms of equality. Towards the close of the eighteenth century the British Government was invited to arbitrate between two conflicting claims to the "musnud." Having lost all his legitimate children, Rajah Tooljajee bequeathed his dominions to his adopted son Surfojee, under the tutelage of his uncle, Ameer Singh. But the latter was by no means satisfied with the name and dignity of Regent, and aspired to the full fruition of regal power. He therefore appealed to the British Government, as the least likely to understand the true merits of the question, and therefore the more prompt to pass judgment and the more resolved to enforce its decision. Accordingly, with the best intentions in the world, they consulted certain native expounders of the Hindoo law of succession as to whether the rightful heir of the deceased was his brother or his adopted son. These pundits, however, had been tampered with by Ameer Singh, in whose favour they pronounced without hesitation, and the pretender was placed upon the throne. Assuming the propriety, or expediency, of the British Government undertaking to adjudicate upon a matter so entirely beyond their knowledge that they were obliged to submit it to natives, we still find two palpable errors in our path. In the first place, Ameer Singh, being himself illegitimate, could have no title whatever to the throne; and, secondly, an adopted son enjoys, by the Hindoo law, all the rights and privileges of a male heir born in lawful wedlock. The Government, however, acted honestly according to their lights; and while recognising the claims of Ameer Singh they earnestly demanded for the disinherited prince a suitable and handsome maintenance. Their recommendation was graciously received, but of course disregarded; and the unfortunate child was subjected to contumely and neglect. When this circumstance became known, the Governor of Madras took upon himself to interfere with the internal administration of an independent principality, and called upon Ameer Singh to treat his nephew by adoption with greater kindness and humanity. This remonstrance being naturally resented, the British Government took the wholly unjustifiable step of sending an armed force to Tanjore, and ultimately removed the young prince to Madras, together with the widows of the deceased Rajah. The latter, following up the advantage they had gained, now openly accused the pundits of having been bribed by Ameer Singh, and demanded a fresh investigation of the relative claims of the two aspirants to the Raj. A new and more formal examination was accordingly instituted, which resulted in the cancelment of the former judgment and the recognition of Surfojee as successor to his adoptive father. Ameer Singh was therefore dethroned, and the boy-prince reigned in his stead. But the British Government were not disposed to do good by halves. Having restored the rightful heir to his possessions, they were suddenly inspired with quite a paternal interest in the welfare of his subjects as well as of himself. No doubt great abuses may have crept in during the mal-administration of Ameer Singh, but it does not appear that the interference of the British was sought by either the wrong-doers or their victims. Might, however, is a great leveller of obstacles, and easily obliterates too nice or otherwise inconvenient distinctions. In those days the virtues of universal suffrage were unknown, or, doubtless, the people of Tanjore would have been invited to say "Yes" or "No" to their annexation to the Company's dominions. In the absence of that modern specific a mild coercion was brought to bear upon the somewhat weak nature of Rajah Surfojee, until he consented to a treaty with the East India Company, "whereby he handed over to their administration his entire kingdom with the exception of a few villages which he kept for his own dignity and that of the ladies of his family, together with the fort in which was situated his royal palace. The Company"—continues Mr. Norton—"was to collect the revenues of the country, the accounts of which were to be open to the inspection of the Rajah, and the Company undertook to pay him that portion of his revenues annually which he reserved to himself and his successors." The Rajah's income was fixed at one lakh of Star Pagodas, as "the first charge payable from the net revenue of Tanjore," together with one-fifth of the balance remaining after deducting all charges of collection, &c., &c. The Rajah was thus formally recognised as an independent and paramount sovereign, with the East India Company acting as his Dewan. Instead of handing over to him an uncertain and varying surplus they compounded by a fixed payment, together with a percentage on whatever moneys might remain in their hands after liquidating all expenses of collection and administration. They were, in short, the Rajah's servants, but, like other Mayors of the Palace, they abused their power and opportunities, and did a great wrong to the ruler in whose name alone they exercised any authority in the territories of Tanjore.

Surfojee was succeeded in the Raj by his only son, Seevajee, who died in 1855, leaving two daughters, but no male issue. The elder of the two princesses was disqualified by ill health from succeeding to what the Court of Directors, in their despatch of the 16th of April, 1856, coolly describe as a "titular dignity"—and, in truth, through their usurpation, that was nearly all that survived of the Tanjore Raj. The younger princess was then only eleven years of age, and consequently a minor, but even minors may succeed to a merely "titular dignity," and, in any case, her father's chief widow was clearly entitled to the regency. The British Government, however, was now strong enough to make might synonymous with right, and, in defiance of precedent, declared that by the Hindoo law a female could not succeed to the Raj, which therefore became extinct. This interpretation of the law was as arbitrary and erroneous as that which years before had placed Ameer Singh upon the throne, to the prejudice of the lawful heir, Surfojee; and if justice is to be obtained from the British Crown must be quashed with equal honesty but far greater promptitude.

The Government, moreover, were not only guilty of injustice, but also of cruelty and meanness. Not content with laying their hands on the "titular dignity," they seized upon the jewels, horses, elephants, carriages, armoury, furniture, library, and dresses of the deceased Rajah, on the plea that "an absolute sovereign" can have no private property. "Such trumpery articles as the children's toys, marbles, squirts, pins, and needles, of the value of a few annas," were likewise pounced upon as the property of the State, and therefore lawfully escheated to the East India Company, as the ultimus hæres of Rajah Seevajee. But on what grounds does the Rajah's Dewan claim to be his heir? Is the steward entitled to succeed to the estate he manages, on the death of its owner without male issue? Is that the Hindoo law of succession? If not, then has a gross act of spoliation been committed—a wholesale robbery attended with both fraud and violence. The violence is patent—the fraud is in this wise. A certain number of villages and gardens were settled by Rajah Seevajee upon his mother—himself acting as her trustee—and the accounts were kept "in a distinct department of the palace accounts, under a separate manager, and a copy of the accounts, headed 'Avoo Sahiba's pin-money gardens,' annually handed in to the collector by the officers of the Rajah." On the Rajah's decease the occupants of these and all other villages and gardens directly administered by himself without the intervention of the Company were summarily ejected, though promised restitution on producing their titles. No period of occupation, however, was held to constitute a title, and, so far as the aged Avoo Sahiba was concerned, no inquiry was permitted. As agent for the venerable princess, Mr. Norton repeatedly demanded to be heard in proof of her claims, but was always put off on one pretence or another—the Government having no intention of abiding by their original promises and professions.

Acting on Mr. Norton's advice, H. H. Kamachi Bhayee, the late Rajah's senior widow, appealed to the Supreme Court of Madras to uphold her title "to the private and particular estate and effects of her deceased husband, subject to the payment of his debts, &c.," and those learned judges—Sir Christopher Rawlinson and Sir Henry Davison—declared themselves satisfied that the late Rajah did die "possessed of private and self-acquired property, both real and personal," and that the plaintiff, as his senior and first-married widow, was entitled to succeed to the same. An injunction was accordingly issued, and for a brief space the act of spoliation was suspended. The Company, however, appealed to the Privy Council, when the decree of the Madras judges was reversed, not on any grounds of equity, but simply because no Municipal Court could take cognisance of an act of State. But the Company were victors without glory. They won the battle, but at the sacrifice of their honour. All else was gained—honour alone was lost. Far better, far more tolerable would it have been to be compelled to restore the pins and needles of the Tanjore ladies than be permitted to retain them under the withering censure cast upon their conduct by Lord Kingsdown, speaking in the name of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council:—

"It is extremely difficult"—said his lordship—"to discover in these papers any ground of legal right, on the part of the East India Company, or of the Crown of Great Britain, to the possession of this Raj, or of any part of the property of the Rajah on his death; and, indeed, the seizure was denounced by the Attorney-general (who, from circumstances explained to us at the hearing, appeared as counsel for the respondents, and not in his official character for the appellants,) as a most violent and unjustifiable measure. The Rajah was an independent Sovereign of territories undoubtedly minute, and bound by treaties to a powerful neighbour, which left him, practically, little power of free action; but he did not hold his territory, such as it was, as a fief of the British Crown, or of the East India Company; nor does there appear to have been any pretence for claiming it, on the death of the Rajah without a son, by any legal title either as an escheat or as bona vacantia."

Disregarding this severe animadversion from the highest authority in the British empire, Sir Charles Trevelyan—the model governor, Indophilus, "the philanthropic denouncer of 'the high-handed insolence of a dominant race'"—pretends to consider this judgment as leaving the Government at liberty, without further interference on the part of the Supreme Court at Madras, to carry out those arrangements and inquiries which they were conducting when checked by the interposition of that Court. Undoubtedly, if attention is to be paid only to the letter, and none to the spirit of this judgment, but the frame of mind is little to be envied or respected which can set at naught the opinion so clearly expressed by Lord Kingsdown. A pension of £1,200 a year has therefore been offered to the senior widow, and of £960 to each of the junior widows, with a slight addition to the latter if they will return to the Marathee country, whence they originally came. They have also been requested to select any favourite cows they might wish to retain. But these ladies are more magnanimous than Sir Charles—that self-styled friend of the Indian—and, firmly declining to accept either pension or cow, have commissioned Mr. John Bruce Norton to lay their case before the British public, and, if necessary, before the Queen herself. If the Royal Proclamation on the suppression of the late rebellion be anything more than a string of glittering phrases their appeal cannot be in vain. By no law, custom, or usage, British or Hindoo, has either the Raj escheated to the Crown or the late Rajah's private property become forfeited to his steward. On these points, we feel assured, strict if tardy justice will yet be rendered, but on one other point no redress is unhappily obtainable.

It has been said that Rajah Seevajee at his decease in 1855 left a daughter aged eleven. The tender years of the young princess were no safeguard against Durbar schemings, and British officials appear to have lent themselves with extraordinary infatuation to a palpable and revolting intrigue. For some reason or other, the Durbar desired to marry the poor child to one Suckaram Sahib, the husband of her deceased sister, a man advanced in years and debilitated by vicious indulgences. Her grandmother and the other princesses were strongly opposed to this ill-assorted match, and that for several reasons. Suckaram was not only personally objectionable on account of his dissolute character, but, having been married to one daughter of a Rajah of Tanjore, he was not, according to the custom of the family, eligible a second time: in fact, this marriage had been expressly prohibited by the late Rajah. Moreover, it is contrary to Hindoo law and usage for any infant to select her own husband while under the care of guardians and relatives, nor indeed has she any right to do anything as of herself. Nevertheless, the British Resident actually sent slave women to the palace to tear the young girl from the arms of her relatives, and placed her in a remote apartment where she could have no intercourse with her family. It is not surprising that, whatever may have been her reluctance in the first instance, she should soon have been taught to profess a desire to be married to the old sinner, Suckaram Sahib, or that she should have been tutored to refuse seeing her relatives. But it can hardly be questioned that the latter had a right to insist upon seeing her—but Sir Charles declares the resolution of Government to protect that young lady in the exercise of her rights. But what were those rights? Has a minor in any country a right to withdraw herself from her own family and select or accept a husband contrary to their known wishes? "The Princess," wrote Sir Charles, on the 17th January last, "is of an age and character to judge for herself, and she has for many months consistently declared her preference for Sukha-Ram Sahib in a manner which leaves no doubt as to the real state of her affections. She has also signified her opinion that intercourse with those ladies of her family who are opposed to her marriage would not at present be attended with advantage; and has declined to see them." And this is the clear-headed Governor who was supposed to understand the native character so thoroughly—did not he himself, at least, say so? Because many years ago he happened to belong to the Bengal Civil Service, Sir Charles appears to imagine that he knows more about India than any other person living, and, by loudly blowing his own trumpet, he succeeded in inducing the home public to take him at his own estimate. Thus far, however, his government of Madras has only been distinguished from that of his predecessors by being more influenced by crotchets and fanciful impulses, occasionally resulting, as in the case of the Tanjore Raj and Ranees, in positive injustice and cruelty—for it was a monstrous and a cruel thing to sanction and encourage the union of the thoughtless young princess with an old worn-out debauchee. That blunder—to use no harsher word—cannot now be remedied, but it is not too late to restore the private property wrested by force from the helpless Ranees, even if for imaginary reasons of high, though certainly not honest, policy it be deemed inadvisable to re-establish the Raj, recognising the senior widow's undoubted right of adoption. It is simply a question of national honour and good faith, and for this reason we have endeavoured to lay the whole case fairly before our readers.

APPOINTMENT OF JAMES RANALD MARTIN, F.R.S., TO THE ORDER OF THE BATH.

The third class of the Order of the Bath, however gracefully bestowed, will be regarded as a tardy, and by no means excessive recognition of the eminent services of a man who, like Mr. Martin, commenced in 1817 and ended in 1840 a career unsurpassed, and rarely equalled, in the medical service of India, and who, since that time up to the present day, has in this country been almost constantly engaged in some labour of general and public usefulness. In the disastrous Burman campaign of 1824-5-6 Mr. Martin served with distinction in a military as well as in his professional capacity, more especially, as testified by the general in command, when there being no commissioned European officer present when the army was engaged near Prome, he most ably and gallantly executed the General's commands in covering the retreat of a detachment of infantry. Mr. Martin's education and tastes had fitted him for what Dr. Farr aptly denominates "the genius for medical topography," and in India he soon found a rich and comparatively untrodden field for the pursuit of his favourite inquiries. His talents, engaging manner, and fine bearing obtained for him the confidence of successive Governors-general, a privilege which he turned to the best advantage for the welfare of the community, and earned for him the enviable gratification of seeing many of his great plans for the sanitary amelioration and benefit not only of Calcutta, but of the whole of India, carried into execution, many of them in the face of strenuous opposition, even from professional boards. It has been well said of Mr. Martin that he attracted to himself an attention and influence never exceeded by any member of the profession of medicine, in a clime where all the operations of nature, of commerce, of legislation, of peace and of war, are conducted on the grandest scale; in the scenes of the splendid triumphs of Clive, Hastings, and Wellesley; amidst a people used to the spectacle of Oriental success. But the services of Mr. Martin do not end here. Besides various memoirs and reports, he is the author of a well-known and classical work "On the Influence of Tropical Climate on European Constitution," which is justly regarded as the text-book of the tropical practitioner. He has ever been the strenuous, and, ultimately, the successful advocate of his medical brethren in India; and his summary of the claims of medical officers of the army and navy to military rewards and distinctions is a most eloquent and convincing appeal to the Government, which contributed largely to the redress of that unjust exclusion from honour under which those officers so long laboured; while in this country he has been a most able and zealous member of various royal commissions, and, on the transference of Indian affairs to the Imperial Government, was appointed, without solicitation of any kind, to the office of examining physician to her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for India, in virtue of which he is also a member of the Senate of the new Medical School for the Army.—Daily News.

MADRAS RAILWAY COMPANY.

The sixteenth report of the directors states that the progress made in the construction of the railway since the directors' last general report, though not altogether equal to their anticipations, has been satisfactory, and will bear a favourable comparison with the results of any previous half-year. The increase of traffic on the opened portion of the line has been, at the same time, very considerable, and the working has been conducted with its accustomed regularity, care, and freedom from accidents. The provision and despatch of materials, stores, and plant for the railway from this country has been going on actively. The total quantity shipped during the past year has amounted to nearly 40,000 tons. The bridges over the Goriattum and Palar rivers having been completed, the main or South-West line was opened on the 16th of January last from Goriattum, which had been for some time its western terminus, to Amboor, a distance of 17 miles; and on the 1st of the following month to Vaniambady, 10 miles farther. Advices of the 13th of March announce a farther opening of 14 miles to Tripatore, as immediately to take place, making the entire distance now open from Madras 137 miles. These extensions have brought the railway into connection with some of the principal roads of the interior, and better communication with the producing districts of Mysore and Salem. The road distance from the railway to the important station of Bangalore has also been materially shortened. From Tripatore westward to Salem little more, according to the chief engineer's report, requires to be done than to finish laying the permanent way, the materials for which can now be advantageously pushed forward. The works on all the districts west of Salem are drawing towards a simultaneous completion about the end of this year. Whether it will be possible to carry forward by that time and lay the rest of the permanent way required there, it is difficult to predict with certainty; but in any case it may be concluded that very little will then remain to be done before opening the railway through from one coast to the other. The length of the Bangalore branch line, as now surveyed and set out, is stated to be 84½ miles, which have been divided into four districts for construction. Great part of the land has been handed over by the Government to our engineers, and the works have been begun in several places. The works on the two first districts of the Bellary or north-west line, are reported to be very forward, and an early opening of eight miles of it, from the Arcunum junction to Tritany, is anticipated. In the course of the year the engineer hopes to open farther to Naggy, and soon after to Curcumbady in the second district. It was mentioned in the last report that under the sanction of Government one-half of the remaining unsubscribed million of the capital authorised for the south-west line was being issued in the form of debentures, convertible into stock of the company. That issue having been completed, and the state of the account requiring it, the board have since proceeded to raise the other half-million in the same manner by the further issue of debentures to that extent, bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum, under the guarantee of the Secretary of State for India in Council. All these debentures are for five years, from the 1st July last. On the completion of this issue, the amount of capital raised under the contract for the main or South-West line will be £4,000,000. The shares of the third extension capital of this contract have been converted, pursuant to the resolutions passed at the last general meeting, into 5 per cent. stock. The results as regards receipts must be considered satisfactory; the total for the six months exceeding by 30½ per cent. those of the previous six months, and by 39¼ per cent. the receipts of the corresponding six months of the previous year. The number of passengers in the six months has risen from 151,300 to 357,757, and the receipts from £10,994, to £14,357 from this branch of traffic. The progress of the goods traffic during the six months has been equally satisfactory. The gross receipts for the last half-year, it appears, have exceeded those of the first half of the year by £8,053, or 33½ per cent., and those of the corresponding half of the previous year by £10,078, or 40½ per cent. The traffic receipts per mile have gradually risen from £30 per month at the first opening of the line in 1856 to nearly £57 per month, an increase of 90 per cent. in the three years. The payments into the Government treasury at Madras on account of net traffic earnings to the 31st of December last, in reduction of interest advances, have amounted to £60,439; to which will fall to be added a further sum payable by capital to revenue on the adjustment of the maintenance charges for the last eighteen months, with some other smaller items. The rolling stock of the railway continues to be maintained in good and efficient order.

BOOKS.

Universal Review. No. XV. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

The first article in the current number of the Universal Review is devoted to a compendious exposition of the chief physical and political features of Chili, the materials being principally derived from American and Spanish sources. The next is a paper of a different stamp, and a very favourable specimen of Dr. Doran's faculty for anecdotal gossip. Under the title of "Notes on Names and Nicknames," the learned Doctor discourses pleasantly on the uses, abuses, and no-uses of individual designations, combining instruction with amusement. Mr. Jeaffreson concludes his tale with considerable force and animation, but leaves it an open question whether Lucy Argentine did actually hasten her brother's death, or was the victim of an hallucination. A very able paper on "Amateur Financiers" is directed against the Liverpool Financial Reform Association, whose astounding mis-statements are clearly and unpitifully exposed. Next on the list we find a particularly entertaining notice of "Kriloff and the Russian Fabulists," from the pen of Mr. Sutherland Edwards, than whom no writer has more sedulously or successfully laboured to make the British public acquainted with the true social position of the Russians at the present day. Many of the fables, now for the first time rendered into English, are really admirable examples of sarcastic humour, and are not to be surpassed in any language. "Nathaniel Hawthorne" forms the subject of one of those searching analytical reviews by which the Universal has been so favourably distinguished from its very first number. The prophetic expositions of Dr. Cumming, Captain Hutton, and other interpreters of dark sayings, are next briefly considered; and the number concludes with a masterly sketch of Mr. Disraeli as a leader of party, which effectually disposes of the carping objections made against that eminent statesman in the Quarterly Review.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No. DXXXV. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

Blackwood has this month two articles on Eastern subjects. The first relates to "War and Progress in China," and is evidently the handiwork of a master craftsman. The necessity of warlike operations is strongly insisted upon, and we are comforted by the assurance that there will be no difficulty in wresting from the Chinese an ample indemnification of all expenses thus incurred. The object of the ensuing campaign should be two-fold. "First, to open up rich regions, populated by Asiatics in a high state of Eastern civilisation, all of whom will become our customers; and secondly, to impress upon an Eastern Court the grand fact that the defeat of the forces of Great Britain, and the slaying and wounding of 450 British subjects, is not an act to be passed over with a tame apology, without indemnity or without guarantee against its recurrence, when perhaps some unfortunate collection of traders shall fall under the wrath of Emperor or Mandarins." These views are enforced with much spirit, and the entire article is well worthy of attentive perusal. The other paper to which we have alluded is contributed by Captain Speke, and describes—perhaps too minutely—that traveller's "Adventures in Somali Land." The Somalis themselves are tolerably familiar to overland tourists, as porters and donkey-boys at Aden, where they are "easily recognised by their singular appearance and boisterous manner, as well as by their cheating and lying propensities, for which they are peculiarly notorious." These Arabs complain of the demoralisation of their tribe since the British occupation of Aden, which they attribute in a great measure "to our weak manner in prosecuting crime, by requiring too accurate evidence before inflicting punishment; saying many a dishonest person escaped the vengeance of law, from the simple fact of there being no eye-witnesses to his crime, although there existed such strong presumptive evidence as to render the accusation proved." It will be observed that Captain Speke is by no means a graceful writer, nor does he evince much judgment in his selection of characteristic topics. His paper, however, possesses the interest which is inseparable from tales of personal adventure.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.
ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

POSSESSES wonderfully nourishing powers for the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning gray, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

On the wrapper of each bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," in two lines.

Sold by A. ROWLAND AND SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

Just published, in 8vo., cloth lettered, price 10s. 6d.,

MEMOIR on the EUFRATES VALLEY ROUTE TO INDIA; with Official Correspondence and Maps.
 By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.

"It is impossible to refer to the Surveys and Reports of General Chesney and his colleagues on the Euphrates, published twenty years ago, without astonishment, that even at that period the British Government and people failed to take immediate steps to avail themselves of its capabilities."—The Times.

"What a glorious thing it would have been," said a writer in the 'Lancet' of August last, "had the Euphrates Valley Railway and the Scinde and Punjab Railway been accomplished facts at the time of the present insurrection."—The Times.
